CLOSE '100 MILLION' SESSION

U. S. SMOTHERS BRITISH POLO TEAM, 11 TO 4

Brilliant Crowd Sees Opening Game.

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, June 18.—Not yet lifted but certainly pried loose is tonight's status of the international polo championship cup, which four white clad American Knights of the mallet are endeavoring to wrest from British hands.

KING ALFONSO. [U. & U. Photo.]

In the presence of 10,000 spectators, including the British royal family, the king of Spain, numerous members of various ruling houses and royal families of Europe, England's championship team, veteran polo experts, went down to defeat at Hurlingham club this afternoon by the most unexpected score of 11 to 4.

Play at Terrific Pace.

The game was played at a terrific pace which left the ponies thoroughly blown at the end of each chukker. The playing of the American team, individually and in combination, was brilliant and brought forth frequent sounds of sincere applause and admiration from the British sportsmen, who, at other times, gave vent to groans of dismay as British players missed rare opportunities for scoring.

At no time during the game were the Britishers in the lead. The Yanks scored twice in the first five minutes of play and finished the first chukker with the score 2 to 0. In each chukker thereafter they outscored their opponents, who failed to register a goal after the fourth period. The Britishers never let up in their efforts to snatch victory from defeat, but the American team seemed to redouble its efforts in the last half of the game, scoring more than in the first half.

Milburn Plays Brilliantly.

Time and again Devereux Milburn's powerful offside backhand strokes sent the ball bounding down the green into British territory and brought cheers from the Americans scattered throughout the stands. Milburn played in spite of a intensely painful back which almost prevented him from taking the field. It was not known until the American side actually rode out on the turf whether the American captain would be in condition to lead his men. His appearance was greeted by long applause.

A hot sun high overhead shone down on the crowded stands which were alive with the color that English social life dons in the presence of its kind. Women sported parasols and sunshades of brilliant hues, which, however, did not outvie in coloring their dresses. There were top hats, gray, black spats, white and cream colored. The monocle was even more in evidence than the English sister's feather boa. The game was followed by a deluge of tea on the club lawns.

Polo, Tea, and Monocles.

There undoubtedly are some who connect polo, tea, and monocles, and attach to it the questionable esteem earned by male pioneers of wrist watches before the latter took up military aviation, artillery observation and other he-man pursuits on the battle front.

It seems reasonable, however, to assume that a man who can ride seven thoroughbred horses to exhaustion in the space of an hour is one well able to defend either the tea or monocle habit or both if his inclinations are in that direction. He might even wear spats at the stockyards and get away with it.

The vigorous nature of the game might have been contrasted with the presence in the stands of numerous top hatted, frock coated young men, whose faces wore deep graven pain lines, verified by canes or crutches on which they walked or invalid chairs in which they moved themselves. Many of England's possible polo players left legs or arms in France, but their hearts still beat fast at the flash of mallet or the sight of hard fought contests.

Light of Battle in Faces.

I saw the faces of these men light up at the swish of mallet, as dashing charger bore down on ball and connected with it after his stick had transcribed a vicious twelve foot circle through the air. I saw them lean forward on canes and crutches at the

Boy, 16, Saved from Niagara Trap of Death

Niagara Falls, N. Y., June 18.—Edward Denny, 16, was rescued from the Niagara whirlpool this afternoon after he had been in the water for nearly an hour.

Denny saved himself by clinging to a drifting log which was whirled around and around in the outer eddy of the big pool.

The boy, with a dozen companions, was swimming near the Old Maid of the Mist landing on the American side above the rapids. He was carried out into midstream and was quickly in the grip of the swift current.

Denny managed to catch a floating log and with it was hurled through the first of the lower rapids and into the whirlpool. Here he was swept around in the big outer eddy while the other boys, who had followed him on the bank, ran for aid.

Some of them found a long rope and one ventured out as far as he dared and threw the rope across the path of the log. Denny caught it and was hauled ashore, badly frightened, but otherwise uninjured.

BRITAIN FEARS GENERAL STRIKE TO AID MINERS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, June 18.—The danger of a general strike is again acute as a result of the miners' refusal to accept the terms of the settlement offered by the government and the owners.

Prime Minister Lloyd George has written Frank Hodges, the miners' secretary, stating that the offer of a £10,000,000 subsidy by the government expires tomorrow night. At a meeting the miners' executives considered the letter and after the conference Mr. Hodges stated it had been decided to ask the executives of all the unions affected by wage disputes to meet the miners' executives at an early date with the object of taking joint national action. Mr. Hodges said this certainly meant a national strike if the other unions agreed.

In the meantime miners are drifting back to work in many pits and the railways are resuming services suspended because of the coal shortage. Many pits have announced their reopening for Monday.

THREE RADICAL LEADERS SHOT DEAD IN SPAIN

BARCELONA, June 18.—Three outrages occurred here today and in all of them the victims were killed. The first victim was Felio Boal, formerly secretary of the National Federation of Labor, who was shot dead at 2 o'clock this morning. He was well known in labor circles and possessed a great influence over the radicals.

The second assassination occurred a short distance away a few minutes later. Jose Domincuez Rodriguez, a prominent syndicalist in the building trades, being shot dead. Both had recently been released from jail. A young radical whose name was not given was the third victim.

Ex-Senator Lewis Hurt while Riding in Street Car

Former United States Senator James Hamilton Lewis was slightly injured last night while on a Clark street car. "Some of the ligaments of my foot are hurt," Mr. Lewis said last night at the Ambassador hotel, "but I will be able to go to Danville to make a speech. I was standing up in the car. It turned suddenly. I was thrown against a window, breaking the glass, and then against an iron upright."

WILLIAM HURLBUT was so correct that nobody called him Bill—until one night when the village widow stopped for him in her racing car.

'FIXING' CHARGE STIRS CROWE; RAIDS NET 200

"Tipoffs" Cut Catch of Gamblers.

Covert charges that "the state's attorney's office had been fixed" and that gambling would be permitted to flourish openly in Chicago were followed yesterday by six whirlwind raids by the state's attorney's men.

More than 200 persons were arrested. Men fled down fire escapes, and slid down wire cables. Doors were smashed in, prisoners taken all but suffocated from strange hiding places.

But the big thrill came when Pat O'Malley's place at Polk and Clark street was entered and found empty. There had been a "tip-off." State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe was enraged and issued a new order of campaign in the war on gambling intended to prevent all leaks.

Crowe to Change Tactics.

Hitherto Ben Newmark, Crowe's chief investigator, has had charge of the raiding squads, which are made up of city police assigned to the prosecutor's office, and commanded by one of their own number. Thus several persons have known the places to be raided and it is believed one of the police phoned O'Malley.

Hereafter Mr. Crowe and Mr. Newmark will work together in all gambling raids. They will prepare lists of the places to be raided and besides themselves only the assistant state's attorneys who accompany the raiders will know the places to be visited.

This is no way casts any reflection on Newmark, according to the state's attorney. It is simply a sure way to clear the city of gambling, he says.

Evidence of Gambling Found.

O'Malley's place was empty. But there were large quantities of tally sheets, handbooks, and other evidence of gambling all about. These were seized and O'Malley taken into custody. He said he was not a gambler, nor the keeper of a gambling house. He didn't know what "all these things" could be. He was left alone in the Hegewisch station "to think it over."

One of the places first raided was a poolroom over the Indiana movie theater at 223 West Forty-third street. There was a big audience in the theater and twenty-seven men in the poolroom when the police arrived.

The poolroom door was locked. Detective Sergeants Baldwin and Moss battered in the door with crowbars. The inmates were fleeing down the fire escapes. Men waited for them on the ground. There were only a handful of gamblers present.

"Search the theater," said Baldwin.

Police Search the Theater.

There was a near riot, a near panic, as the police dashed down the aisles from the front and the sides. A score of men were found sliding down the cables supporting the curtain at the rear of the playhouse. One man slipped and fell several feet and was severely injured. Others had lacerated their hands.

The prisoners were taken to various police stations to be kept there until Monday. The raiders went to the Waiters' club at 105 West Madison street, where more than 100 alleged gamblers were found.

Investigator T. Frank McGlynn, and Policemen Aldenhovel, Dubeck, and Homer, found the rooms in an uproar. Apparently the games had been flourishing only a few minutes before, but only one set of tally cards was found.

Waiters, Waiters Everywhere.

The place was thoroughly ransacked in the search for prisoners. Waiters were found under tables and in closets. Doors were opened and waiters popped out or fell out. Small rooms, hot, poorly ventilated, were entered, and waiters were found almost suffocated.

All were rushed to the state's attorney's office, and then distributed among the police stations. None of them was booked.

It was late last night when the state's attorney's men called for three patrol wagons to take prisoners from another alleged gambling resort kept by Billy Lewis, a Negro, at 37 West 22d street. Fifty-five men were seized.

The raiders then forced their way into 127 East 31st street, an alleged resort, kept by Richard Dean and James Brooks. Twenty men were taken prisoners.

An equal number fell into the prosecutor's net at a resort in 41st street.

Deputy Sheriff Otto Gnewuch and his men got in the raiding game, too, last night and arrested fourteen men in John Gloss' poolroom at 7206 Circle avenue, Forest Park. Gnewuch says the men were playing stud poker.

A STUDY IN RELATIVITY

MAN WHO SERVED IN BERGDOLL'S STEAD WAS KILLED IN WAR

Philadelphia, Pa., June 18.—The man who took Grover C. Bergdoll's place when the convicted draft evader, now a fugitive in Germany, failed to answer the call, died a hero in the Argonne forest after being cited by the commanding general of his brigade for bravery in action in one of the most noteworthy battles of the world war.

He was Russell C. Gross of this city, a private in Company E, 328th infantry, who was killed by bullets from a machine gun nest, which later was captured by Company C of the same infantry, headed by Corporal Alvin C. York of Tennessee.

This was revealed tonight by the Overbrook post of the American Legion after an investigation. The post announced it would change its name to that of the fallen hero.

Gross, "who was forced into service ahead of his turn by the slacker Bergdoll," was 23 years old.

WORLD'S BIGGEST COCKTAIL DUE AS RUM HITS OCEAN

New York, June 18.—[Special.]—The district attorney's office in New York county has begun proceedings to acquire title in the name of the state to seized liquor worth $50,000,000 at bootleggers' prices.

After condemnation the liquor probably will be towed in garbage scows to a point off Sandy Hook, where the world's greatest cocktail will be compounded. Whether the whole $50,000,000 will be mixed in one colossal drink, or whether it will be doled out to the ocean at the rate of a few thousand barrels a day, is to be settled later.

The thousands of barrels of liquor, if dumped all at once beyond the three mile limit, will not be sufficient to flavor the surf at the beaches, according to oceanographers. It may, however, perfume the breezes for a few miles.

HEAVY RAINS IN NORTHWEST LEAD TO TRAINS' DELAY

Mandan, N. D., June 18.—Cloudbursts at Wibaux, Mont., and between Sentinel Butte and Medora, N. D., yesterday afternoon caused thousands of dollars' damage, according to reports reaching here today.

Houses were washed away in the lower part of Wibaux and hundreds of cattle were drowned.

Two Northern Pacific passenger trains are reported marooned by washouts, both west bound. Railroad officials estimated that ten miles of track had been washed out.

All transcontinental service over the Northern Pacific is being detoured.

SLAIN BECAUSE HE ASKS $15 FOR BED

An Odd Cuff Button May Betray Murderer.

Jacob Soloby, aged 60, owner of the Universal Furniture company at 625 Milwaukee avenue, was clubbed to death last night by an unknown man because the assailant thought $15 was too high a price for a bed.

The slayer left a clew a unique cuff button, bearing the initial "T."

Soloby was still alive in a pool of blood in the rear of his store, when his son, Louis; treasurer of the firm, returned from dinner. The son called the West Chicago avenue police, and Lieut. William Malone rushed Soloby to the county hospital. There emergency measures were resorted to, and after twenty minutes Soloby opened his eyes.

Describes Assassin.

"Who did it?" Lieut. Malone asked.

"A man came in and asked the price of a bed. He was a foreigner about 5 feet 8 and about 30 years old," Soloby gasped. "He said the price was too high, and when I told him I couldn't lower it he hit me—all for a $15 bed." Soloby died five minutes later.

No Money Taken.

A loaded revolver and a step ladder were found by the police at the spot where Soloby was struck down. There was no money missing. No one saw the assailant enter or leave the store.

Soloby was married and had three children.

CRANE, ON WAY HOME, TO USE NAILS AS CASH

PEKING, June 18.—[By the Associated Press.]—Charles R. Crane, retiring American minister to China, has left this city for America, traveling by way of Siberia and Russia. He is accompanied by his son, John, and the two are traveling on a special car stocked with nails, needles, tooth brushes, and medicines which will be used en route in lieu of currency.

Although Mr. Crane did not receive direct permission from Moscow to cross Siberia and Russia, he was unofficially assured that soviet officials would expedite his journey.

12 Detectives Armed With Rifles Trail O'Connor Tip

A dozen detectives armed with rifles left the city last night on "an important trip," believed to concern the whereabouts of Timothy O'Connor. The tip was furnished by former Detective Rohan, one of the five suspended for allowing O'Connor to escape. Chief Fitzmorris has promised reinstatement to any of the five whose aid leads to the capture of O'Connor.

FRENCHMAN FLIES IN FOOT-PROPELLED PLANE; WINS PRIZE

PARIS, June 18.—Successful flight in an airplane operated by foot was unofficially credited today to Gabriel Poulain, the noted French bicyclist.

The feat was accomplished in official tests for the Peugeot prize of 10,000 francs to the first person to succeed in leaving the ground and flying ten meters with only human power.

Poulain is reported to have repeatedly fulfilled the requirements for the award.

DANZIG, LEAGUE'S STEPCHILD, BUSY MAKING RIFLES

GENEVA, June 18.—[By the Associated Press. —The disclosure that 10,000 gun barrels are being made by an arms factory in the free city of Danzig for Mexico caused a mild sensation at the meeting of the council of the league of nations today. M. Hanotaux, the French representative, expressed surprise that a city under the protection of the league of nations was making war materials.

Herr Sahm, president of the free city, explained that the order had been received last October, before the constitution of the city was adopted. He said it was difficult to change the factory immediately for the manufacture of other articles.

The council passed over the question without announcing its decision.

U-BOAT DESTINED TO BE A TARGET SINKS OF ITSELF

Washington, D. C., June 18.—The former German submarine U-111 sank near Cape Henry, Va., today while being towed from Portsmouth, N. H., to a position off Cape Charles, where it was to have been a target for the guns of the destroyers of the Atlantic fleet Wednesday.

Dispatches to the navy department said the U-111 had been taking in water slowly throughout the trip from Portsmouth and that the vessel's bow was resting on the bottom in about thirty-five feet of water with the stern projecting above the surface. The submarine probably will be raised.

Hardings and Party Off for Cruise on Mayflower

Washington, June 18.—President and Mrs. Harding left here late today aboard the yacht Mayflower for a week-end cruise on the Potomac, in company with several guests.

The party, which is not expected to land at any point, will return Monday morning. It included Myron T. Herrick, newly appointed ambasador to France; Under Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry P. Fletcher, Senator and Mrs. New, Senator Cummins, Senator Knox, Representative and Mrs. Longworth, and Brig. Gen. Sawyer, the President's personal physician.

'ELEVENTH HOUR' ASSEMBLY ACTION

BULLETIN.

Springfield, Ill., June 18.—(Special.)—The senate passed the budget for the University of Illinois by unanimous vote. It carries $10,500,000, as requested by the trustees. The bill now goes to the governor.

The primary bills as wanted by the city hall were passed by the senate. They change the date of the nomination primaries from September to April, beginning next year.

The omnibus bill is held up by protests on two vital points. The most important is the common school distributable fund. This was in the house bill at $12,000,000, and cut by the senate to $10,000,000. It is to be trimmed to $8,000,000 if Gov. Small has his way.

All of the tax rate bills were passed by the senate. These establish the city rate for Chicago at $1.85 and the school board rate at $2. These were passed over protests by the representatives of civic organizations.

During the final thirty-six hours of the session more than 300 bills have been passed by both houses. There was no consideration whatever, and the roll calls came just as rapidly as the clerks could go down the lines.

LIGHTNING BOLT OUT OF A CLEAR SKY KILLS MAN

While standing in the yard in front of his home conversing with a neighbor, Charles Widen of Brookfield, Ill., was struck by lightning from a clear sky and instantly killed. Widen was chief traffic clerk for the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad. His wife saw him killed.

The heat of Friday is believed to have caused Andrew Wieciak, 2418 North Ashland avenue, to cut his throat with a razor. He died yesterday.

Mrs. Katherine Roberts of South Chicago was prostrated by the heat yesterday in Hammond, Ind., and died.

The weather bureau later predicted Sunday possibly would be a bit less warm and that real relief might come tomorrow. Yesterday's rain brought some relief, but the thermometer reached 88 during the afternoon.

ROB PHONE BOXES IN CITY HALL AS ALDERMEN MEET

While the council finance committee was holding a meeting on the third floor of the city hall last night, thieves broke open two boxes in telephone booths on the fourth floor. A night watchman found the coin boxes on the floor and notified the central police.

14 Months for Wealthy Income Tax Dodger

Guthrie, Okla., June 18.—[Special.]—T. I. Moss of Oklahoma City, president of the Moco Tire Patch company, was sentenced today by Judge Cotteral in the federal court here to serve fourteen months in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kas., for making false income tax reports for 1919. Moss made a return and paid a tax of $7,857. A government audit of the company's books showed $59,850 due for the year. Moss became wealthy through a tire patch he invented. He was a day laborer five years ago.

LEGISLATURE PASSES MAIMED UTILITIES BILL

Traction Bill Loses; Battle All Night.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Springfield, Ill., June 19, 2 a. m.—[Special.]—The first hundred million dollar Illinois legislature is in its final moments. Some time during Sunday morning the Fifty-second general assembly will cease operating.

At midnight the conference committee on the omnibus, charitable and normal school bills, was in a tight knot, but with the prospect, according to Senator Barr, that an agreement might be reached, probably between 3 and 4 o'clock.

The aggregate of all the appropriations will pass the $100,000,000 mark for the first time in Illinois history.

Achieve a Little Salvage.

Gov. Small, Fred Lundin, and Mayor Thompson, who lost their grip on the legislators this morning, came back tonight to some extent and yanked the crippled public utilities commission bill out of the wreckage.

The organization leaders still had hopes that they could pump up the mayor's traction bill.

The administration bill to smash state civil service was at its decisive stage and facing a final roll call as the house met for its closing session.

Home Rule Vanishing.

It was late at night when the house suddenly switched its stand and passed the "home rule" bill as amended by the senate, with "home rule" practically eliminated by a provision for appeal to the state commission.

The vote was 108 to 14.

Until the house reconvened at night there was every indication that the utilities measure would die in the conference committee, consisting of five members of each house. That it did not was accredited generally to Lee O'Neil Browne.

On the floor of the house he said he had concluded it would be impossible in the conference committee to persuade the senate members to recede from the amendments, which in effect make the "home rule" provisions utterly ineffective.

Campaign Pledges Fail.

Browne, who said he had discussed the subject with Governor Small, indicated by his remarks that the executive felt the passage of the bill could be pictured as a fulfillment of his campaign pledge to repeal the public utilities law. This was the argument tonight, although the law is almost an exact duplicate of the present law except that the commission provided for is called the Illinois commerce commission.

"I'll take a little when I can't get much," Browne said.

Representative Sidney Lyon protested vigorously.

"It isn't a home rule bill," he declared. "It's absolutely nothing of the kind. This simply increases expenses and the burdens of the taxpayers."

A Difficult Referendum.

Representative John A. Macneil asked Lyon about the amendment which requires a petition of 25 per cent of the voters in a city to bring about a referendum under "near home rule."

"That means," he said, "a petition signed by more than 200,000 voters in Chicago."

The roll call shattered most of the lines that have existed heretofore in the house. The governor's followers were joined by many anti-utilities commission men and home rule advocates. Party lines were not observed.

The success of the utilities bill followed a long series of defeates for the Lundin-Small-Thompson forces, extending from early Saturday morning until late in the long session of Saturday night.

The first defeat was that on the administration tax commission bill.

With all of the resources of the statehouse behind it the bill could get but forty-three Republican votes, together with those of Representative Lee O'Neil Browne and Representative Lyman of Champaign, Democrats.

Cook County Opposition.

The city hall faced the open opposition of William H. Weber and the country towns organization in Cook county. Charles V. Barrett quit cold on his political associates and representatives friendly to these two political groups voted against the bill.

Even Edward J. Smejkal, chairman of the house appropriations committee, jumped the traces and voted against the hall.

The effect of the revolt on this bill sent a shudder through the administration, but it wasn't prepared for the blow between the eyes that was landed by the senate on the mayor's street car bill this morning. There was a quick conference in which the governor, Lundin, and the mayor participated.

Oil Up the Juggernaut.

It was determined to force an adjournment, if possible, until 5 o'clock Monday afternoon and put on all the pressure that was possible to piece together the remnants of the wreck.

Speaker Dahlberg and Representative Holaday were summoned to the governor's office to receive instructions from the top. Mr. Holaday made the motion to adjourn. He was met with a wild shriek from the house.

"Not on your life!" cried Representative Tice, one of the administration leaders. "We're through with that stuff. Not for a minute can you get by with it."

The recess followed.

Unkindest Cut of All.

It was during the afternoon that the smashing blow was given the administration by the senate action on the transportation district bill.

In spite of all the pressure that the city hall, with the aid of the state administration, could bring to bear, Senator Ettelson, Mayor Thompson's corporation counsel, could muster only twenty-three votes for the measure. Twenty-six are required for passage.

Then a desperate effort was made to put enough life back into the scheme to keep it alive for approaching elections. Ettelson changed his vote and announced he would seek a reconsideration of the unfavorable action. His effort is still going on at this hour.

When Machine Cracked.

The roll call in the afternoon on the transportation bill was as follows:

Mayor Enters in Silence.

A long and bitter debate preceded the senate ballot on the traction bill. Just as it started, Mayor Thompson and John Dill Robertson entered the main door of the chamber and marched down the center aisle toward the platform, where Lieut. Gov. Sterling presided. They took seats behind him. There was no applause.

But their presence did not restrain the debaters from bringing the mayor into their remarks.

"Chicago's street railways have been in politics for twenty or thirty years," Senator Essington said, "and I believe municipal ownership would be the proper way to take them out.

"City Hall Plan Socialistic."

"But the mayor's statement the other night makes it impossible for me to vote for this bill. He said he would favor 3 cent fares, 2 cent fares, 1 cent fares, or rides for nothing. If that isn't socialism I don't know what it is.

"I've had it drummed into me for years that the people of Chicago demand a 5 cent fare, yet I have been surprised at the alacrity with which our friend on the rostrum accepted the proposal offered by the senator from Peoria (Dailey) and agreed to the suggestion that he take any price fare from a quarter to nothing.

"I would vote for it except for the fact that if it isn't socialistic it is at least semi-socialistic."

Senator Ettelson did his best to persuade some of the silent opponents of the scheme, particularly Turnbaugh, to give him their votes, but they remained steadfast.

Chickens Come Home to Roost.

A promise broken by the city hall was given as the reason for its losing some of the Democratic votes it had counted upon. It is said that the agreement was that the city hall would support the Democratic proposal for minority representation on the Illinois commerce commission provided for in Gov. Small's utilities bill. But the Thompsonites helped vote down that amendment.

Senators Broderick and Hughes today refused Ettelson's request to vote and Senator Sullivan was absent. These three votes would have passed the bill.

As soon as the debate was over and Ettelson had served his notice of intention to renew the battle, Mayor Thompson and Dr. Robertson left the chamber, trying to smile.

U. S. CHAMBER OF TRADE OPPOSES A BONUS IN CASH

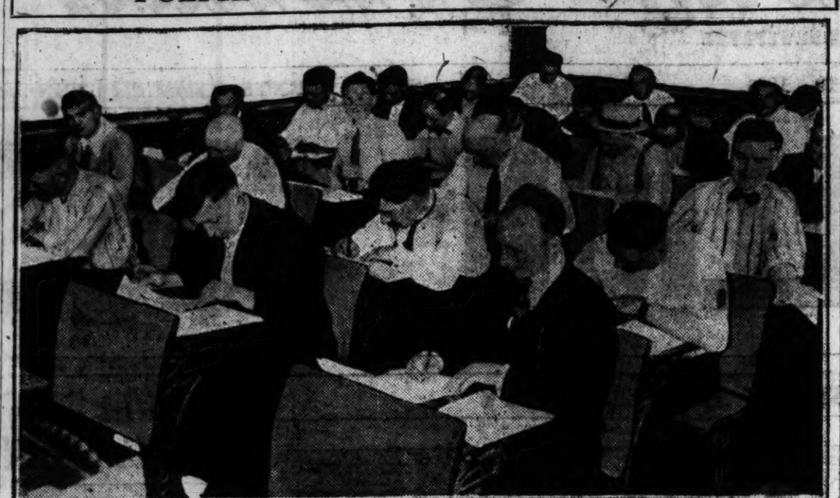
Washington, D. C., June 18.—[Special.]—A nation-wide campaign against the proposed cash bonus for soldiers of the world war was begun today by Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

"The national organization," the chamber says in its brief, "favors other forms of aid, and is particularly insistent on the physical and mental rehabilitation of the wounded and disabled, but it doubts the value of a cash bonus to the soldier and seriously questions its cost, and does not believe it will be of lasting benefit."

The protest was mailed today to President Harding, members of the cabinet, members of congress and fourteen hundred trade and commercial organizations throughout the country.

The officials say that the war has laid a mortgage of $55,000,000 on every congressional district, or $1,135 on every family.

POLICE WRESTLE WITH THREE R'S



One thousand policemen who aspire to become sergeants spent their entire day yesterday at the Lake View or the Waller High schools pondering over the questions propounded by the city civil service commission. The above picture was taken at the Lake View High school. It shows that our police have discarded the suspenders which were once a conspicuous part of a cop's equipment. Only three pairs are displayed.

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 18.

In announcing today Admiral Hilary P. Jones as new commander for the Atlantic fleet and Admiral Edward W. Eberle to command the Pacific fleet, and that he would soon make public a statement covering redistribution of ships between the fleets, Secretary of the Navy Denby indicated that there was no present intention of reuniting the fighting fleets.

Leaders of the prohibition forces clashed today before the house rules committee on the matter of amending the Volstead enforcement act.

In spite of President Harding's warning against official propaganda protesting department reorganization, members of congress are being flooded with letters of protest from government sources.

Republicans of the ways and means committee, despite loud protests against it, refused today to eliminate a duty on lumber from the forthcoming permanent tariff bill.

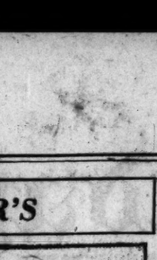
HIS FRIENDS FEAR EVANSTON MAN IS VICTIM OF HEAT

Evanston police are searching for Joseph E. Smith, former secretary of the Powers Ice company of Evanston, who left home Friday noon to visit Dr. James P. Littlejohn of the Stevens building and has been missing since he left the doctor's office. Mrs. Smith fears he was overcome by heat and has either wandered away or has been taken into some private home.



JOSEPH E. SMITH.

Evanston police notified the Chicago detective bureau. Hospitals in Chicago and suburbs have been visited. Scores of Mr. Smith's friends are aiding in the search, but there are no clews to his whereabouts.

Dr. Littlejohn, who had treated a wound for Mr. Smith thrice weekly for the last two years, said that he appeared happy when he visited the office Friday.

Mr. Smith is 34 years old, wore a brown suit, brown shoes, white shirt with black stripes, black socks, and carried a watch with his initials engraved on it. He has a wound on his right side.

COXEY ASKS U. S. FORGIVE EUROPE ITS DEBT TO US

Washington, D. C., June 18.—[Special.]—"Col." Jacob S. Coxey, who commanded the army of unemployed which invaded the national capital nearly twenty years ago, walked into the White House today unaccompanied and unrestrained to deliver a written protest to President Harding against the executive's plan to refund the war loans to the allies. Col. Coxey wants noninterest bearing bonds.

"I notice in the morning papers," Col. Coxey's protest read, "that you are proposing to enslave the European nations that are indebted to us through burdening them with an interest bearing debt. Why pay more than the amount owing us?"

ALDERMEN'S AX HITS CITY HALL PAY ROLL ARMY

High Priced Attorneys Cut —May Oust 1,000.

CHICAGO'S BUDGET

This is the total of the city's revenues, and the total appropriations made in the 1921 budget.

	Revenues.
Taxes	$29,054,040.80
Miscellaneous revenue	9,261,553.29
Salvage	1,000,000.00
Total income	$39,316,593.29
Budget total	39,283,000.00
Balance	$ 33,593.29

Expenditure of millions of dollars by the city administration for "expert" attorneys' fees and the salaries of Lundin-Thompson henchmen was dealt four severe blows by the council finance committee in an eight hour budget session yesterday.

The most important acts of the committee in the afternoon and evening sessions of the $39,283,000 appropriation bill which goes to the printers today were:

Voted to repeal the ordinance fixing the rate of compensation for expert attorneys. Council concurrence will mean pay cuts for such attorneys on utility litigation as Chester E. Cleveland from his $150 a day job and George B. Gillespie, a $135 a day lawyer.

Voted to hold a special session next week to consider prying Lundin-Thompson "temporary" or political employés from their berths, the resultant saving to be used for pay increases for policemen, firemen and other civil service employés.

Cut Corporation Counsel Ettelson's request for $685,950 for the city law department, one of the machine's patronage pockets, to $460,270.

Cut a request for $315,000 for the pay of attorneys, appraisal "experts" and others for public utility litigation to $200,000, with a provision that that sum can be spent only on special council authorization.

Expect to Oust 1,000.

Ald. Louis B. Anderson, Mayor Thompson's floor leader, backed only by Aldermen Armitage and Garner, tried and true servants of Lundin and the mayor, fought hard to keep the ground from slipping from beneath their idols' feet. They failed all along the line.

The aldermen directed Chairman Richert to present a list of every non-civil service employé on city pay rolls at a meeting to be held next week.

"At least 1,000 of the mayor's political henchmen can and should be eliminated," said Ald. Kostner, after making the motion for the names of the "temporaries."

May Raise Police Wages.

"That will permit Chicago to raise the policemen to $2,280 a year, a raise of $280, and the amount paid to New York and Detroit policemen."

"I am told the number of temporaries reaches into the thousands, and by lopping off a good share of them we can give policemen, firemen, and other civil service employés the pay they deserve and still keep inside the city's revenues," said Ald. A. O. Anderson of the Thirty-third ward, Fred Lundin's home bailiwick.

If the committee acts as a majority of its members talk, Mayor Thompson will be forced either to take a stand against increases or he will be obliged to sacrifice a few regiments of his pay roll patriot army.

Hits at High Priced Lawyers.

Ald. Woodhull's motion directing the repeal of the ordinance fixing the rate of pay of special traction lawyers will also give the administration a pain. The effect of the repeal would be to cut the pay of the following now holding their soft berths:

CHESTER E. CLEVELAND, chief attorney in traction and telephone matters at $150 a day, who in one year drew $36,000 from the city's coffers.

GEORGE B. GILLESPIE, the mayor's representative in traction matters at the state capital, $125 a day.

RINGER & WILHARTZ, attorneys for the city in telephone litigation, $150 a day.

SAMUEL J. ANDALMAN, special attorney, $50 a day.

DANIEL A. ROBERTS, special attorney, $50 a day.

DAVID H. JACKSON, special attorney, $50 a day.

May "Go To" Ettelson's Pay Roll.

If the council concurs, Corporation Counsel Ettelson will probably be forced to put these attorneys on the pay roll of the city law department at an annual salary. Mr. Ettelson's salary is only $10,000 a year.

It was brought out that under Mr. Ettelson's supervision $613,475 was spent last year in attempting to reduce utility rates and fares, as follows: Surface lines litigation, $314,842; "L" lines litigation, $218,132, and telephone litigation, $80,466.

For this year Mr. Ettelson asked $315,000, as follows: Surface lines cases, $172,000; "L" cases, $77,500, and 'phone litigation, $65,000.

"He doesn't need anything like that," declared Ald. Lyle. "Why, all this litigation is being held up or it should be pending the outcome of the mayor's traction plan."

Commission Now Mayor's Friend.

"They received these big appropriations to fight the decisions of the old public utilities commission," said Ald. Schwartz. "Now the mayor has a friendly commission and there should be no necessity for big litigation expenses."

Ald. Schwartz explained that in cutting the total appropriation for special litigation to $200,000, only $35,000 remains to be spent for this purpose during the rest of the year, as $160,000 has already been spent, he said.

To Investigate Special Lawyers.

On motion of Ald. Lyle, the committee on efficiency, economy and rehabilitation was ordered to make an investigation of the methods of hiring special attorneys "with a view to reducing or eliminating per diem fees and placing such employés on a salary basis."

Ald. Powers demanded that the committee order its staff to "report the amount spent out of the city traction fund in 1920."

"You will be amazed when you see the figures," Ald Powers said.

New Items in Budget.

Among the large items inserted in the budget by the aldermen are:

POLICE, to pay the salaries of 200 patrolmen added last year and for other purposes, $309,000.

FIRE DEPARTMENT, for continuation of the motorization of the department, $420,000.

DEPARTMENT OF GAS AND ELECTRICITY, for new electric lights

The committee appropriated $1,556,000 for bridge construction, including completion of the Wells street, Madison street, and other bridges; but later knocked this out to bring the budget within the revenue. It was this cut that left the budget makers $33,593.29 to spare. There is a clause in the budget, however, which provides that the appropriation for the completion of the bridges shall come out of a bond issue to be put on the ballot next fall.

Some Salaries Increased.

The committee increased the salary of Louis E. Gosselin, deputy city controller, from $5,700 to $6,200; that of Bert Keefe, chief clerk in the treasurer's office, from $4,500 to $5,000. Ald. Lyle wanted to raise the salary of Roy J. Battis, chief clerk in the controller's office $500, but was defeated. Only Lyle voted for this. Even Garner and Anderson voted against him, though Battis is a Thompson man, and a temporary appointee.

"I won't vote for any more increases for men with big salaries," said Garner.

The question of increasing the salaries of 524 detective sergeants from $2,100 to $2,400 was brought up by Ald. Anderson. Ald. Steffen, chairman of the police committee, fought it on the ground it would ruin the morale of the department if detective sergeants and patrol sergeants did the same work, and the detectives got $300 more a year.

At midnight the committee voted to raise the pay of seventy-three food inspectors from $1,860 to $2,040 a year effective Jan. 1; also 121 assistant fire engineers from $2,112 to $2,330, effective July 1.

LOLITA ARMOUR BECOMES BRIDE OF J. J. MITCHELL

Simplicity Marks Nuptials at Mellody Farm.

Miss Lolita Armour, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Ogden Armour, was married yesterday afternoon to John J. Mitchell, Jr. The wedding was a simple ceremony and took place at the bride's Lake Forest home, Mellody Farm.

The wedding unites two of Chicago's wealthiest families. The bride, an only child, is heir to a fortune estimated conservatively at $60,000,000; and the groom, second son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Mitchell, will share in an estate reputed to be worth $10,000,000. The elder Mr. Mitchell is president of the Illinois Trust & Savings bank.

The marriage was the final chapter in a romance that began in childhood. Mitchell was a naval aviator during the war, and was injured in an airplane collision. Miss Armour performed various kinds of war work—Red Cross, Liberty loan drives, etc.

Bishop Page Performs Ceremony.

The wedding service was read by Bishop Herman Page of Spokane, Wash., at an improvised altar at one end of the hall in the Armour summer home. Bishop Page was assisted by the Rev. John Herbert Edwards of the Church of the Holy Spirit, Lake Forest.

A strip of jade green velvet carpet stretched from the altar to the landing of the staircase at the other end of the hall, marked the path of the bridal party.

On each side of the aisle were small green marble posts at five foot intervals, connected with orchid ribbons. Against the stone walls were tall urns filled with pink roses and larkspur. A gobelin tapestry hung behind the altar, which was covered with a cloth of filet lace. Flanking the altar were urns of pink roses and tall electric candelabra.

At 4 o'clock Percival de Coster took his place at the organ, and the wedding march began. The bride wore no jewelry except her engagement ring, and she showed she was not superstitious, for her train was lined with green. It may also be stated here that the marriage license was issued June 18.

Tables for 300 on Lawn.

The afternoon was very hot. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. Armour went upstairs and took off his afternoon clothes, changing into a light blue suit and white shoes. Tables were set in the garden for the 300 guests. The toasts were given with pink lemonade and frosted chocolate.

The ceremony was an interesting contrast with the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Armour in New York, May 12, 1895. That wedding was even more simple than that of yesterday. There were but twenty-four guests present. After the supper the bridal party went to a dinner dance at Onwentsia, given by Mr. and Mrs. Armour. The young couple will spend most of the summer in Santa Barbara, Cal., and will return to Chicago in September. They will live at 232 East Walton place.

DETAILS OF THE CEREMONY

The wedding procession was led by the ushers, Lester Armour of Chicago, cousin of the bride; Clarence Mitchell, brother of the bridegroom; Harold Curtis, Charles Moore, and Robert Jennings of New York, and Laurence Hansel of Chicago.

Following them came the bridesmaids in twos, Mrs. Herman Nichols of Lake Forest and Miss Elizabeth Chapin of New York, cousins of the bride; Miss Louise Mitchell, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Martha Lyon of Pittsburgh, Miss Julia Belle Faurot of Riverside, and Mrs. Henry Pickett Withers (Margaret Pirie). They wore sleeveless frocks of iris blue chiffon over flesh pink chiffon, with fringed skirts.

Their girdles were of blue, with pointed ribbons of pistachio green and pale yellow, the same colors appearing in the broad brimmed hats of brown net and lace. They wore long crushed gloves of grey suede and slippers and stockings of flesh color. Their flowers were yellow and brown iris and ramber roses.

Mrs. Hunter Matron of Honor.

Mrs. Robert Hunter of Pasadena (Gwendolyn Mitchell), sister of the bridegroom, was the matron of honor. She wore a gown of mushroom brown chiffon and lace with a lace hat, slippers, and stockings of the same soft shade. Her bouquet was of vari-colored larkspur and rambler roses.

The flower girl, Virginia Chapin of New York, a cousin of the bride, wore flesh pink net and silver, with a narrow silver fillet in her hair. Her basket of lilies of the valley and rambler roses completed a pretty picture.

Mr. Mitchell and his best man, Duncan Forbes of Rockford, Ill., approached the altar from the living room.

Gown White Chiffon Velvet.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown was of white chiffon velvet with cascades of lace over the hips, a bodice plain almost to severity, and long, close fitting sleeves. The court train, of the same material as the gown, hung from the waist and was lined with green chiffon the shade of valley lily foliage. A narrow pearl girdle with strands of pearls hanging from it completed the dress.

The veil of tulle surmounted a close cap of real lace with a short veil of the same hanging to the waist. A fillet of silver embroidered net with small clusters of orange blossoms over the ears finished the front of the cap effect. She wore white embroidered hose and pretty plain slippers of white satin. The bridal bouquet was of white orchids, gardenias, and lilies of the valley. The bride wore no jewels.

The guests contributed greatly to the beauty of the scene, for all the women and girls were in their prettiest and daintiest summer frocks and most of the men wore white trousers and white coats. The bride's mother wore a charming gown of pearl gray crêpe romain trimmed with wide gray ribbon, slippers and hose to match, gray gloves and a black tulle hat ornamented with a single calla lily.

The bride's paternal grandmother, Mrs. Philip D. Armour, also wore a gray gown and a black hat. They both wore corsage bouquets of orchids and valley lilies.

Mrs. Mitchell, the mother of the bridegroom, wore a beautiful gown of reseda green georgette with pumps and hose to match. Her hat of brown tulle was trimmed with a cluster of gardenias, and she carried a bouquet of orchids and camellias.

Relatives at the Ceremony.

Among the relatives who were present were Mrs. William Nichols and Miss Mary Louise Nichols of Rye, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Armour of Kansas City, Mo.; Mrs. William Bissell and Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Bissell of Suffield, Conn.; Mrs. Patrick A. Valentine of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Simeon Chapin of New York and Lake Geneva, Mr. and Mrs. Laurance H. Armour, Mr. and Mrs. A. Watson Armour and Mr. and Mrs. Lester Armour.

Mrs. Laurance Armour's gown was of white accordion plaited chiffon with touches of black lace. She wore a white straw hat the crown of which was encircled with white lilacs. Mrs. Watson Armour looked unusually lovely in a frock of white Canton crêpe, made very simply, and a white georgette hat. Mrs. Lester Armour's frock was of taupe lace and georgette, and she wore a large brown tulle hat trimmed with a wreath of pastel shaded flowers.

Among Others Present.

Others observed at the ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker, Miss Mary Meeker, Arthur Meeker Jr., Mrs. David S. Cook Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Philip Swift, Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Swift, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Swift Jr.

Mrs. Philip Swift wore an attractive gown of taupe lace and georgette and a brown hat trimmed with yellow flowers. Mrs. Edward Swift Jr.'s hat of brilliant orange was the only touch of color in her costume, for her frock and slippers and hose were of white.

Mrs. James Ward Thorne wore a stunning gown of white crêpe meteor with black lace elbow sleeves and a girdle of black beads with strands of the beads falling to the hem of the skirt.

Younger Folks at Ceremony.

Mrs. Mitchell is wearing the gown in which as Lolita Armour she became a bride. It is of white chiffon velvet with cascades of lace over the hips and a plain bodice, with long, close fitting sleeves. The court train, also of white chiffon velvet, fell from the waist and was lined with green chiffon. She carried white orchids, lilies of the valley, and gardenias.

Cabinets of Holland and Denmark Resign en Masse

LONDON, June 18.—Official announcement of the resignation of the Dutch cabinet was issued in The Hague today, says a dispatch to the Central News from the Dutch capital.

It is understood here the resignation was principally due to defeat in the second chamber of the Dutch parliament of the main clause in the bill for reorganization of the army.

The Norwegian cabinet also resigned today, says a dispatch from Christiania to the Central News.

Sub Chaser, with War Record, to Spread Fish Fry

Petoskey, Mich., June 18.—One of Uncle Sam's submarine chasers which helped fight enemy craft during the war is to be used in removing brook trout from Lake Superior and transporting them to various points along the Lake Michigan coast for breeding purposes. Later they will be placed in hundreds of Michigan streams. The chaser is due to reach Charlevoix early in July.

IRISH QUESTION HAS CONGRESS FLOOR THIS WEEK

Washington, D. C., June 18.—The Irish question will break out in the senate next week.

Senators Norris, Nebraska, and La Follette, Wisconsin, plan to force upon the senate's attention their resolutions for American recognition of the Irish republic. Norris intends to speak Monday if he gets the chance. La Follette will join him in upholding the viewpoint maintained by the friends of Irish freedom and similar organizations in the United States.

It is not unlikely that the Norris and La Follette speeches may draw vigorous replies from some senators who for a long time have been inwardly agitated concerning Irish propaganda of every sort in the United States.

It is doubtful whether any subject presented to the American public in recent years has been productive of more discussion by that great army of letter writers who constantly inundate members of congress with their views.

Woman Presides Over G. O. P. in Pennsylvania

Philadelphia, Pa., June 18.—For the first time a woman today presided over the Republican state organization. She is Mrs. Barclay H. Warburton, Philadelphia, daughter of John Wanamaker. The committee nominated Thomas S. Crago of Greene county as the party's candidate for congressman at large to fill the vacancy created by the death of Manlon M. Garland. The election will be in September.

MISS ARMOUR NO IDLER; NOTED IN MANY ACTIVITIES

Busy Throughout War in Work for Soldiers.

Miss Lolita Armour has long been interested in many projects. She was head of the Service club, a trustee in the Armour Institute of Technology, and during the war an incessant worker.

She had wanted to go overseas as a Red Cross nurse, and took a course in training. At the third national service school at Lake Geneva, she became a "colonel" under "General" Mrs. Frederick D. Countiss.

She also conducted a little restaurant at 65 East Adams street during the war, the profits of which went to the Food for France fund. She washed dishes, waited on trade, made change, did everything that was to be done.

Makes the Shop Prosper.

She showed a skillful management, and the shop prospered. Other food shops were opened subsequently, and they, too, made money.

Miss Armour was not yet 20 when she was elected trustee of the Armour institute. It was not given to her as an honor. She was supposed to work, and she did. She had been trained in business methods, because some day she was to have the handling of a vast estate.

Miss Armour has never gone to college. Until she was 17 years old she had been instructed by private tutors. Then she went to a private school at Westover for two years.

There was a reason for this private teaching. In her childhood and early youth she had not been strong. When she was 5 years old she had to undergo an operation.

Famous Surgeon Operates.

Dr. Adolph Lorenz of Vienna came to her home, a distance of 5,300 miles. A miracle of surgery was performed, and Dr. Lorenz, it is reported, received a fee of $150,000.

"You have given me a fortune," the surgeon said, "for curing your child. Therefore, I will try to cure, free of all charge, all the poor children who are brought to me suffering."

The father and mother of Lolita searched for little sufferers everywhere and brought them to the doctor; and many were made well. Afterwards Lolita, too, went hunting sick children to help.

YOUNG MITCHELL IN NAVY

John J. Mitchell Jr. enlisted in the navy with his brother, William H. Mitchell, a few days after congress had declared war. The mother of the boys had said: "If war comes I want them to be at the front."

The boys went into the aviation school, John being 20 years old at the time, and in his second year at Yale. He was seriously injured at Key West, Fla., on April 5, 1918, in an accident that caused the death of Student Aviator Thomas Eaton of Wilmington, Del. Their machines collided 100 feet in the air.

After the war he returned to Yale and graduated in February, 1919.

U. S. SMOTHERS BRITISH POLO TEAM, 11 TO 4

Opening Game Played Before Brilliant Crowd.

sound of thundering hoofs as the chain of horsemen swept down the sideboards with the players paired and the ponies leaning against one another at perilous angles all on mad gallop.

England's day of polo Waterloo—and it happened today was the anniversary of the battle—opened auspiciously. Massed bands of five Guards regiments in red coats, white belts and tall black bearskin hats, played and marched with slow impressiveness up and down the field while the crowds thronged into the stands or strolled and chatted on the green promenades in front.

Cheers for King and Queen.

The coming of the king and queen was heralded to the waiting thousands by a growing volume of cheers from areas beyond the club walls as the rulers of the British empire drove through applauding crowds that lined Broomhouse road to the gates of the club.

Preceded by two galloping outriders in red liveries, the carriage containing George V. and Queen Mary swung onto the field and passed down the turf in front of the stands to the royal box in front of which the Guards band stood massed at attention. The cheering of the bareheaded multitude stopped as the royal standard fluttered to the top of the flag pole and the bands crashed out with "God Save the King."

This was followed immediately with "The Star Spangled Banner," which floated throughout the game from tall masts at either end of the field.

After the eight players of both teams were received by the king and queen the ponies were paraded, first the American string, preceded by an English Boy Scout carrying the Stars and Stripes, which he dipped in front of the royal box, although it was noticed that the Union Jack which followed at the head of the English team wasn't so handled. The American ponies, many veterans of four and five international contests, looked sleek and at their best, but naturally didn't arouse the volume of applause which rippled in the wake of England's equine favorites.

Demand Speed from Ponies.

From the tap of the first gong it was apparent both sides were satisfied only with the utmost speed from the ponies. The pace was terrific from the start. Applause that would break out in the stands would be superseded almost immediately by breathless suspense as a new dangerous play demanded attention.

The second game will be played Wednesday.

"BEST PLAYERS WON"

BY LIEUT. COL. E. D. MILLAR, C. B., D. S. O.

[Late of the Seventeenth Lancers, North Hampton Yeomanry, author of "Modern Polo," captain of the Rugby polo team, manager of the 1913 English team in America, member of the Universal polo rules committee, and referee in this year's international.]

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, June 18.—The international polo game between the American and British teams began in sensational fashion, America quickly dashing for the goal and Watson Webb scoring after only a couple of minutes' play. This performance was quickly repeated at the other end, making the score two-love. The Americans then settled down to their game, sitting splendidly, and their ponies showing superiority over the English team. It seemed that American hitting was much more accurate, as if the ball came right on the head of the mallet, enabling them to get extra length on the ball.

Before the match great uneasiness was expressed both by the American and English players on account of Devereux Milburn's condition and his possible inability to play, but from the instant that the game started he showed that he was the Milburn of old. In fact, each and every one on the American team was at top form.

British Off Form.

Maj. Lockett of the British team appeared to me not to be so speedy as usual, and it took Maj. Barratt a long time to settle down into his stride, but Woodhouse played the game of his life from beginning to end. It was not until the fourth chukker that the Englishmen got to going fairly, and they gradually pulled up until they were within a goal of their opponents' score, 5 to 4, at the end of the third chukker.

In the fifth chukker the Englishmen fairly penned the Americans to the goal, and our hopes ran high. Tomkinson missed a very easy shot which should have cost him dear, but fortunately for us the fourth goal was got immediately after this, so that his mistake didn't cause us any loss.

Matters shortly changed and the Englishmen pressed at their end. A goal by Barratt caused a dispute, it being within an inch or so of the line, but the goal referees gave it as "no goal." After this the Americans had it all their own way in the fifth and sixth chukkers.

They demonstrated their ponies were better and that they, as a team, were better than the English four. I think the fact that the Americans played old, seasoned ponies gave them an enormous advantage over England, as our ponies are for the most part only in their second season. There is no excuse for the English side. The Americans not only showed themselves better individually, with the exception of Woodhouse, but exercised better judgment and displayed better hitting power.

Hitchcock a Marvel.

It was a marvelous performance that Hitchcock gave. For a young man of only 21 years to play such a brilliant and steady game, I think, is a record. "Dev" Milburn, if not driving with quite the length that I can remember in 1909 and 1913, was, in my opinion, one of the most brilliant examples of back I have ever seen. Watson Webb was not so fast—in fact, he never is—but he is a worthy successor of Harry Whitney, and higher praise no man can earn. Stoddart, who has been playing some twenty years, has not lost his dash and speed, and, except for a few chances he had at the beginning of the game, when he might have scored a couple of goals, is hitting appeared to me to be as accurate as it ever was.

The Game a Delight.

The game, as a whole, was a delight to referee. It was clean, with never a disagreeable word on either side, and, with the exception of a couple of accidental fouls, which resulted in each case in a goal for the English team, it was one of the fairest and best games that possibly could be wished for.

To see Americans and Englishmen on such friendly terms in this hard fought game was a pure joy. The members of the teams are intimate friends, although opponents in these three big matches, and whichever side gets the better of three games there will be no ill feeling nor will the loser begrudge the winner his hard fought victory.

Promote Fraternal Feeling.

These international tests, carried out in this fashion, must do good between the two countries, and we Englishmen are willing to take our licking, hoping we will do better next Wednesday. We know we were beaten by four of the best players in the world and four of the best sportsmen who represent the best spirit of sportsmanship in the two countries.

YANKEE POLO PLAYERS WIN FIRST GAME

Devereux Milburn, captain of the American team, refused to be put out by an injury and went into the first of three matches at Hurlingham, England, yesterday. Here we have the Yank stalling off an English player during a practice match at Ranelagh. Note the ball at the right.

Mrs. Milburn is the captain's mascot. She always is on the sidelines to watch her husband play, jotting down the points of players and ponies, which later are submitted to the "boss" for study.

U. S. ARMY POLO TEAM DEFTATED BY CUBANS, 6 TO 3

Washington, D. C., June 18.—The Cuban army polo team defeated the American team from Camp Humphries today, 6 to 3, in the first of a series of three matches in the international military polo tournament arranged between the two countries.

President Harding and Mrs. Harding, Gen. Pershing, Minister De Cespedes of Cuba, and other members of the diplomatic corps, army and navy officers, and many government officials were among the spectators. The Cubans displayed remarkable horsemanship and excellent team play, which overshadowed the long drives of the Americans, who frequently carried the ball from goal to goal, only to drive it out of bounds.

THREE CLERKS BREAK OUT OF THE CITY HALL

About 8 o'clock last night several persons passing the city hall were startled to hear the crash of glass on one of the lower floors. One rushed to the Central police station and notified Lieut. Joseph O'Connell.

The lieutenant rushed to the hall and was met by Officer Kyran Phelan, detailed to watch the building. With the officer were three young men he had caught emerging from an opening in one of the windows.

The young men said they were not burglars but were clerks and they were not breaking in the place but merely breaking out. They had been working overtime and upon quitting were unable to open the door. They consequently shoved their feet through a window. The men were released.

ROSENWALD ASKS 600 TO BECOME OPERA SPONSORS

Chicago would retrograde to a second class city in the eyes of the world if it lost its opera company, Julius Rosenwald said yesterday in a statement sent by Mr. Rosenwald to 600 business and professional men. The statement came at the end of the first week of the intensive campaign to sign guarantors. Two hundred and ten guarantors were on record last night with the day's grist, including the Variety Fire Door company, Mrs. Mae F. Aldrich, and Joseph Leiter.

ROYAL CONFLICT FOR PRECEDENCE AIRED AT MATCH

Queen Mary Wins Over Dowager Queen.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, June 18.—The conflict for supremacy between Dowager Queen Alexandria and Queen Mary came to a public showdown this afternoon at Hurlingham. The dowager queen endeavored to usurp the precedence of the reigning queen by being the first to step into the royal car when the polo game was finished. An official touched Queen Alexandria on the shoulder and she gave way to Queen Mary.

Society Is Arrayed.

So far as society is concerned the victory of Americans was an incident compared with this public regulation of the position of the present and dowager queens.

The king has been in an awkward situation since the coronation, as Queen Alexandria has declined to take a back seat in favor of Queen Mary, but has continued to insist on receiving the rights of the reigning queen. King George has been placed between the millstones of affection and respect for his mother ad loyalty to the enthroned rights of his wife and consort.

Biggest of Sensations.

The affair has been one of those tidbits constituting secret society scandal, but open confirmation, as happened this afternoon, was the biggest sensation society has had since the late King Edward, as the Prince of Wales, testified on the famous baccarat case which resulted in the phrase, "Perjured himself like a gentleman."

King Alfonso of Spain, who is a polo-ist, spent the preliminaries to the game in shaking hands like any candidate for office. "That king is a regular guy," was the comment of numerous Americans.

IRISH FIGHTER SPEAKS TODAY.

Padraic Fleming of Dublin, Ireland, a commandant in the Irish republican army, will speak on Ireland this afternoon at Gaelic park, California avenue and 47th street. Fleming escaped from Mountjoy prison, Dublin, in 1918. A program of Gaelic sports has been arranged.

FASHION'S WORLD MAKES BRILLIANT SCENE AT POLO

U. S. Envoy Harvey in King's Box.

BY ELIZABETH CRAIG.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, June 18.—What a triumph for America! American costumes, American figures, and even American beauty roses graced the polo match. If the morning had dawned brighter the fashion parade might have surpassed those at the Ascot races. As it was the clouds dulled the skies and to a small extent the toilettes, for early in the day nearly every one was wearing wraps or furs.

I saw Mrs. Winston Churchill in one of the few black and white toilettes, and Lady Zia Wernher in black, wearing a cinnamon brown crinoline hat with a spray of pink roses. Shortly before the arrival of the royalty, the American ambassador and Mrs. Harvey, gracefully gowned in dove gray, and wearing a black hat and sables, took a seat in the stand to the left of the royal box, already well filled with members of the American embassy, all guests of the Hurlingham club. The occasion also was graced by the presence of a number of Indian princes, who wore scarlet khaki uniforms.

The Queen Arrives.

Soon afterwards Queen Alexandra arrived, her black and white toilette almost hidden by a black sequinned wrap. She wore a purple plumed toque and had fastened a knot of her favorite malmaison carnations in her corsage.

The king of Spain, Princess Alice, and the Earl of Athlone received her. The Prince of Wales and the king of Spain, both keen polo players, then left the royal box for a few moments to condole with Devereux Milburn and meet members of both teams, who also were presented to the king and queen when they arrived a little later. They drove right up to the royal box, guarded by scarlet clad outriders and coachmen, all glinting in the fitful sunshine.

Her majesty, who kissed Queen Alexandra very warmly, looked handsome in lavender taffeta with lace vest and lilac toque, sprayed with pink flowers, and carried a lilac sunshade. Princess Mary made a picture in a silver gray tailored suit and white lace hat with a pink ribbon band. The princess royal was gowned in black with hat to match. Princess Maud wore all brown with yellow wheat ears wreathing her hat. Princess Beatrice also had chosen a brown toilette with sapphire plumed hat.

U. S. Envoy in Royal Box.

Shortly after America had scored its first goals, the American ambassador and Mrs. Harvey were asked to join the royal party, which they did, the ambassador viewing the remainder of the game from his seat between Princess Mary and Princess Victoria. I saw Mrs. Milburn just behind the royal party. She was dressed in an orange woolen toilette and a jade green hat and I caught a glimpse of Lady Birkenhoid and Lady Wimborne, both in black lace over pink, Lady Stanley in white organdy and lace hat and Lady Victor Warrender in a wallflower brown georgette.

It may have been a black and white Ascot but it certainly was a colored Hurlingham. I also saw Mr. and Mrs. Boetius Sullivan, Mrs. Frank Sullivan and Mrs. Insull of Chicago. It was America's day.

'OSTLER JOES OF U. S. A. ASTONISH MONOCLE CYRILS

Slang Wrecks Poise of Aristocrats.

BY AMBROSE LAMBERT.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, June 18.—Hurlingham is a stickler for decorum and good form. Tophatted royalties, aristocrats and fashionable ladies consided the modest clapping of hands as the extreme appreciation of thrilling polo play. This rule held good throughout the grandstands and royal boxes but it was irretrievably demolished by a bunch of "proletarians" who had charge of the American ponies. I saw the game with them and Hurlingham never witnessed such a scene of unbridled enthusiasm as was displayed by these dozen valets to half a hundred riding-breeched boys in gray corduroy and gray puttees, whose vantage point was just beside the pavilion where the dukes and earls had congregated just cut themselves loose with rebel yells at every American goal or effective bit of play. They did not seem to care for the individual players but for their mounts. Each pony was to them a dominating factor of the contest.

All Strata Together.

That lovely Kentucky accent, expressing terms of encouragement to princely horse flesh, was only rivaled by the brogue of Irish lovers of the equine. The narrow entrance between the grand stands wherefrom the American ponies emerged soon was crowded not only by hostlers but by top hats who were attracted by the untraditional enthusiasm and intelligent comments.

"Go on, Bell," "What you doing, Sonora?" "O you Cinders!" "Say, you Miss Jacobs, you are certainly slipping something across."

Ragtime Queen, Royal, Diamond, Natalia, Tenby, Harkaway, Black Beauty, Selena, Pickens are names of some of the ponies which were cheered and encouraged from this gallery in their every move with the intensity and sincerity that a crap shooter uses when he tries to induce the bones to come a seven or a eleven.

Even the Bobbies Unbend.

Rigid policemen under the humanizing influence forgot decorum under the democratic influence of these Yanks.

"Your ponies certainly are faster than ours," said one herculean bobby.

A smiling Kentuckian instructed him vernacularly: "Say, bo, those babies are just beginning to get warm. Wait until we let loose our real speeders. Up to now you only seen those we keep to drive hearses."

The flabbergasted policeman only was able to retort: "Fawncy!"

The matter of fact John Lambert, who is lord chamberlain of the court of American equine royalties, said the majority of the ponies played today were princelings, and that the real kings and queens of the stable had not yet appeared.

When the score of 11 to 4, in favor of the Americans, was announced, a youthful voice at my side exclaimed: "I'm some happy. If we had lost, I wouldn't have had the price of a bathing suit to cover myself on the swim home."

FEARED ZIEGLER, MRS. ORTHWEIN TOLD REPORTER

Claimed She Thought He Would Kill Her.

After a week of testimony, Assistant State's Attorney Lloyd D. Heth, in charge of the prosecution of Mrs. Cora Isabelle Orthwein for the murder of Herbert P. Ziegler, formally closed the state's case yesterday.

The only witness at yesterday morning's session was John P. Snowhook, a reporter for THE TRIBUNE. Mr. Snowhook testified he arrived at the Orthwein flat immediately after Detective Sergeant James G. Moffatt, and that he heard Mrs. Orthwein using profanity in talking to Sergt. Moffatt. He said he interviewed Mrs. Orthwein later.

Quotes Mrs. Orthwein.

"Moffatt was asking her about the shooting," he related. "In telling of her relations with Ziegler I heard her say, with an oath, 'I'm glad he's dead, and I love him, and why do they make guns anyway.' Later she said: 'When I knew he was cheating I was through with him.'

"She told me Ziegler was going to get a divorce from his wife and that they were going to be married. She told me of the quarrel in the Green Mill Gardens, and that another woman had told her she had seen Ziegler kissing a blonde in the Rainbo Gardens. She said she shot Ziegler because she though he would kill her."

Mrs. Orthwein to Take Stand.

Mrs. Orthwein will take the witness stand in her own defense, it was decided yesterday. She probably will appear either Tuesday or Wednesday.

GELHARDT WILL BE QUIZZED BY CROWE'S OFFICE

Preparation of evidence based on charges that John H. Gelhardt, loop realty dealer, operated a fraudulent home building scheme which netted scores of victims was started yesterday by Michael W. Kaveney, assistant state's attorney. Mr. Kaveney said he would probably call in Gelhardt and his associates tomorrow.

Many of the complainants charge that members of Gelhardt's organization told them the Gelhardt project has the backing of Mayor Thompson, and to verify the statement the salesman pointed to pictures of the mayor on the wall in Gelhardt's office. Some of the dissatisfied customers visited the mayor's office and registered further complaints.

"The evidence shows that Gelhardt's agents promised these people to build homes and when they paid their money and got their contracts the documents made no mention of home building," said Mr. Kaveney.

"FIFI" SPURS ON SLEUTH BRIGADE TO FIND "FLO"

Banker's Split with Chorus Girl Is Reason.

New York, June 18.—[Special.]—Reports of a break between James A. Stillman and Mrs. Florence H. Leeds, received today by attorneys of Mrs. "Fifi" Stillman, were said to confirm earlier ones.

As a result of the most recent report, that Mrs. Leeds had become jealous of Mr. Stillman's association with a woman of a higher social standing, Mrs. Stillman's investigators were directed to increase their efforts to find Mrs. Leeds that she might be obtained as a witness for the defense.

Mrs. Stillman was quoted as having said recently that she had already spent $8,000 in an effort to find Mrs. Leeds, without success.

Report Stillman "Paid."

According to the latest report Mr. Stillman is said to have settled $500,000 on Mrs. Leeds and to have agreed to pay for the maintenance and education of her son, Jay Ward Leeds.

Information of the alleged break is said to have been brought to Mrs. Stillman's attorneys by former members of the crew of the Stillman yacht, Modesty, upon which Mrs. Leeds is said to have been entertained frequently.

Mrs. Stillman's attorneys and John E. Mack, special guardian for Guy Stillman, will begin a series of conferences Monday at the offices of John F. Brennan in Yonkers in preparation for the presentation of the defense and for the cross-examination of Mr. Stillman.

The hearings will be resumed on Tuesday, June 28, before Referee Gleason at Poughkeepsie and Mrs. Stillman's attorneys expect the last of Mr. Stillman's witnesses to testify on the following day. This will leave two days of the next series of hearings for the first of her witnesses, who will number in all more than fifty.

To Produce Bank Book.

It is expected that Mr. Stillman will take the stand on June 29. It was said that records of his personal bank accounts would probably be produced and that he will be questioned concerning various expenditures.

As a result of the cross examination of Dr. Hugh L. Russell, the Buffalo osteopath, on Friday, one of Mrs. Stillman's attorneys expressed belief that that part of his previous testimony concerning Mrs. Stillman's alleged confession of infidelity would be stricken from the record. Referee Gleason has a motion to this effect under consideration and will announce his decision at the resumption of the hearings.

With the presence of Mr. Stillman at "Mondanne," the Stillman Pleasantville, N. Y., estate, with Mrs. Stillman in January, 1918, Mr. Stillman's attempt to prove the illegitimacy of Guy will completely break down.

Clara in New York.

It was reported that "Clara," one of the two young women named in Mrs. Stillman's most recent amended answer, had returned to New York City, and was living under an assumed name in an apartment in the midtown section of the city. It was said that her whereabouts were known to some of Mrs. Stillman's agents.

Mrs. Stillman is expected to go Sunday or Monday to Princeton, N. J., for the Princeton university commencement exercises at which Harold Fowler McCormick of Chicago, a friend of Mrs. Stillman, and her eldest son, "Bud" Stillman, will be graduated. After the commencement exercises, Mrs. Stillman will probably attend some of the conferences of her attorneys at Yonkers and also make another visit to the home Mr. Mack at Poughkeepsie.

SUIT FOR DIVORCE NAMING DEMPSEY UP IN SEPTEMBER

Pawhuska, Okla., June 18.—[United Press.]—Hearing of the divorce petition of F. R. Boulanger, wealthy Osage Indian, in which he named "Jack Dempsey of Los Angeles" as a corespondent, and who, attorneys for the Indian say, is the pugilist, will be held during the September term of the District court, it was announced today.

The cross-petition of Mrs. Lily Boulanger, denying the allegations contained in her husband's petition and asking a divorce on the ground of extreme cruelty, also will be heard at that time.

Knows Dempsey, She Says.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 18.—[United Press.]—Mrs. Lily Boulanger today stated that she knew Dempsey.

Boulanger charged that his wife and Dempsey exchanged letters.

"I didn't write to Jack Dempsey, although I've known him since we were children," Mrs. Boulanger told the United Press. "We went to school together.

CLINNIN HEARS SMALL ACCEPTS HIS RESIGNATION

Word was received today that Col. John V. Clinnin's resignation from the Illinois national guard had been accepted. Mr. Clinnin is now first assistant to United States District Attorney Charles F. Clyne.

Mr. Clinnin stated that he sent in his resignation soon after Gov. Small took office because he was put on the unassigned list for political reasons.

"It was not a just reward for a man who has served the state continuously since 1894," he said. "I fought in the Spanish-American war, on the Mexican border, and commanded the One Hundred and Thirty-first infantry in France. Men have been given commands in the national guard who have not given war service to the country, in preference to veterans."

Col. Francis Parker was assigned to Mr. Clinnin's command when the latter was placed on the unassigned list.

The charge grew out of the purchase of stock by Blumenthal on the deferred payment plan.

OFFICE HOLDERS, TOO NUMEROUS, BORAH ASSERTS

Washington, D. C., June 18.—[Special.]—"Establishment of bureaus to supervise the health of the people means the beginning of the end of the republic," Senator Borah, Idaho, declared in a speech here today in an address before the Citizen's Protective association, which is opposed to the federal regulation of medicine.

Senator Borah took "too much government" as his text, declaring that "the time is coming when the government will not only control what you say but will control what you think."

"The time has come," he continued, "when we must fight to determine whether the country is to remain a republic or whether it is to become a bureaucracy. When Napoleon took charge of the French government he replaced the 200,000 government officials with a force of 5,000, who performed the same amount of work. I believe something like this performance could be duplicated in Washington."

The action was prompted by the Countess St. Claire de Contubia of Italy, daughter of Mrs. Griswold.

Not Even a Close Shave by Comet, Professor Says

New York, June 18.—[Special.]—Prof. Raymond Smith Dugan, who holds the chair of astronomy at Princeton university, assures those who have feared a smashup between this old earth and the Pons-Winnecke comet that nothing of that sort will happen. A trifle of 12,000,000 miles intervenes between the two at the nearest approach. Already it is farther away than that, and soon it will have passed out of our ken for another five years.

Fink, who said he is not accustomed to driving the new car, stepped on the self-starter while the car was in gear and the machine drove up over a half foot curb upon the sidewalk. Fink is held at the Central station.

"I had the right of way, and I sounded my horn," Fink said, "but the crowd would not give way before the automobile. As a result, I stalled my engine. I had been going in first speed, and in the excitement of the crowd about me I forgot to throw it out. I didn't realize when the accident happened that it was so serious."

ANDERSON MAY BE NAMED HEAD OF FARM PROBE

Washington, D. C., June 18.—[Special.]—Representative Anderson of Minnesota is expected to be named chairman of the joint congressional committee authorized to investigate the agricultural situation.

Representative Anderson outlined his views on the scope of the inquiry today.

"The investigation with which the commission is charged is both important and difficult," he said. "It is economic rather than political. As I have undertaken to visualize the problem, it seems to me that that problem resolves itself into finding the answer to the following questions:

"First, what is the relative position occupied by agriculture with respect to industry and commerce? Second, is agriculture receiving its fair proportion of the consumer's dollar?

"Third, is the system through which farm products are distributed from the farm to the consumer efficient or wasteful?"

THREE CITIZENS SEIZE FUGITIVE BOND JUMPER

Three citizens turned policemen and brought back to Chicago a man wanted for blowing a safe and jumping bonds. The man is Albert Bowman, 6307 Wentworth avenue. He was arrested six months ago when attempting to escape from police who had surprised him and two others leaving the Harvard theater, 6312 Harvard avenue. Bowman was held under $30,000 bonds. When the case was called he was missing.

Yesterday afternoon the man who signed the bond for Bowman and two friends were motoring near Benton Harbor. They stopped at a farmhouse to get a drink of water. To their surprise the man to accommodate was none other than Bowman. He seemed not to recognize them and while off his guard the three dragged him into the automobile and hurried back to Chicago.

BILL HAYWOOD GIVEN OVATION IN RED CAPITAL

RIGA, June 18.—[By the Associated Press.]—William D. Haywood, secretary-treasurer of the Industrial Workers of the World, who some time ago fled to Russia from the United States, was given an ovation by a public meeting of the delegates to the third internationale of Moscow, says the Izvestia of that city.

The audience stood and cheered, the newspaper asserts, when he was introduced as a man over whom a twenty year penal sentence was hanging at home. Haywood told the delegates that formerly oppressed Russians fled to America, but that now American workmen escape to truly free Russia, the Izvestia declares.

Kenosha, Wis., June 18.—Chief of Police Owen O'Hare, for twenty-five years a member of the police department of Kenosha and for many years chief of the department, president of the Wisconsin Chief of Police association and one of the best known police leaders of the state, was indicted by the grand jury today on many counts charging corrupt practices in his official life.

Arrested, Finishes His Dinner.

Chief O'Hare was arrested at his home by Sheriff William Rauen. "You can come down and report at the office," Rauen told the veteran chief. "I'll be right down," the chief replied, as he turned to his dinner again.

Three indictments are returned against O'Hare, with several counts in each indictment. One charges embezzlement, another malfeasance in office, with four counts, and the other receiving money under false pretenses.

Not Worried, He Says.

"I am neither surprised nor worried over this matter," Chief O'Hare said. "I had been expecting it. I have known for four days the trend of the grand jury investigation, and of course I knew I was under fire.

"I haven't read the indictment, but I will read it with care and give out some statement later. I have done nothing in my official career of which I am ashamed."

DRYS SPLIT OVER WAYS TO MAKE DRY LAWS DRY

Sponges Differ on Finding Path to Real Desert.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 18.—[Special.]—Prohibition forces which have fought side by side for years to make the country dry, split wide open today before the house rules committee over the question of tightening up the law for the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment. The rules committee had before it a demand for a special rule to rush through the Volstead supplementary prohibition bill as an emergency measure.

E. C. Dinwiddie, former chairman of the Anti-Saloon league legislative committee, told the committee he saw no necessity for such haste, except in so far as the bill related to prohibiting doctors from prescribing beer as medicine.

Mr. Dinwiddie's testimony aroused the ire of his old colleague, Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the league.

Sees Bill's Death Blow.

"Opposition to the merits of the bill is simply an attempt to kill it," Mr. Wheeler said. "Mr. Dinwiddie has not been with the Anti-Saloon league for more than a year, and in assuming to protect certain phases of the trade he is unwittingly portecting the illegal traffic. In opposing this bill Mr. Dinwiddie is in new company."

The new Volstead bill, broadly speaking, is divided into two parts. One part would prohibit the prescription of beer as medicine and the other part tightens up the restrictions on the use of alcohol for industrial purposes.

Mr. Dinwiddie argued for the division of these parts into two separate parts.

"Pass Crisis; Then Be Calm."

"It would be wiser to pass that which is emergency legislation and then to take up the other features," Dinwiddie said. "There are going to be other prohibition features proposed and a demand for the transfer of enforcement to the department of justice. There is plenty of authority under the law now to regulate use of industrial alcohol.

"I do not feel that I am betraying any confidence when I say that there are other matters in connection with prohibition enforcement to come before congress. There appears to be no question of the necessity of some legislation to meet the emergency and to stop the 'flood of beer' which it is said can shortly be expected."

Dinwiddie stated that he believed that Attorney General Palmer's beer ruling was a proper one, founded entirely upon the law, and that no sinister motives could be ascribed to the fact that it was handed down on the eve of his departure from office. The ruling, he explained, had been asked only ten days before that.

Industry Needs Alcohol.

He reaffirmed the belief that the nation's industries requiring alcohol were entitled to the fullest consideration.

Dr. M. C. Whitaker, vice president of the United States Industrial Alcohol company, said that prohibitionists were seeking to give the federal prohibition commissioner more power than the czar had over Russia.

"The czar was shot for exercising less power than you propose to give the commissioner under the bill," he said. "There is no excuse for imposing this arbitrary power on a single industry. The only booze fighters we have in our plants are the government employes."

W. L. Crouse of the National Perfume and Wholesale Druggists' association declared: "Liquor addicts will drink anything, including varnish, furniture polish, shellac, flavoring extract, and wood alcohol.

ROMANCE FADES

Mrs. Lucile Gosselin Solon and her son, John. Mrs. Solon, a daughter of Deputy City Controller Louis E. Gosselin, is seeking a divorce from Richard W. Solon, stepson of Michael J. Faherty, president of the board of local improvements. She says her husband left her the month they were married four years ago.

BIG WEDDING IN CITY HALL CIRCLE HAS DIVORCE END

Gosselin's Daughter Tells of Desertion.

A galaxy of pretty girls and 2,000 guests attended the wedding four years ago of Miss Lucile Gosselin, 735 Montrose avenue, daughter of Deputy City Controller Louis E. Gosselin, when she was married to Richard Walter Solon, stepson of President Michael Faherty of the board of local improvements, Mrs. Solon told Judge Harry Lewis in Superior court yesterday.

Mrs. Solon is now seeking a divorce and in her bill charges her husband deserted her the same month they were married.

"He paid just one month's rent after we were married," she told the court, "then he left me. We have not lived together since."

Sentenced to Bridewell.

After the separation Mrs. Solon had her husband taken into the Court of Domestic Relations. When the case came up for the third time he was sentenced to serve six months in the house of correction. The court had ordered him to pay her $17.50 a week alimony, but he failed to do so.

In April, 1919, Solon, who was then in the army and located at Camp Grant, was taken back to his barracks under arrest. He had been A. W. O. L. after a furlough, and was classed as a deserter.

"An army deserter, think of it!" said pretty Mrs. Solon at the time. "I did not mind when my baby's father deserted him and me and acted so despicably. I could stand that. But to think my baby has a father who would desert his country.

Sister Causes Capture.

"It was my clever young sister who caught Richard. We heard from Camp Grant that Richard was due in camp March 18 after a furlough. But he did not return.

"Gladys, my sister, saw that a show was going to be given at one of the downtown theaters, free to soldiers. She knew the word 'free' would attract Richard.

"A corporal from the camp was hunting for him, and when he arrived at the theater, there was Richard, big as life. He took him back to camp under guard."

Motor Boat Blows Up; at Least 1 Person Killed

New York, June 18.—One person, perhaps more, was killed today when a motor boat blew up in the lower bay. Witnesses to the explosion were unable to determine the number in the boat. Only a few bits of wreckage were found when other boats reached the scene.

CHIEFS DRAW UP WORKING RULES FOR BUILDERS

Landis' Wage Decision Is Expected This Week.

Prompt efforts to comply with Judge Landis' demand for agreement between building trades employers and unions on working rules, to guide him in settling the wage controversy, and announcement of another alleged combination—in the glass industry—to be investigated by the Dailey legislative committee, featured yesterday's developments in the building situation.

Following a lengthy conference, Thomas S. Kearney, president of the Building Trades council, and Edward M. Craig of the Building Construction Employers' association, said they had settled upon most of the rules affecting working conditions of building trades mechanics and laborers.

Landis Decision Late in Week.

A statement of the completed agreement, together with additional ones, binding all employes involved in the dispute, except the carpenters, will be submitted to Arbitrator Landis on or before Thursday, it is expected.

Judge Landis, it is predicted, will announce his decision late in the week as to what shall constitute a fair wage for building trades workers for the ensuing year.

Glass Industry Under Fire.

Joseph B. Fleming, counsel for the Dailey committee, said subpœnas were issued yesterday for officials of several glass manufacturing companies having main or branch offices in Chicago.

"Complaints reaching the committee," Mr. Fleming said, "charge that the price of plate glass throughout the United States is arbitrarily fixed by four concerns, all of which have offices in Chicago. There also is evidence that these manufacturers entered into agreements with labor unions similar to those disclosed in connection with the building trades."

Wants Action on Indictments.

F. E. Davidson, president of the Illinois Society of Architects, protested yesterday against the proposal of Assistant State's Attorney George Gorman to delay prosecution of indicted labor leaders until after the baseball cases are disposed of. He appealed to Attorney General Brundage to take a hand.

This year's sword was won by Cadet Captain Otto Kalteich.

MAYOR OF CORK BOBS UP IN ERIN, U.S. OFFICIAL SAYS

Washington, D. C., June 18.—[Special.]—Assistant Secretary of Labor Henning announced today that he was now at liberty to say that Donal O'Callaghan, the stowaway lord mayor of Cork, had left the United States.

No report of his departure had been received from any immigration official or port authority, Mr. Henning said, and no information in regard to the matter through any regular channel.

"O'Callaghan did not leave in the usual way," Mr. Henning said. "In fact, the manner of his departure was wholly irregular. But I have proof that he has gone."

Information in regard to O'Callaghan's movements was furnished by Michael Francis Doyle of Philadelphia, attorney for the lord mayor, who, upon the announcement that his client had landed in Ireland, today released Mr. Henning from his pledge of secrecy.

MEETS MAN HE THOUGHT HE HAD KILLED IN 1917

Kansas City, Mo., June 18.—[Special.]—A letter from Denver received today by I. H. Shatzer, manager of the Tool Supply company, from his half brother, Reuben E. Hall, contains the story of the latter's disappearance fourteen years ago. The letter was signed "Harry E. Thomas," the name assumed to avoid arrest.

When Hall, a young farmer near Paris, Mo., went to the Kansas harvest fields to work in 1907 he disappeared and was mourned as dead by his relatives. Recently Hall (now Thomas), while walking on a Denver street, met the man for whose murder he believed he was hunted, the letter states. The two recognized each other.

"I thought I killed you," Thomas gasped.

"Land, no," the "victim" replied. "I was only bruised a little."

The "victim," John Williamson, and Hall had fought over a crap game in a box car and Williamson fell from the train in the fight.

NEMESIS TRAILS PEGGY; 'OTHER GIRL'S' IN TOWN

Charlotte Johnson Aches to Get on Stand.

Violet eyed Peggy Upton Hopkins Joyce has a Nemesis in Charlotte Johnson, neophyte love of James Stanley Joyce, millionaire Chicago lumberman.

Yesterday Charlotte Johnson came to town and she is looking for Peggy. She intends to take the witness stand, if it is possible, at the next hearing of the Joyce case, and defend her own good name. As for Peggy, words fail to express what Charlotte would like to do to her.

"I am here for vengeance," she said in her elegantly furnished apartment in the Webster hotel, facing Lincoln park, where she engaged a suite of rooms. There she is registered as Mrs. Frank Gordon. Her husband is not with her, as she intends to fight it out with Peggy alone.

Why Charlotte Is in City.

At the last hearing of the Joyce suit for temporary alimony of $10,000 a month and $150,000 for solicitors' fees and expenses on Friday last, Judge Sabath in the Superior court stated that he would make a decision as to whether Peggy was to be brought to Chicago for oral examination on next Wednesday.

Later on in July he will decide whether she is to receive the temporary alimony she asks. It was because Charlotte expected Peggy to be here that she packed her suit case and took the train to Chicago to face the woman who she says caused her life to be ruined by dragging her name into the documentary evidence of the case.

Before Peggy Hopkins came into the life of Joyce in the summer of 1919, Charlotte had shared the affections of the millionaire lumberman with no one. Their romance had been ideal. For more than a year he had courted her. Peggy came and they were parted.

At that time Joyce lived with his mother, widow of William T. Joyce, pioneer lumberman and railroad builder of Clinton, Ia., who came to Chicago with his family in 1896 and took up his residence at 4614 Woodlawn avenue, in the heart of the exclusive residence district of Kenwood.

Beginning of Their Romance.

One day, it is related, a schoolboy friend of Joyce introduced him to Charlotte Johnson.

She had come from the home of her parents in Hackensack, N. J., to study music and art in Chicago. Her home was not far from Joyce's, as she had rented a tastefully furnished apartment in the Shirley building, 4164 Drexel boulevard.

At first Joyce is said to have visited her only at the urging of his boyhood friend, who had introduced them, but when he discovered his friend's attentions were otherwise engaged he visited Charlotte every evening for more than fourteen months. But at no time did he ever stay later than 10 o'clock, the building superintendent says, unless they went downtown to the theater, and when the play was over he hurried her home in his machine.

Charlotte never knew what came between her and Joyce until she learned of his engagement to Peggy. Soon after that she left town. A few months before Joyce and Peggy were married she went to Detroit, where she married her present husband. Later they went to New York, where her husband entered the dry goods business

BEAR-TOE STUBS HIS TOE ON OUR RED MOONSHINE

But Learns Why His Fathers Lost Lands.

Bear-Toe, Sioux tribe brave, lately come from Montana plains, has forgiven his ancestors.

Gone is bitterness that tales of their folly engendered in his heart early in life and made it black. Vanished is the spoiled spot in his soul. Contempt that was almost hate has given way to a cleansing understanding.

For, at last, Bear-Toe knows. And with knowledge has come a sweet sadness.

Frightened Woman Calls Cops.

Mrs. Bernice Jellison, 1702 North La Salle street, was startled from a sweltering sleep early yesterday morning. Tiptoeing to the head of the stairs, she switched on lights below.

"Ugh!" came a mumbled but prompt protest.

Pausing only for the conventional scream, Mrs. Jellison groped her way to a hall telephone and shrieked an S. O. S. to the East Chicago avenue police. Lieut. John Martin and squad responded.

"Well?" challenged Lieut. Martin as he entered the open front door and was confronted by Bear-Toe, propping up a fairly substantial stair pillar.

"How!" grunted the brave, with no show of effusive affability.

Bear-Toe Stubs His Toe.

Lieut. Martin is a prying sort of person. He wanted to know how Bear-Toe came to be in a strange house without so much as a front door welcome mat explaining his presence.

O, was that all? Bear-Toe unsphinxed his face and waxed almost loquacious. He had journeyed hither from Poplar, Mont., in search of Red Cloud, who had shrugged the blankets servations.

and had come to Chicago, where he had gained recognition as a musician.

Early in the evening some one had crowded him from the sidewalk into a saloon at West Division and North Wells streets. Two palefaces had pressed a small glass before him, and Bear-Toe had looked on it—and it was red.

An Old Problem Solved.

As for the rest, Bear-Toe was a bit hazy. But later his brain cleared by a good sleep in the cool cell. He was at rest on one point that had been a life puzzle to him. Why had his forefathers bartered away the lands that should have been his heritage? Why had they let the white man cheat them?

He had come a long way, but he had been repaid. The answer to the question that had tormented him was—

Firewater!—Chicago moonshine.

REBUILD FACE OF HERO WHO LOST VOICE IN WAR; SPEAKS AGAIN

Washington, D. C., June 18.—[Special.]—Ralph M. Bowman, vocational education student, whose vocal cords were destroyed in the world war, can talk again after being speechless for two years, it was announced today by the federal board for vocational education.

Bowman was wounded in France Dec. 3, 1918, by shell fire. His vocal cords were destroyed, and part of his chin was torn away by a shell fragment lodging in front of the vertebra at the base of the neck.

He was sent to a St. Louis institute for the deaf and dumb. There his jaw was straightened with metal casts. A perfect set of lower teeth, with imitation gums, was made. A plastic operation on his chin left only a trace of scar, and the patient learned to talk again by using auxiliary muscles.

CUBANS MAY BUY SUGAR CROP AND DISTRIBUTE IT

HAVANA, June 18.—A project to purchase, with $40,000,000 in bonds, Cuba's surplus sugar by the government, which then will dispose of this surplus on long term credits to foreign countries unable to buy in the open market because of financial conditions, was discussed at today's meeting of the cabinet with President Alfred Zayas.

The bonds would bear 6 per cent, mature in twenty years, and be guaranteed by a tax of 36 cents on each sack of elaborated sugar produced in the republic.

AUTOIST IN ACCIDENT FREED.

BRITISH TROOPS OCCUPY RATIBOR IN SILESIA PUSH

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, June 18.—British troops have occupied Ratibor, relieving that German city after it had undergone three weeks' artillery bombardment by the Polish insurgents. The British also have occupied Zlena, a suburb of Kattowitz, the coal capital of Upper Silesia. As the British are within marching distance of Kattowitz, the breakdown of the Korfanty régime is expected hourly.

POLES AND GERMANS AGREE.

BERLIN, June 18.—[By the Associated Press.]—An agreement has been reached between the German volunteers in Upper Silesia, the Polish insurgents, and the interallied commission in Oppeln under which the Germans and Poles will begin a withdrawal tomorrow, it was learned from an interallied representative in Upper Silesia who arrived here today.

The evacuated territory will be occupied by joint contingents of British, French, and other allied troops.

HELD ON SERIOUS CHARGE.

Charles Salsord, 913 Rush street, was held to the grand jury in bonds of $1,000 by Judge Joseph W. Schulman yesterday on complaint of Mrs. Felomina Loica, who said he forced his way into her home at 2312 West Van Buren street and attempted to abuse her.

BAR ASSOCIATION TO SELECT VOTE FRAUD ATTORNEY

Declaring all is in readiness to push the 400 alleged cases of fraudulent voting at the judicial election two weeks ago, Attorney General Brundage yesterday told representatives of the Chicago Bar association he will appoint as special prosecutor any attorney the association names.

Col. John V. Clinnin, head of the fraud division of the association, and Attorney Amos Miller held a conference with the attorney general with reference to the alleged violations, and Mr. Brundage suggested to them that the bar association appoint a committee of three to name a special prosecutor. This attorney will be appointed a special assistant attorney general by Mr. Brundage.

The bar association had investigators in every precinct in the city on judicial election day, and Col. Clinnin has gathered evidence against more than 400 persons who are alleged to have violated the election laws. A special grand jury will be asked to handle the cases.

To the Public

On June 7th I inserted an advertisement in a number of newspapers offering to pay $1,000 to any one who could give me one good reason why the revolver manufacturing industry should be allowed to exist in America, and enjoy the facilities of the mails. Many excellent letters have been received, but no good reason has been given, nor will there be, for there is no good reason.

To show my good faith in this publicity I will now give $200.00 in prizes for the four best letters sent in before July 1st, giving reasons why the revolver manufacturing industry should not be allowed to exist.

An unbiased committee will award the prizes as follows: $100 to be paid to the writer of the best letter, $50 for the second best letter, $25 for the third best letter and $25 for the fourth best letter.

Awards will be announced on the Fourth of July in this newspaper, and checks will be mailed to the successful contestants at that time.

FRANCE ADOPTS UNION PLAN TO MARKET CROPS

Sees Way to Offset Labor Shortage.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, June 18.—The efforts of the American farmers to found a co-operative selling organization for their grain and other produce is attracting attention in France. Outside of North American the French farmer most nearly approaches the American farmer in all the conditions of his life. But, although he even surpasses his American cousin in the efficiency and extent of his coöperative operations, he has failed in many attempts to set up a selling market of his own.

France has no board of trade where prices are fixed for grain as they are in Chicago. Theoretically, the French farmer depends on Chicago or Antwerp for his grain prices. But actually he is at the mercy of an army of brokers who tour the farming districts buying the grain at the lowest price they can get it for and shipping it to warehouses or flour mills.

Membership Lacks Cohesion.

The efforts to organize the selling for large associations of farmers invariably have failed because individuals will sell out from under their organization and defeat its purpose.

There are, however, some striking differences in the American situation—the chief one being the millions of bushels of surplus wheat, corn, and other grains produced in the United States each year, the handling of which in lumps could not be greatly affected, it seems, by individual defections. There is little surplus production in France, although the farm production per capita is the largest in western Europe.

Farm Hands Are Scarce.

In certain regions of France, in order to cope with lack of farm hands, farmers are forced to associate themselves for mechanical cultivation of the fields, as individually they could not afford motor driven machinery.

Latest statistics give the number of agricultural unions in France as 6,178, with 976,000 members. The figures for 1913, which are the latest available, state that the total business turnover was 300,000,000 francs.

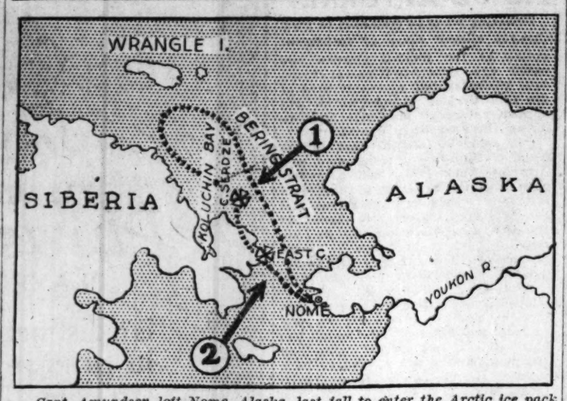
Considering the increase in prices and the relation of the pre-war gold franc to the present paper franc, pre-war turnover estimates could be multiplied by four or four and a half to reach the present turnover.

Unions Protect Farmers.

The unions have rescued the farmers from the grips of jobbers and middle men, and, chiefly, from exploitation by fertilizer dealers. All fertilizer now is chemically analyzed by the farmers' union, thus preventing fraudulent substitutes.

Also the unions are teaching the usage of motor driven farm machinery and instructing the farmers in intensive agriculture through pamphlets and circulars.

DRIFT TO NORTH POLE FAILS



Capt. Amundsen left Nome, Alaska, last fall to enter the Arctic ice pack and drift across the north pole.

The dotted line shows the approximate course of his ship, the Maud E., in the Arctic ocean north of Siberia since last fall.

1—According to latest reports, his ship was disabled in the ice off Cape Serge, Siberia.

QUEEN MARY TO ACCOMPANY KING ON ULSTER VISIT

BELFAST, June 18.—Sir James Craig, Ulster's premier, today received a telegram stating that Queen Mary will accompany the king on his visit to Belfast for the opening of the Ulster parliament next Wednesday.

DISORDERS NEAR DUBLIN

BY HUGH CURRAN.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

DUBLIN, June 18.—John Coburn and John Reive, two recruits to the royal Irish constabulary, were found guilty by a court martial today of murdering James Whalen in his home on the night of Dec. 20, 1920. Sentence has not yet been passed.

Five coast guard stations between Malahide and Dublin were destroyed this morning by republicans, who helped the guards save their personal belongings after disarming them.

Irish Attack Police.

Dublin castle reports that auxiliaries traveling in four motor lorries were attacked in County Cork last night. The lorries struck a land mine, which exploded and killed two auxiliaries and injured four. Subsequently the auxiliaries were attacked by over 200 republicans, who fired rifles and shotguns from behind stone walls.

One auxiliary went to Millstreet after reinforcements, but the attackers withdrew before the fresh troops arrived. Auxiliaries scoured the country after the fighting and found one rebel dead. Three others are also believed to have been killed.

AMUNDSEN IS RESCUED AFTER YEAR IN THE ICE

Nome, Alaska, June 17.—Roald Amundsen, the explorer, whose ship, the Maude, wintered off Cape Serge, Siberia, arrived in Nome today and will leave for Seattle on the first steamer, he announced. The Maude lost a propellor in the ice during the winter, and will be towed to Seattle this summer for repairs.

The explorer, noted for his discovery of the south pole and his many Arctic and Antarctic voyages, said he would continue his efforts to reach the north pole by drifting with Arctic ice floes as soon as repairs to his vessel were completed.

He spent the winter on board the Maude with one native and three white companions, and said the party experienced few vicissitudes. He reached Nome on the trading schooner Herman, which picked him up at East Cape, Siberia.

WANTS TO TRY AGAIN.

CHRISTIANIA, Norway, June 18.—The storthing has received a telegram from Capt. Roald Amundsen, the Norwegian explorer. The message, which was sent from Nome, Alaska, requested that 300,000 croner be furnished for refitting the explorer's ship, the Maude, in order that he might continue his arctic expedition.

Villa's Reform Grows; He's a Rural Patriarch

Washington, D. C., June 18.—An official report today from a government agent who recently visited Francisco Villa's farm in Mexico said the former bandit was living contentedly among 800 of his followers, who now form a farming community on about 500,000 acres of land in northern Durango.

Villa is regarded by the colonists as chief and instructor, and the agent said he had taught honest work to hundreds of former marauders.

"BIG TWO" BUSY ON PLAN TO END GRECO-TURK WAR

Curzon and Briand Are Near Accord.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, June 18.—A compromise scheme for avoiding a resumption of the Greco-Turkish war was explained to Premier Briand by Lord Curzon, the British foreign minister, today. The British proposals embody the original French plan for returning Smyrna to Turkey and provides for an autonomous state in East Thrace, which Frank Polk advocated before the United States withdrew from the supreme council.

The British propose to appease the Greeks through government loans, recognition and support of King Constantine's government, and a guarantee of the execution of the revised Sevres treaty.

Asks France to Use Lever.

Lord Curzon seeks French coöperation by proposing that Athens and Angora each make concessions, with a threat that Anglo-French aid be given to whichever side shows conciliation against the party remaining obdurate and stubborn.

Lord Curzon's offer indicates that Constantine has privately assured the British of his willingness to abandon Smyrna in return for financial aid, as the Turks have always insisted on retaining Smyrna.

The British foreign secretary indicated that Great Britain is prepared to aid navally either the Greeks or the Turks, whichever displays a conciliatory spirit or seeks to avert warfare.

Briand May Accept.

Premier Briand indicated the French would not participate militarily on behalf of either side, but he agreed in principle that French moral support would be extended to whoever was not responsible for a resumption of the warfare.

The conference will be resumed tomorrow.

The Italian ambassador to France was acquainted with the British proposals this evening.

CLAIMS COUNCIL O.K. ON BOND CASH OUTLAY USELESS

Mayor's Ally Takes New Tack on Experts.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

A quick move was made in the council finance committee yesterday which may be used in an attempt to block the recovery by tax payers of $2,742,000 paid five city building and real estate experts last year. Ald. Louis B. Anderson, Lundin-Thompson council leader, took a leading part in initiating the suggestion.

ALD. LOUIS B. ANDERSON.

It came during a discussion of requests for appropriations sought by the board of local improvements from the bond funds for six street improvements. In the list were requests for $1,605,000 for building experts and $275,000 which may be used for real estate experts.

This is in addition to $1,004,000 already paid Austin J. Lynch and Frank H. Mesce as building specialists and $1,738,000 paid Arthur S. Merigold, Ernest H. Lyons and Edward C. Waller Jr., as real estate experts.

The "nerve" of the proposal threw several aldermen into a rage.

Wacker Won't Give Estimate.

"I won't move a damned inch—I won't vote a dollar, until I get some information on what these improvements will eventually cost," almost shoulted Ald. Woodhull.

Charles H. Wacker declined to give the committee an estimate. He is head of the Chicago plan commission and was called before the committee primarily to answer that question. The committee has been seeking the same information from President Faherty of the board of local improvements for months.

"You have no authority to appropriate," said Ald. L. B. Anderson.

"Never before did the board attempt to spend without appropriation," declared Woodhull. "Last year we appropriated $200,000 for building experts and the board spend $1,000,000."

"In attempting to appropriate you are borrowing a lot of trouble," Anderson urged.

"Do you say the council does not need to appropriate?" snapped Ald. Schwartz.

Holds No Appropriation Necessary.

"Absolutely no need," Anderson replied.

"I move that no appropriation be made and we ask the corporation counsel for an opinion on the question: 'Can the board make legal expenditures or create valid obligations against these bond funds without first obtaining an appropriation from the city council?'" said Schwartz.

"I second that motion," cried Anderson, jumping up from his chair.

It was decided to require that opinion by 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

The Anderson contention was that of the lawyers defending the mayor, city controller, Faherty and the building experts in the suit brought by The Tribune company.

Expect Ettelson to Agree.

By 2 o'clock Monday Mayor Thompson, Fred Lundin, Senator Ettelson, and others of the city hall threes will have returned from Springfield, ready to try to line up votes for action in accordance with the opinion of the corporation counsel.

Lawyers for the city and Mayor Thompson yesterday served notice on McCormick, Kirkland, Patterson & Fleming, attorneys for taxpayers who have filed suits in the federal court to recover all money paid the five experts, that they will ask tomorrow for a continuance of time within which to file answer to these suits.

Amounts Asked by Board.

In the request of the council committee for bond appropriations the board of local improvements asked for $60,000 to be spent for building experts on Ogden avenue, $120,000 on South Water street, $300,000 on Western avenue, $650,000 on Ashland avenue, and $475,000 on Robey street.

For expert services and commissioners' fees, from which real estate experts are paid, the board asked $50,000 on each street except Western avenue, where $75,000 is sought.

For special counsel $27,000 was asked each on Ogden, Ashland, and Western avenues, $12,000 on South Water street, and $4,000 on Robey street. It was indicated that no construction whatever is contemplated on Robey street this year. This despite the fact that the city controller proposes to sell $3,245,000 worth of Robey street bonds next Tuesday.

PARKS KIDS MAKE MERRY

Dorothy Doetz and Margaret Gilmore as Dutch dancers.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Eight hundred children from the sixteen neighborhood parks under control of the South Park commissioners held their first annual festival yesterday in the south meadow of Washington Park, opposite East 57th street. It was a veritable three ringed circus, with games, dances and drills for two hours.

There were balloon dancers, jumping jacks, and May pole dancers from Hardin square and Teddy bear, Dixie, and foursome reel dancers from Mark White square. Maids of mirth came from Fuller Park to thrill the spectators, while many other features from Armour, Russell and Davis square were produced.

Among the other parks which participated were Cornell square, McKinley park, and Palmer park.

U. S. AND MEXICO NEGOTIATIONS AT A STANDSTILL

Obregon Fails to Accept Hughes Treaty.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., June 18.—[Special.]—Negotiations between the United States and Mexico on the basis of the proposed treaty of amity and commerce, submitted by direction of Secretary of State Hughes, cannot be regarded as having reached a satisfactory stage and are virtually at a standstill as a result of President Obregon's disinclination to enter upon such a treaty with the United States government.

There is no indication that the virtual deadlock that has existed since Gen. Obregon replied to the American proposal of such a treaty is about to be broken. The door to an eventual settlement and accommodation has not been entirely closed, but the status of the negotiations is not such as to give encouragement to officials familiar with the difficulties and intricacies of the situation.

Takes Wise Stand.

Editorial comment in Mexico City newspapers and speeches delivered in the Mexican chamber of deputies since the negotiations between George T. Summerlin, the American charge d'affaires, and Gen. Obregon began, confirms the wisdom of the American government's stand, according to the view taken among officials in Washington. These speeches and articles, it was emphasized, show that there are distinct differences of opinion existing among Mexican leaders themselves as to whether article 27 of the Mexican constitution of 1917 should be interpreted as having a retroactive effect.

There is also difference of opinion among Mexican leaders on the question whether the Mexican congress or President Obregon has the authority to put the provisions of the Carranza constitution into effect. When the Mexican leaders themselves seem divided over the manner in which the property rights of Americans and other foreigners in Mexico are to be treated under the constitution of 1917, it was asserted today, the United States government should not be criticized for insisting upon having a clear cut statement of binding character from Mexico as to what she intends to do, whether she intends to safeguard or to confiscate validly acquired American property rights in Mexico before recognition is accorded.

Reply to Obregon.

It became known for the first time today that the announcement of the American government's position, as made public by the state department on June 7 by Secretary Hughes, was in reality the reply of the United States government to the communication from Gen. Obregon which reached Washington on June 3.

This statement has been delivered to the Mexican government by the American chargé and constitutes the only reply of the United States to the Obregon communication of June 3. Since the delivery of the Hughes statement to Gen. Obregon the only communication between the two governments has been informal reports by Mr. Summerlin of his conversations with Alberto Pani, the Mexican minister of foreign affairs.

PREFERS JAIL TO PAYING ALIMONY; GETS SIX MONTHS

Alvian Holem, 10433 Avenue M, would rather stay in jail than pay his wife $135 a month alimony, he told Judge Kickham Scanlan yesterday. He had been cited to show cause why he should not obey the court's order in a divorce decree granted when his wife, Emilie, told the court he had threatened to shoot her.

"Six months in the county jail" was the judge's answer.

Holem is a conductor on the Belt Railway company.

ARREST GIRL AS THIEF.

Detroit, Mich., June 18.—Joseph Duscki, 16, and Marguerite Balis, 20, were arrested today in police raids on an alleged band of box car thieves. Loot valued at $18,000 has been recovered, police said.

Ride with us in "America's Most Comfortable Car"

MERE words cannot describe the smooth and wonderful comfort of driving in the Holmes. There is only one way to know this supreme quality, and that is by riding in the car itself—over rutty roads, over cobblestones, or over "choppy" pavements. For the Holmes is at its best where roads are at their worst.

That is why we invite you, when asking for a demonstration, to let us first drive you in any other car you say before stepping into the Holmes. It is then you will most appreciate those things about the Holmes which make it "America's Most Comfortable Car." And when you return from your first Holmes ride you will say that you never before knew such enjoyable service—such speed with comfort—could be built into a motor car.

ARTISTS PRAISE TRIBUNE'S PRIZE FOR MURAL ART

Say It Opens Big Field for Young Painters.

Leading Chicago artists and officials of the Art institute were enthusiastic yesterday over THE TRIBUNE'S announcement of a $5,000 prize for a design for a mural painting with which to embellish its city room. All commended the plan, which they say will greatly encourage the work of mural painters and lead architects and designers to think of decorations for other buildings.

The plan as announced by THE TRIBUNE is to give a prize of $5,000 for the design which shall prove most suitable and express pictorially and spiritually the significant phases and episodes in the history of journalism. In furtherance of the plan the Chicago Art institute, the largest art school in the world, has offered ten scholarships to painters who take up work on THE TRIBUNE design. The scholarships will be rewarded on a competitive basis.

Will Encourage U. S. Artists.

"I think it is the most wonderful plan I ever heard of," said Miss Pauline Palmer, an artist. "By patronizing American artists the competition will greatly encourage the work of the craft and broaden the field for them. Then again it will make builders think about decorations in the construction of their buildings.

"One of the last things, if not the last thing, they think about in America when putting up a building is the artist and the sculptor, while in Europe it is just the opposite."

Means Great Impetus to School.

"THE TRIBUNE mural prize of $5,000 will be a great impetus to the art school of the Art institute," said Robert B. Harshe, associate director of the institute and head of the school. "The strongest young painters in the country will undoubtedly enter the school next year, primarily to compete for this prize.

"In Washington, not long ago, I sat next to E. W. Blashfield, dean of American mural painters, and told him of THE TRIBUNE'S offer. He thought it a marvelous opportunity for the young painter and contrasted the enlightened attitude of THE TRIBUNE with the general attitude of the American public when he, as a young man, made his first attempts at decoration. 'Any of us,' he said, 'Hunt or Mowbray or Frank Millet or Cox, would have jumped at the chance to do such a scheme for nothing.'"

"It was necessary for us to go to Europe and become known abroad before we were allowed to do any murals at home. Undoubtedly Chicago will become a great art center'."

Largest Prize Ever Offered.

"This is probably the largest prize ever offered in an art school in the United States—and possibly in any country," said George William Eggers, director of the Art institute. "Its form is a recognition on the part of THE TRIBUNE of the pioneer work done by the school of art, which was among the first, if not the very first in this country to give practical and applied courses in mural decoration. THE TRIBUNE, with this great project, is teaching a lesson of beauty to the whole country."

Opens Mural Art Field Here.

"THE TRIBUNE'S generous offer has opened the way for the ambitious young mural painter," said J. Allen St. John, an artist. "Up to the present time the young mural painter hasn't had much to look forward to in America. THE TRIBUNE'S plan will change all this."

"THE TRIBUNE'S prize is a most generous proposition and it is of the utmost significance in the art world," Clarence Hough, controller of the Art institute, said. "Its immediate importance is, of course, apparent to every one and it will be conceded at once that it is one of the greatest inspirations ever offered in the field of art."

Under the terms of the plan, the $5,000 prize is to be given for the best design for the embellishment of the room. The actual execution of the work is a different matter. It will give to the successful contestant a contract which conservative estimates state will take at least two years to complete. All structural changes necessary will be made by THE TRIBUNE at its own expense and will not figure in the estimates for the purely decorative features of the undertaking.

Chicago Council, K. of C., Plans Its Silver Jubilee

Survivors of the original class of twenty-three initiated at the first meeting of pioneer Chicago council, No. 182, Knights of Columbus, met with the committee on arrangements for the silver jubilee banquet July 7 yesterday at the Elks club. Judge Hugh J. Kearns, Dr. Dennis P. Russell, Edmund C. Cummings, George V. McIntyre, Raymond Cardona, and Charles E. Connelly were the charter members present.

Mrs. Rowe Defends $10.75 Per Day Taxicab Bills

Mrs. Louise Osborne Rowe, Mayor Thompson's commissioner of public welfare, doesn't think $10.75 a day for taxicab fare for her work is excessive. She said so yesterday after the council finance committee, startled by her six months' taxi bill of $1,971.51, had cut her appropriation for cabs to $500 a year, or $1.37 a day. "I did use the cabs frequently," she said, "because I have to do the work of three or four people."

DRUG VICTIM

Three Men Held After Poisoned Girl Is Found in Loop Hotel.

MRS. ZENOS HOYNE.

MAN CONFESSES HE GAVE DRUG TO STRICKEN GIRL

Following a confession that he gave two doses of morphine to Mrs. Helen Jensen Hoyne, 22 year old wife of Zenos Hoyne, 940 North Wells street, Morris Silverman of 1658 Clifton Park avenue, a salesman, will be booked on a serious charge, the police say.

Mrs. Hoyne was taken from the New Tremont hotel to the county hospital yesterday suffering from poisoning. She may die.

Silverman, Frank Landau, 4359 Grand boulevard, and Elmer Lauerston, who lives at the hotel, were held by the police.

Silverman told Lieut. John Wolf of the central station that he was in his sister's automobile when he flirted with the girl at Dearborn and Monroe streets Friday night. He said she took him to room 246 in the New Tremont.

Silverman says the girl told him she wanted to die and he gave her morphine. He said she was an addict.

Silverman, Landau, and Lauerston took the girl to the hospital.

Mrs. Mary Jensen stated her daughter was married a year ago and now she is suing her husband for divorce.

"Until four days ago," the mother said, "she was employed somewhere downtown. Last night she sent home a bathing suit, with a note saying she would stay at the home of a friend for the night."

DAILY NEWS NEW SANITARIUM TO OPEN THIS WEEK

A solid week of public entertainment, beginning tomorrow afternoon, will mark the dedication of the new Daily News fresh air fund sanitarium in Lincoln park. Stars from several current theatrical productions in Chicago have volunteered their services and will be heard on successive afternoons of the week. Band and orchestra concerts have been arranged for the evenings.

The thirty-fifth season of the fresh air fund will commence Monday, June 27.

The new sanitarium, which is located at Fullerton avenue and the lake, is directly east of the structure it replaces. It is of brick, concrete and steel fireproof construction, with an open air pavilion overlooking the lake. In the pavilion there will be more than 200 baby beds.

The hospital building is equipped for the care of babies according to the most modern standards. It is a pioneer in free baby clinic work. When it was organized thirty-four years ago, there was only one other free fresh air clinic. That was in Boston, but was closed shortly after the Daily News fresh air fund sanitarium was built on what was then the lake shore in Lincoln park.

Improvement plans of the north side park brought into being Simmons island, which became the new site of the sanitarium, of which Dr. Rhoda Pike Barstow is superintendent.

DENBY APPOINTS NEW CHIEFS FOR DIVIDED FLEETS

Retain Daniels' Policy, Intimation.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 18.—[Special.]—That the new naval administration has no present intention of reuniting the American battle fleets was evidenced today when Secretary Denby announced the appointment of new commanders and vice commanders of the Atlantic and Pacific fleets and stated that he would soon make public a statement covering redistribution of ships between the two fleets.

How far the contemplated redistribution of ships may go toward a reunited fleet was not indicated at the navy department. This issue has been a grave one ever since the order dividing the fleet was issued by former Secretary Daniels.

Not Navy's Affair Alone.

The unwisdom of maintaining the battle force divided has been under consideration since the beginning of the Harding administration. Some weeks ago officials gave strong intimations that the issue was not one for the navy department alone to decide and that there were international problems involved which made the fleet policy of the government a matter of major consideration for the president and all his executive advisers.

Whether the issue has been settled finally could not be definitely ascertained, but the indications in official quarters are that the redistribution announcement will constitute the only change in policy contemplated at this time.

Jones, East; Eberle, West.

Secretary Denby in his statement today announced that Vice Admiral Hilary P. Jones, now second in command, will command the Atlantic fleet with rank of admiral, succeeding Admiral Henry B. Wilson, and that Rear Admiral Edward W. Eberle, now commanding battleship force No. 7 of the Atlantic fleet, will command the Pacific fleet with rank of admiral, succeeding Admiral Hugh Rodman.

Rear Admiral John D. McDonald, now commandant of the New York navy yard, is designated to be vice admiral of the Atlantic fleet.

Rear Admiral W. R. Shoemaker, now commandant of the 14th naval district, Hawaii, is named vice admiral of the Pacific fleet.

Other Changes Announced.

The following changes in station were announced by the secretary: Capt. C. T. Vogelgesang to be commandant of the New York navy yard; Capt. T. A. Kearney to be manager of the New York navy yard; Rear Admiral Philip Andrews to be commandant of the Norfolk navy yard—these assignments take effect June 30, 1921.

Capt. Noble E. Irwin will assume command of the Portsmouth navy yard on July 9, 1921, and Capt. A. L. Willard is assigned as aid for navy yards to the secretary of the navy.

SEEKS DIVORCE

Wife of Clubman Changes Suit for Separation Started After Actress Who Tried Suicide Named Him as Friend.

MRS. GORDON THORNE.

GORDON THORNE'S WIFE NOW ASKS FOR A DIVORCE

Gordon C. Thorne, clubman and stock broker, grandson of one of the millionaire founders of Montgomery Ward & Co., and one of the heirs to the estate, was sued for divorce yesterday in Superior court.

GORDON THORNE.

Mrs. Virginia Miller Thorne, who, since their separation, has been living at the Blackstone hotel, filed a bill for separate maintenance some time ago. This bill yesterday was changed to a plea for divorce.

The breach of the socially prominent couple started some time ago when a young actress slashed her wrists with a safety razor blade in the Hotel Sherman. Gordon "Monk" Thorne, the actress said, had slighted her by inviting another girl friend to dinner in the hotel with them. The actress asserted Mrs. Thorne had introduced her to Thorne.

Mrs. Thorne denied she had introduced the pair and declared "they could not hide behind her skirts."

In her plea for separate maintenance Mrs. Thorne averred her husband was worth $500,000 and that his income was $50,000 a year. Thorne denied he was worth any such amount.

Thorne and his wife were childhood sweethearts. After leaving college they met by chance in New York. That day Gordon Thorne told his friend, Townsend Netcher, son of the owner of a loop department store, that he had met the prettiest girl in the world, and bet Netcher $2,000 he would win her for his bride. Netcher took the bet and paid it at the altar six months later.

During the war Thorne was a lieutenant in the aviation corps.

WIRTH EXPOSES BAVARIAN PLOT FOR REVOLUTION

Statement Causes a Riot in Reichstag.

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, June 18.—The Bavarian monarchists had prepared a revolutionary coup d'état for the purpose of overthrowing the Berlin government. In the midst of the preparations came the assassination of Diet Member Karl Gareis, an independent socialist leader. This sensational information was confirmed officially yesterday afternoon when Chancellor Wirth addressed the reichstag in answer to an interpellation about the assassination.

"I have known for weeks," the chancellor said, "that reactionary groups in Bavaria and other states in south Germany were preparing a revolutionary coup. Simultaneously the Bavarian press began a campaign of hatred and ill will against the government which was not in the nature of the usual political attack."

Fights in Reichstag.

Dr. Wirth's declarations caused a sensation in the reichstag, where previously had occurred the most tumultuous scenes since the revolution, when party members en massé had attacked each other and many blows were struck.

Dr. Wirth lashed the nationalist party bitterly, blaming them for inspiring the Bavarian reactionary movement.

The chancellor decried the "dirty attacks" made upon him and President Ebert.

"As a result of these reactionary attacks upon the heads of the German government both the president and myself have received numerous letters threatening our lives," he said.

Optimistic on War Bill.

Continuing to talk about conciliation both within and without the nation Dr. Wirth said a better spirit was necessary among all the parties, then there would be no difficulty in fulfilling the reparations terms.

"Germany only can be saved by a democratic spirit and a reconciliatory attitude not only to the foreign nations, but within the country itself," declared the chancellor.

In the afternoon fist battles took place between the different parties, especially the Communists and Nationalists, and the reichstag's women members, who have hardly ever said a word, suddenly found some means of expression. Two leading women, one Communist and one Nationalist, by mounting chairs and pleading for the restoration of order and later by getting between the battling factions, helped to pacify them.

MEDICAL FRATERNITY PLEDGED MEMBERS' BODIES TO SCIENCE

Pi Upsilon Rho, the oldest national medical fraternity, will meet in Washington, D. C., from June 19 to 24. Dr. A. H. Gordon, former national president; Dr. L. F. McClenathan, national vice president and president of the Chicago chapter, and Dr. C. D. Colins, corresponding secretary of the Chicago chapter, will attend as delegates from this city.

DR. L. F. McCLENATHAN. [Gibson, Sykes & Fowler Photo.]

The fraternity was organized in 1876, its first secretary-treasurer being a Chicagoan, Dr. E. S. Bailey. Five junior medics, with weird rites, started the fraternity, and after a wild orgy there developed the nucleus of the present world-wide order, with 3,000 alumni. These five madcaps took awful vows that night in behalf of science, the principal one being the pledge that their bodies after death all should go to the dissecting table. Cremation was to follow.

COUNTRY-WIDE DRAGNET OUT FOR KABER SUSPECT

Cleveland, O., June 18.—A search that may reach across the country has been started for Vittorio Pisselli of Cleveland, indicted with Salvatore Cala of Cleveland by the county grand jury today for first degree murder of Daniel F. Kaber in his Lakewood home nearly two years ago.

Cala was arrested near Buffalo, N. Y., yesterday and is being held there awaiting extradition.

The indictments today places the number now charged with first degree murder at six, the other four being Mrs. Eva Catherine Kaber, widow of the slain man; Miss Marian McArdle, daughter; Mrs. Mary Brickel, mother of Mrs. Kaber, and Mrs. Erminia Colavito, midwife and alleged poisoner.

Emphatic denial to parts of Cala's confession were made today by Miss McArdle and Mrs. Colavito. Mrs. Kaber said she was not interested in Cala's confession and had no comment to make.

New National G. O. P. Chief Meets Two Colleagues Here

John T. Adams of Dubuque, Ia., newly elected chariman of the Republican national committee, arrived in Chicago yesterday en route home. At the Congress hotel he met two fellow members of the national committee, Joseph B. Kealing of Indianapolis and former Senator Patrick Sullivan of Wyoming.

CROP FAILURES AND PESTILENCE IN FAMINE WAKE

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
(Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.)

TINGCHOW, Chihli, China, June 18.—In the wake of China's famine comes a new series of crop failures and an epidemic of typhus and cholera. The welfare workers here show much concern and are preparing to combat this new distress.

The spring harvest failed in a considerable section of the province of Chihli, notably around Tingchow and Chengtingfu. These areas comprise thirty-two counties, which have a total destitute population of 1,150,000 persons.

As a beginning, fifteen new distribution stations are being opened, their activities to last until the autumn harvest. Other relief stations throughout the famine area will be closed, there having been fair crops in those regions.

Rations Save 8,000,000.

It is impossible to give the number of persons who died during the famine, but it is certain the number will be much under the early estimates, owing not only to the mild weather but to the effective relief operations in the five affected provinces.

Roughly, here is a summary, obtained after a tour of the principal points in the area: The total destitute last November was 15,000,000; saved by rationing, 8,180,000; emigrated, 1,000,000; died of starvation, 1,460,000; survived by living on grass, chaff, etc., but who are weakened and penniless, and who are subject to any epidemic, 4,340,000.

The most important thing about these figures is the saving of 55 per cent of the sufferers by foreign volunteers, for each person of these 8,000,000 is alive solely because of the prompt, effective, and continuous relief. Also they have ground and implements to work it with remaining, while the other survivors have nothing.

This was made possible largely by funds raised in the United States by the American advisory committee, $3,700,000 in gold being received. This sum was additional to the American Red Cross funds, roughly $2,000,000, which were devoted to road making.

But wholly aside from the great life saving comes the wonderful construction work which was resultant largely through the efforts of the Americans, though the British workers were a close second in the effective field operations. A résumé of a part of the work follows:

More than 430 miles of roadway have been built by the American Red Cross, employing famine labor chiefly, in Chihli and Shantung provinces.

Stop Sale of Young Girls.

The sale of young girls was stopped and measures were taken for its prevention in the future.

Nearly 50,000 wells, each costing the American Red Cross $15, were sunk.

Grain prices were kept down and profiteers, who cornered the supply, were forced to unload at an actual loss after the Chinese new year.

Irrigation was extended, bridges built, and communication was otherwise improved.

COMMENCEMENT

This is the time of year when our young people are finishing their schooling. They are thinking seriously of their real work in life. "Commencement" is well named. They arrive at the end of one phase of life and are at the threshold, or Commencement of the next—a phase which will spell either success or failure. Let them look well at what they choose to do.

Just so it is with American business, with its definite phases and cycles. There are many stores and factories throughout the country whose officials think they are now at the beginning of a new. There are others who had that thought many months back and acted accordingly.

Failure and success are dependent upon serious thinking and consideration at such times.

Let us all welcome Young America at this—the Commencement of their Life's work.

I. N. G. OFFICERS GO TO SCHOOL FOR FOUR DAYS

Will Be Trained for Big State Encampment.

Hundreds of national guard officers and enlisted men will leave Chicago and other Illinois cities today to receive four days' training at Camp Logan, Camp Lincoln, and Camp Grant. The training is preparatory to the fifteen day encampment to be held later in the summer, in which the full personnel of each organization will take part.

"The camps have been established," said Col. W. H. Patterson, on duty in Chicago as infantry instructor for national guard regiments, "so that the rudiments of the training can be imparted to the men who will have charge of the instruction at the fifteen day camp. Many of the national guard officers and most of the men have never had the latest manuals explained to them, and as these are so different in many instances from the old, the four day camps were decided upon.

Veteran "Top-Kicks" in Charge.

"Any guard officer is privileged to attend this camp, but the number of enlisted men from any organization which has been federalized has been limited to ten. Consequently the non-commissioned officers will probably be selected to go by the company commanders."

The training of the officers and men will be done by veteran drill sergeants of the regular army, supplemented by lectures and discussions by regular army officers.

Welcomes R. O. T. C. Men.

Gen. George Bell Jr., commanding officer of the 6th army corps and Camp Grant, yesterday welcomed the students to the R. O. T. C. at Fort Sheridan. The embryo soldiers are students from the universities and colleges of Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin. In his address the general praised the work of the officers' training camps during the war, but dwelt upon the fact that if they had been started years earlier the time used in training officers could have been cut to a minimum. The camp opens officially tomorrow.

MORE AMPLY RADICAL.

SANTIAGO, Chile, June 18.—Officers of the Chilean radical party have decided upon a reform of the organization's platform, which will give it an ample Socialist tendency.

$78 FOR TRIBUNE ICE FUND

Determined to earn money for The Tribune Free Ice fund, the girls in the 5200 block of South Park avenue held a bazaar yesterday in front of the home of Ruth and Leona Rosenbush, 5242 South Park avenue. Ruth is 17 years old and Leona is 12. Together with nine other girls they realized $78 for the fund. The others who helped are Beatrice Seaman, 12; Shirley Seaman, 10; Margaret Tobin, 14; Zelda Robbins, 11; Meta Goldstein, 10; Angelica Lewis, 13; Dorothy Bloom, 14; Jane Wolff, 8, and Mildred Bloom, 11. DRIVER SLUGGED IN WET WASH WAR OVER "PREMIUMS"

The desire of housewives on the northwest side for glassware, picture frames, and other nickle plated knick-knacks offered by rival laundries as premiums has led to a startling situation in the wet wash business which will be investigated by State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe Monday.

Owners of independent wet wash laundries complained to Assistant State's Attorney Charles Wharton yesterday that the Wet Wash Laundrymen's association, an organization controlling twenty laundries, had adopted boycotting and slugging tactics to enforce their regulations against the offering of premiums. They charged that the organization had ordered sluggers to follow their drivers and that on one occasion a man had been badly beaten.

Abraham Behn, president of the Troy laundry, 2246 Keyes place, appeared before Attorney Wharton badly beaten up and with four front teeth missing. He said that a slugger in a small auto had attacked him as he was gathering laundry at Fisk street and 20th place Friday afternoon. The man, he said, leaped upon him without warning and then escaped after hitting him with a pair of brass knuckles.

The attack, he said, was preceded by a warning from officials of the Wet Wash association.

A PIECE OF ICE MAY SAVE MILK AND BABY'S LIFE

Did you see him yesterday near that rickety tenement house in the street which has not known a green blade or a tree in years? He was the smallest in the group, about 6 years old. He sucked luciously on a piece of ice. Then the ice man who delivers to poor families with babies for THE TRIBUNE free ice fund cut off a block for his mother, so that his baby sister might have cool milk free from germs.

His name is Jackie—Jackie Corrigan—and ice to him is precious. Jackie knows that without ice in his house Baby Mary might drink milk that sours quickly in temperature like yesterday's. And soured milk might mean her death.

A Fatherless Family.

Jackie's father is dead. His mother washes for a living. Sometimes she doesn't get enough work and then she has to scrimp more than ever to keep Jackie, Little Mary, and herself in food and shelter, not to mention clothing.

Do you ever think about families like Jackie's? Whether they can have ice on hot days? If you do, remember THE TRIBUNE free ice fund is on the job to supply them, and that you can provide ice for people like Jackie's mother any time you want to for the price of a gallon of gasoline. All you have to do is send your contribution to THE TRIBUNE free ice fund and delivery is assured.

Likewise, there is the hospital and camp for convalescent mothers at Algonquin. Here work worn women and their children get two weeks' vacation every summer, and have the best of care, under ideal conditions, with health producing food and air. Ten dollars will keep a mother and her youngsters at the camp for two weeks.

TIN HAT DESIGN FOR TAGS ON MEMORY TREES

Chosen by Illinois Legion Committee.

BY LEOLA ALLARD.

Illinois has decided upon the tags that are to label the memory trees for all soldiers of the world war. Trees that are to be planted along the nation's highways, to form across the country a great leafy cross.

Adjt. William Q. Setliffe, state adjutant of the American Legion for Illinois, and his committee have decided that there could be no more appropriate tag than one shaped like the famous tin hats or steel helmets that the boys wore in their overseas service. Among the sketches submitted this was the most popular, the suggestion having come from William Wisner, who drew the picture with the remark that no war need be named, the tin hat being peculiar to this greatest of all wars, would be recognized instantly. The tin hat tag is being patented by Adjt. Setliffe.

Legion Supplies Tags.

Adjt. Setliffe will ask firms dealing in bronze plates for bids, and when they are all in the tree markers will be ordered by thousands, and may be secured only through the American Legion. Each community will have to find out how many tags it wants, and order them from the Legion. The lowest possible price will be obtained, as the tree planting cost must be kept low in order that all 4,000,000 trees may be in their places by Memorial day, 1922.

The American Legion and the Boy Scouts are going to do the most difficult part of the work. The least you can do is to send your tree money to the Legion to help the good work. You do want a tree planted for the soldier in whom you are most interested, don't you? If you can't send $5 to the Legion, send $1.

There must be nothing on the tags for the memory trees, except the name of the soldier and his regiment. The Legion thinks it best not to name his rank. Only the date of his death if he died in action, and only his name and his regiment if he did not die in action. These trees are only for the glory of the soldiers, to perpetuate the memory of their service, and to give a great gift to posterity in these greatest of Memory roads. The tree will be planted by the state and in the state in which the soldier lived, so there need be no name on that plate but his.

Must Come from People.

The Legion needs money for these trees. It will do the work, but this memorial must come from the people, not from the Legion. It has done and is doing enough. The gift is in its honor, don't let it do any more. Send your contribution at once so that it may know how many trees can be counted upon. You can tag your tree in the fall.

Mrs. J. De Lacy, secretary of the Illinois Gold Star Mothers, who had three sons in the war and lost one of them, was chosen by the American Legion to speak for the Gold Star Mothers at the big celebration in Minneapolis on June 11. On that date 555 memory trees were planted along the city's Victory driveway, dedicated to the soldiers from Hennepin county who were killed in the world war.

The city's park board and the American Legion had charge of the elaborate ceremonies, and thousands of flowers were dropped from airplanes upon the memory trees. The leafy memorials were planted in four rows, and at the end of the services were beautifully bedecked with wreaths and floral tributes.

HERO TAG

Marker Adopted by Illinois Legion for Memory Trees.

NEGRO WHO SLEW WHITE GIRL IS BURNED AT STAKE

Moultrie, Ga., June 18.—John Henry Williams, Negro slayer of Lorena Wilkes, 12 year old white girl, was burned at the stake today by a mob after he had been convicted of first degree murder and sentenced to be hanged July 8.

The prisoner was taken from the officers as he was being escorted from the courtroom and was rushed to the scene of his crime, where he was tied to the stump of a tree.

Williams calmly smoked a cigaret as the match was applied to the fuel around him, and he made but little outcry as the flames slowly burned him to death. It was reported that he made a full confession.

TYPHOID CARRIER CASE TAKEN TO SUPREME COURT

Health Chief Must Answer Habeas Corpus Writ.

Efforts of Mrs. Jennie Barmore, 100 West 113th place, to free herself of quarantine in her home because Dr. John Dill Robertson has decreed her a typhoid carrier, reached the Supreme court stage yesterday after two years of litigation, when the health commissioner was ordered to appear forthwith to answer habeas corpus proceedings.

DR. JOHN DILL ROBERTSON.

Mrs. Barmore came to the attention of the health department in December, 1919, when several cases of typhoid fever are alleged to have been traced to her.

Defies Health Department.

The health department asked her to comply with certain conditions to end the danger and she refused. As a result she was taken to the county hospital. Later she was taken home and placed in permanent quarantine.

Mrs. Barmore, who is 67 years old, supported a husband by keeping boarders in her home. She was ordered to cease feeding boarders and refused. Some of the boarders also refused to move away from the place at the time. The American Medical Liberty league instituted court proceedings before Judge Sabath in the Superior court.

Experts Enliven Case.

The proceedings were enlivened by the testimony of two famous bacteriologists, Dr. Ludwig Hektoen of Rush Medical college, and Dr. E. O. Jordan of the University of Chicago. Dr. Herman N. Bundeson of the health department, testified that three tests for typhoid, taken at intervals, showed that Mrs. Barmore carried typhus germs. Four glass jars containing 30,000,000,000,000 typhus germs were introduced into evidence.

In her Supreme court petition, Mrs. Barmore says that Health Commissioner Robertson has decided that she will always be a typhoid carrier and is therefore subject to his control and orders as long as she may live. No one, she says, is permitted to see her except her husband.

SPEEDER'S $200 RING PROVES ONLY 30C BOND

It sparkled brilliantly and was of imposing size, so when M. M. Sacks, who said he was from Los Angeles, Cal., was arrested in Oak Park for speeding, Policeman Talbott Powers readily agreed to hold the daimond ring in lieu of $25 cash bail.

"The ring's worth $200," said Sacks.

Yesterday Sacks failed to appear before Police Magistrate W. Stevens Lewis. Two Oak Park jewelers were called in to appraise the glittering gem.

"It's worth 30 cents," was their instant verdict.

Policeman Powers is looking for Sacks.

Gold Star Mothers Hold Memorial Services Today

Parents and relatives of all soldiers, sailors, and marines, especially of those who lost their lives in the world war, will be guests of the Gold Star Mothers at memorial services this afternoon at a tablet erected to the memory of the men in the forest preserve. The Milwaukee avenue street car goes to the scene.

U. S. GRAND JURY TO HEAR MURPHY CASE MONDAY

Expect Ten Indictments for Mail Robbery.

Federal grand jury action against "Big Tim" Murphy and at least eight others alleged to be implicated with him in the $380,000 Polk street mail robbery will be taken Monday, it was announced yesterday by John E. Northup, assistant attorney general.

Not less than ten indictments are expected to be returned. True bills, it was said, will be asked against every person implicated in confessions obtained from Ralph E. Teter and Edward Glerun, two of the minor conspirators. The government will seek quick trials.

"The investigation of the Polk street robbery has progressed satisfactorily," Mr. Northup said. "With the admissions of Timothy Murphy we came into possession of knowledge on certain phases of the situation which we most desired. His information filled in the widest gaps in our evidence. Our mopping up process has been very successful."

The infomation mentioned by Mr. Northup has to do with the admission by Murphy that more than $113,000 of the loot was hidden in a trunk in his father-in-law's home.

Re-elect E. C. Brown Head of Live Stock Exchange

Cleveland, O., June 18.—Everett C. Brown of Chicago was reelected president of the National Live Stock exchange at the closing session of the annual convention today. J. S. Boyd of Chicago was reelected secretary and M. A. Moody of St. Louis was reelected treasurer.

"HOME OF THE BABY LOBSTER"

You breathe nothing but fresh, pure air, thoroughly washed and comfortably cooled. No matter how hot it may be outside you can always dine in comfort here.

Dine "a là North American"— Save 40 to 60 Per Cent.

Many things have contributed to the great popularity of the North American Restaurant. But the one outstanding feature is the fact that you get big portions of the finest food at prices far below those charged by other good restaurants or hotels.

We know we are not exaggerating one bit when we say that by dining at the North American, and serving yourself, you save from 40 to 60 per cent. That is true because you pay only for food and the necessary cost of preparing it.

You undoubtedly know that most good restaurants and hotels charge at least $1.25 for a Baby Lobster. Here at the North American, you get a whole Baby Lobster, either cold or hot, with Chili Sauce or melted butter, for 65 cents. We sell more lobsters than any two hotels or restaurants combined, so we naturally get the pick of the finest lobsters coming into Chicago. For 65 cents you may have a breast of Chicken with Bacon—for 35 cents an individual portion of delicious Pork Tenderloin. These are fair samples of all of our prices.

When you can dine so well, and so reasonably, merely by serving yourself, isn't it the Common Sense thing to do? It is just what many of the cleverest people are doing these days. Come into the North American any time—for breakfast, lunch, after shopping, or the matinee, for dinner, or an after-theatre bite—and you will see as fine a group of ladies and gentlemen as you will see in any first-class hotel or restaurant in the city.

They are glad to serve themselves, when by doing so, they can make such a big saving—and they have learned that no matter how big a price they pay elsewhere, they can't get better food.

AMERICANS FIND MYSTERY GIRL IN DIM DUNGEON

Order Inquiry Into Philippine Charges.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MANILA, June 18.—Occasionally in investigating conditions in the Philippines the American mission stumbles across a tragedy or a mystery. In inspecting the old Spanish prison at Batangas in Batangas province a special party headed by Col. Gordon Johnston and Commander Stewart Bryant found a woman of one of the "invisible tribes" alone in a dim cell in which the only furnishing was a bamboo cot.

She stood in the center of the cell, her hands folded in front of her, and her head down so that no one could see her eyes. She was only a little kinky haired Negrito woman of the hills, but she looked so like a patient dumb animal that the colonel began an inquiry.

"Killed My Son."

Infanticide was the terrible word whispered about her and every one in the town, even her own people of the hills, shunned her.

"My husband says I killed my son," was all that could be elicited from her lips.

She never raised her eyes. Col. Johnston called twenty Negritos and among other things questioned them about this girl. But they knew nothing about her. One did say she went away, and they heard she was married and had killed her own child. But that was all. They could do nothing. The colonel, touched, ordered a complete investigation.

Many of these people are held practically as slaves in the homes of the wealthier people in the lowlands. The Negritos are the aborigines of this island, and they were perhaps the first race to appear in the world. They are all small, some being almost dwarfs, are very dark, and live today a nomadic life in the forests, hunting with a bow and arrow.

Have Few Schools.

There are few schools among them, and for the most part the Filipinos leave them alone. They do not present a problem to the government as the constabulary could easily kill them off. On the occasion of the mission's visit they came to town dressed in pants and shirts, all very new, and of which they appeared as proud as children.

They had food they said and were all right, but wanted independence.

"What kind of independence?" asked Col. Johnston, who hears this plea a dozen times a day.

"Life is easy," said one chief, "let us alone."

Some Superior Types.

In fact in the hills the mission found types superior in morals, strength of character, and appearance to many of the lowland people, though as a whole the Filipinos dominate the hill races and are superior to anything in the islands.

Take the Iliad of the Ifugao girls of one mountain province. There was a town with 2,000 women and only 300 men. The ambition of every woman in the hills is to have a husband and a baby. The surplus girls there looked the situation over and saw little hope. So a band of twenty started out to find men of their own. Every girl was magnificent. They visited several villages and inspected the bachelors and gradually, one by one, they found a young man that suited them and then remained in the villages with them for a little while. Later they started back home alone and in time each girl had a baby of her own. This is a true story.

Trial Marriage Colangs.

In the Bontoc villages there are institutions called Colangs, where young unmarried women sleep. To this place, by custom of the tribes, it is the privilege of a girl to invite a young man to remain with her as a trial husband. If a child results, the marriage is considered a success, the girl is highly honored, and assumes command of a home and family.

But it must be remembered that these people and these customs prevail only in the far hills and that the rest of the Filipinos are trying to forget them. They bear about the same relation to the general civilization of the islands as the American Indian customs to the whites.

ILLINI WIN NATIONAL COLLEGE MEET

GEORGES CAN WIN ONLY BY MIRACLE, HAMMOND SAYS

Funereal Air Around the Camp Puzzles Percy.

BY PERCY HAMMOND.

Manhasset, Long Island, hard by the training camp of M. Carpentier, June 18.—[Special.]—

GEORGES CARPENTIER. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

This is the last of earth; I am content.

The tomblike stillness which invades Mr. Carpentier's place of rehearsal is baffling to the amateur analyst of the signs and portents of pugilism.

What is the significance of the deep and funereal quiet that broods over the placid farmstead wherein M. Carpentier is being made ready? Is it an emblem of obsequies to come on July 2, a symbol that withered hope has fled, leaving him with no future joys save the collection of his wages? Or is it the dangerous muteness of still water or a silent dog, indicating unknown perils for Mr. Dempsey?

Percy Says No Decision.

Like the referee of a prize fight, I can arrive at no decision. But for the timid aspect of things in and around M. Carpentier's headquarters on the Long Island littoral, I get an impression. This guess is that the uncanny hush which enfolds the invader's bivouac is that of a gallant despair. You feel, after looking it over, that this Manhasset farm is a cul-de-sac, or, as a less flossy writer would say, a blind alley, from which on July 2 doomed but courageous quarry will be driven, to be put to death speedily.

If you will join me yesterday on my first pilgrimage to the Carpentier shrine you may see my credentials in the matter. Having vanquished Mr. Lardner at golf upon the Sound View course, that so-called humorist and I motored from his country house to Manhasset, he enlivening every moment of the way with glistening observations.

Mood Changes at Camp.

How bright he was as we passed the handsome homes of the actors, and how comfortably philanthropic he made me feel when he told me that most of those luxurious estates had been made possible by my published admiration of the art of the owners in my capacity of dramatic critic in Chicago. So, when we rendered ourselves at M. Carpentier's farm my emotions were merry and gay.

But, arriving at the gate place, the mood was changed. You have seen the gloomy assemblage of vehicles in front of a house where a funeral is happening. Well, that was there; and all else that was needed yesterday to indicate the knell, the shroud, the mattoch, and the grave was a snappy undertaker, with squeaky shoes, a Prince Albert, and a lugubrious smile. For there was a damp silence, broken only by whispers.

Ask for Last Look.

A grim, unsmiling secretary approached as we parked among the mourners and asked us why we desired to desecrate the cloister. Mr. Lardner's humorous rejoinder that we wished to have a last look seemed to appeal to him, for he escorted us, though reluctantly, as far as the gate. There was a single pathetic strand of barbed wire on top of the fence upon which we leaned and looked—a barn, a barnyard, chickens fretting importantly, the lowing of kine, cowpaths to walk upon, and green apples not to eat. Every one on the roadside whispered and every one else said "Sssh!"

Eventually M. Carpentier, the male and modern Joan d'Arc, appeared. Beneath the trees we could see him, as we peered through the hedges, seated with pathos upon the front steps of his farm house. He looked so far from home a stranger in a strange land. Small, wistful, wondering, he sat there, and in his hand there was, although you will not believe it, a red rambler rose.

"So White and Innocent."

This rose he placed to his nostrils now and then and inhaled it as if odor had aught to do with fisticuffs, when Dempsey is about. His hair was long, his eyes soulful, his physiognomy poetic, his figure gratifying, and his personality endearing.

As Mr. Lardner held me up to look at him the tears gathered in my eyes, so white and innocent did he seem to be for such an inevitable sacrifice.

As a layman who has seen Dempsey fight twice and Carpentier once my prognostications mean nothing. But though I believe the American to be lacking in entrails, I feel that he excels in biceps and abdominal sinews.

So, indeed, did Mr. Brennan, a late adversary of Mr. Dempsey, who, I surmise, knows more about the duel than most of us.

"I don't see much," said Mr. Brennan after investigating Carpentier, "so he must be under cover."

Can Win Only by Miracle.

Mr. Newman, whose calm judgment evokes my admiration, standing on the hillside meadow near the Carpentier dressing room, said to me and Mr. Orr, though he may not write it, the sanest thing about the impending battle:

"So long as he is in there, he has a chance. He can hit and he can stand hitting."

That is it, my friends. Carpentier stands a chance. He can win by a miracle, and only by a miracle.

In the Wake of the News

FROM THE TRAINING CAMPS.

MANHASSET, L. I., June 17.—[Special to The Wake.]—Carpentier's camp was closed to all visitors today and even the scribes were kept outside of the inclosure.

Georges arose with that good-natured smile enveloping his classic features, romped a bit with his Belgian police dog, and sauntered into the garden to pick a few lilies.

The Frenchman then was ready for a sparing breakfast of grapefruit, cereal, toddled eggs, chops, French toast, chowchow, and strawberry shortcake.

For the remainder of the day he rested, but graciously consented to be presented to the many society women who fitted to and fro from the camp in fashionable equippages, blushing bashfully at their interest in his preparation and saying to each, "I am so pleased."

So you see Georges is only a big good-natured boy.

Atlantic City, June 17.—[Special to The Wake.]—Jack Dempsey, impressed by the imminence of his impending quarrel with Georges Carpentier, did ten miles on the rode this morning—in an auto in quest of his Belgian police dog, which will now be his constant companion, as Jack is very fond of dumb animals.

Jack, who is only a big good-natured boy outside the ring, took on a vicious scowl as he pommeled his sparring partners for the benefit of the curious public which pays one smacker per each to view the exhibition.

Jack finally yielded to the importunity of the writer for an expression of his chances July 2. He said: "I will essay the discomfiture of M. Carpentier in the primary session, for he is a fine fellow and a thorough sportsman. After finis has been inscribed on the history of this rendezvous Georges and I will be friends. Within the arena, however, I am constrained to soak him in the slats and project force to his lower maxillary."

This statement convinced me anew that Jack is not vicious by nature.

Clark of Columbus Hurls No-Hit Game

Indianapolis, Ind., June 18.—Clark pitched a no hit, no run game for Columbus against Indianapolis today and won, 3 to 0. In the first inning Clark walked three men but retired the side. Again, in the eighth, two walks and an error filled the sacks with two down, but he pitched himself out of the hole.

DEMPSEY FULL OF CONFIDENCE AND READY FOR BELL

"We'll Fight," Jack Says; Knows Georges' Power.

BY RAY PEARSON.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 18.—[Special.]—With one Saturday intervening between now and the time that Jack Dempsey climbs through the ropes to defend his title against Georges Carpentier at Jersey City it can be said that the champion of the world is confident and fit. Saying that means in good plain language that Dempsey has gradually worked himself to a perfection of condition mentally and physically that is satisfying to the steenth degree.

If this clash of July 2 is to be a fight, a tough man to man struggle, in which superiority is not evidenced early in the conflict, or if it is to be one of those brief clashes of arms, where one of those pile driving punches shoots to the jaw and rolls the man on the resined canvas, it will make no difference to this swarthy fistic individual who right down in his heart believes that the man hasn't been made who can defeat him.

Waiting in Confidence.

That is the confidence of a champion, but it is more than that. It is the confidence of a man, who has a fighting mentality, a fighting physique, fighting skill, and a fighting heart. One may ask "What cares Dempsey for what the other fellow has to offer in opposition?" and the answer is that fighting men such as the champion do not crawl through the ropes once in a century. That's why Dempsey has placed himself in condition physically. The other essentials are established and take care of themselves.

It can be stated right now that in the mind of Dempsey there is one predominating thought. He doesn't act in the manner of a man who is concerned in the matter of what Carpentier has to show in fistic wares. He rather resembles a capable man waiting silently for the time to spring at his prey and then—well, Dempsey said to me today in these terse words: "we'll fight."

We'll Fight" Jack Says.

That means that regardless of the tactics employed by this man from across the ocean, the champion is going into that Jersey City ring to fight, as all fighting men know the meaning of that term. Talking in this vein too, carries one on to another thought and that concerns how long this international battle is likely to last.

The predominating thought which we refer to and which isn't voiced by Dempsey is interrelated with that "We'll fight" remark. When he says, "We'll fight" it means that when the gong clashes at Jersey City just two weeks from today Jack Dempsey is going to fly at Carpentier, lash out with those powerful arms and crash this man from France to the canvas just as quickly as it can be done.

Height of Hitting Power.

Jack doesn't say it and no one connected with him would be brash enough to make such a prediction, but in the minds of those who have watched Dempsey in the last three days as he belted his sparring partners in his camp ring, the idea will not down that the thing expected in this battle is a one punch knockout. It is figured that all Dempsey is to do is to connect with one of his powerful right or left hooks and that that one punch will stop Carpentier and the big show.

We never have witnessed a man who hits as Dempsey is hitting today. And for no reason it is our belief that if the Dempsey thought is carried out the end of this battle will not of necessity be brought about by the stereotyped punch on the jaw. Dempsey as he is hitting today might crash Carpentier, his far more frail opponent, to defeat with one of those pile driving punches no matter where it landed. Dempsey will make it a one punch fight if he can, if not he intends to punch Carpentier over just as quickly as is possible.

Knows Georges' Power.

Dempsey is not going to be caught napping. He knows of Carpentier's right handed punching. He knows of his clever boxing and he knows of his wonderful speed afoot.

But to Dempsey that means nothing. It simply means that he must not let Georges poke him with that right, that he must match his cleverness against that of the Frenchman, and that he must tune up his own dogs to travel at any pace that may be set by the European champion.

Is that a tough task for Dempsey? Well just visit his camp and see him shoot those rib crushing wallops which often upset his sparring partners. See him display the cleverness of a master and watch him speed across the canvas when boxing with a speedy featherweight, and the impression is forced that he is more than equal to anything that may be demanded of him on July 2.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

For a long time in yesterday's combat between Cubs and Giants it looked as if some one had taken some of the rubber out of the ball. However, with the two teams toiling desperately in what resembled one of those old time pitchers' battles, the score being tied, 3—3, at the end of nine innings, the ball suddenly got lively after two were out in the tenth, and there was a crashing attack by the Giants that netted seven tallies. The final count was 10 to 3 in favor of McGraw's men.

FRANK SNYDER. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Sergt. Jim York, who turned in an heroic game his last time out, was the victim of the assault. He was a great pitcher for nine innings, and even with two out in the tenth. One man was on and it looked pretty certain that the duel of the slabmen would go on.

Seven Runs in Tenth.

But Catcher Snyder of the Giants cracked one safely and then there were two on. McGraw yanked his pitcher and sent in a recruit pinch hitter named Brown. Brown doubled, then with the winning run over, everything went to smash and before Sergt. Jim could get the side out seven of the rivals had counted and the folks in the stand were going home.

York had only three distressing innings in the ten. Right at the start it looked so bad for him that Boss Evers rushed a couple of hurlers to the bull pen.

York walked two in the first and two others swatted him for doubles, but a snappy double play excuted by Hollocher got the side out with only two scoring.

O'Farrell Cracks Homer.

Big Fred Toney was mounding for the Giants and the Cubs greeted him with blows. They knocked in one run in the first and two in the second. One drive was a tremendous slam by Bob O'Farrell through the screen in front of the bleacher in left center for a homer. Toney was rushed off the field. Phil Douglas took the job and stopped all further fussing by the Cubs. They got nothing but a few scattered hits from then on.

York kept his one run lead until the seventh, when with one out Bancroft, Young, and Kelly nicked him for singles that sent over the run needed to tie.

The ex-soldier was all right until the pinch hitter, Mr. Brown, appeared in the tenth and delivered the two bagger that broke up the ball game. He went in as sub for Douglas. Art Nehf finished the game by pitching to the Cubs in their half of the tenth. He was in soft with a seven run lead.

VOICE IN NAMING OF REFEREE OR NO FIGHT, KEARNS' ULTIMATUM

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 18.—Jack Kearns, manager of Jack Dempsey, tonight threatened to call off the match with Georges Carpentier rather than submit to the direction of the New Jersey boxing commission over the referee situation.

Kearns declared that he had no objection to the selection of a referee holding a New Jersey license, but that he would insist on having a voice in the selection.

"I will absolutely refuse to let Dempsey box if they insist on naming the referee," Kearns declared.

Members of the new Jersey boxing commission arrived here tonight ostensibly to witness some boxing bouts, but it is probable they will have a conference with Kearns, Robert Edgren, arbiter of all disputes involving the two boxers, and Tex Rickard, the promoter. Commissioner Lyons said that a Jersey man would referee or there would be no fight.

$5,000 RECEIVED FROM FRANCE TO WAGER ON CARP

New York, June 18.—[Special.]—As far as is known the largest amount that has yet been received in this country from abroad to be wagered on the Dempsey-Carpentier bout arrived today. John Doyle received a commission of $5,000 from Baron Long of California, who now is in Paris, to back the French challenger at the prevailing price. "This is the first real money I have heard of being received from the other side," said Doyle. "I am of the opinion that European money will make its presence felt from now on."

New York, June 18.—[Special.]—New York's hopes for the intercity scholastic baseball championship were submerged under an overwhelming ninth inning attack today in the game between the George Washington High school nine, local champion, and the Lane Technical High school, Chicago champion at South field. The visitors carried off the game and the title by 9to 5. The result gave Chi-vengeance for a defeat inflicted by the crack Commerce High school team in the first of the intercity games last year. A crowd of about 5,000 witnessed the conflict.

Trail Until Sixth.

Heavy stick work by the Chicagoans gave the invaders the victory. For five innings the Lane artillery was held in check and the Windy City boys trailed, 2 to 0. Dominick Torp, the local twirler, had the opposition under control and fanned ten with his deceptive hooks and slants. Torp, however, weakened in the closing four innings and was flayed for nine hits and as many runs.

Washington gained a two run lead in the opening two innings and held the margin until the sixth. After the Chicagoans had been retired in order Thompson started Washington off with a scratch hit to Pasquinelli. On the Lane infielder's wild throw to first Thompson took second, and he went to third when Severance sent a sacrifice to Deinhardt. The latter threw wild to first and Thompson continued home.

Waterbury opened the second with a double, took third when McCann sacrificed, and slid home under Kraft's throw when Schwartz grounded to the Chicago shortstop.

Deinhardt Hits Homer.

With two down in the sixth, Deinhardt leaned against one of Torpe's fast ones and sent it into the stand for a home run. Stevenson followed with a single to right. Kraft dumped a single in center, which chased Stevenson to third, and when Stewart threw wild in an effort to head him off at third Stevenson continued home and Kraft went to third. Marquardt scratched a hit to short which registered Kraft with the run which gave Lane the lead.

In their half George Washington came right back and again assumed the lead. Waterbury drew a pass and McCann and Stewart beat out infield hits, filling the bases. Thompson forced Waterbury at the plate, and then Severance cracked a single, scoring McCann and Stewart.

Homer for Christman.

Christman's circuit drive in the seventh again put Lane on even terms. Stevenson singled and stole second. Lange batted for Marquardt and sent a grounder to Tomisawa, who threw wild trying to head off Stevenson at third, and both runners were safe. Stevenson scored on a double steal.

A single by McCann, a pass to Schwartz, and Thompson's infield hit resulted in McCann going home with the tying run in the eighth, but in the ninth Torpe weakened, yielding three solid hits and hitting Stevenson. A fumble by Stewart and stolen bases by Christman and Deinhardt were added to the carnival, which gave Chicago four runs and the game.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Question.

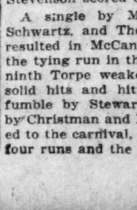
What do you think of Carpentier training in secret?

Where Asked.

Lake street and Wabash avenue.

The Answers.

Jerry Quirk, 704 Central avenue, color press operator—I think a real sport should be out in the open, and let the fans see him work. Why not let the fans get a line on this French champion, if he is so fast, why all this hiding? We hope he changes his training habits; the scribes will like it much better, too, I am sure.



Muriel Shea, 5109 Lexington avenue, home girl—If Carpentier wants to train in private, why that's his business. Maybe the boy is bashful, and if he is, he should train in secrecy. I think when a champion prize fight is about to take place, the contestants can prepare for the fight any way they please.

H. A. Edsberg, 2146 West Roosevelt road, salesman—I personally have not given that part of it much study, but I am greatly in favor of Carpentier. I am all for this clean cut chap from France, and believe I am not alone, either. Why, his army record makes me feel that if I can help him win I surely would. I am strong for Mr. Carpentier.

Agnes Meehan, 6407 South Campbell avenue, home girl—Of course, Dempsey's eye for business is much keener than Carpentier's. Dempsey charges the people admission to watch him train. I think if Carpentier wants to train in private, he is abiding by the wishes of his manager, Deschamps. If he wants to train in an airship, that's his funeral.

F. J. Bucher, Prairie View, salesman—Carpentier has an object in view, and if he can benefit his condition by training in private he should not be criticized. He probably has a surprise in store for the new world. His manager is a pretty foxy boy, and I think they have something up their sleeve. Don't be surprised if this boy that wears medals for bravery, gives you something to talk about early on the morning of the 3d of July.

Featured by the performance of Earl Thomson of Dartmouth, who tied his own world's record of :14 2-5 for the 120 high hurdles, Illinois, winner of the indoor and outdoor Big Ten meets, yesterday won the first annual track and field games of the National Collegiate A. A. on Stagg field with 20¼ points. Notre Dame was second with 16¾ points, while Iowa sprung a surprise and landed in third position with 14.

Illinois carried off premier honors without winning a first place. Orange and Blue athletes scored in ten of the fifteen events and it was the team balance rather than individual ability which gave the downstaters the honor of winning this first set of games which bids fair to develop into the country's blue ribbon track and field games.

Although there were several good performances, the hurdling of Thomson was easily the feature. The Dartmouth timber topper stepped over the barriers rather than leaping and spent but little time in the air.

Individual honors went to Gus Pope of the University of Washington. This athlete won first places in the shot and discus, which gave him 10 points. He put the shot 45 feet 4½ inches and threw the discus 142 feet 2¼ inches.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

New York, June 18.—[Special.]—By striking out the last two men who faced him, with a runner on third base straining to tie the score, Red Faber licked the Yankees today in a hard fought battle, 4 to 3. That made fourteen triumphs for Red and another run of six straight.

URBAN FABER. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

That finish was worth a book in itself. Schang and Mays were Faber's victims and both are dangerous pinch hitters. Faber went into the last half with a one run lead, but it threatened to evaporate when Baker, first up, smashed a double against the right field wall. McNally was put on to run for the veteran and Ward sacrificed him to third.

End of a Perfect Day.

With the infield drawn close, leaving lots of holes for a hit, Faber worked on Schang brilliantly, carrying him down to a count of "two and three," and striking him out on a low curve that would have been a fourth ball. It was Schang's weakness. Then came Mays, often tossed in as a pinch hitter. Once more Faber put all he had on the pill and struck out the underground pitcher on a foul tip which Schalk pinched gleefully.

That was the end of a perfect game, in which the White Sox fought desperately, in spite of the handicap of Collins' injury, to keep Faber's record intact.

Hit Three Yank Hurlers.

Huggins used three pitchers, beginning with Hoyt, who was mauled out of the game in the fourth inning. That was when the Gleasons rallied and wiped out a one run lead which Faber had given the Yanks in the second on a pass and Schang's three bagger.

Singles by Strunk and Schalk and a two bagger by Johnson were mixed with two bases on balls to make three Sox tallies in the fourth. That brought Ferguson into the game, and he stopped the attack by catching Mulligan napping off second base, ending the round with the bags loaded.

The Sox would not have scored again but for Meusel's muff of a fly, which let Johnson score from first in the sixth. Ferguson went out for a pinch hitter in the seventh and Mays finished, shutting the Sox out in order for two rounds.

Peck Gets Homer.

Peckinpaugh lined a home run into the left bleacher with nobody on in the sixth, then opened the eighth with a triple, scoring while Mulligan was throwing out Ruth. The Tarzan did not get a hit all day, but walked once with the bases empty. Faber struck him out the first time up. Thirty thousand people went home disappointed.

Eddie Collins has gone to Philadelphia to let his injured hand heal, but will rejoin the Sox in Chicago Tuesday.

RED SOX, 11; TYGERS, 7.

Boston, Mass., June 18.—Boston cleaned up the Detroit series by winning today, 11 to 7. The visitors made eight errors and the Red Sox got thirteen hits off Dauss, and stole seven bases. Cobb was put out of the game in the ninth for protesting a called strike on Blue. It was Detroit's eighth straight defeat. Score:

LANDIS RULES SOX ROOKIE INELIGIBLE FOR DOUBLE DEALING

GREENVILLE, S. C., June 18.—Baseball Commissioner Landis, in a communication to the local club today, announced the disclosure of what he termed a conspiracy on the part of Francis B. Pratt, alias William Francis Pratt, former University of Alabama infielder, who signed this spring with the White Sox, while under the draft of the Greenville club.

Commissioner Landis reported that the player changed his name from Francis B. to William Francis, representing he was a free agent, and conspired with his brother, William Luther Pratt, to have the latter impersonate him and report to the Greenville club, which plan was carried out.

It was stated Pratt was recently farmed out by the White Sox to the Rock Island club of the Three Eyes league and Judge Landis ordered that he be placed on the ineligible list. He was with Carrollton of the Georgia State league last season and was drafted by Greenville.

DEMPSEY SPEED MAKES 'EM TALK AT SEASIDE CAMP

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 18.—[Special.]—This little old town by the sea is still buzzing with the story of Jack Dempsey's first real workout on Friday afternoon, when Jack cut loose and showed what he could do with a clever walloper, by name Battling Ghee.

It's a fair bet that Ghee never saw so many boxing gloves or so many stars in six minutes before in his battling life.

Ghee came up from Memphis, Tenn., with a ready made reputation. He is a squat, husky Negro, built for fighting and skilled in the art. He has met many ring masters of his own color, among them Sam Langford and Kid Norfolk, and they never caused him any great annoyance.

Tryout Against Renault.

When Ghee joined the camp Dempsey was still nursing that cut over his eye, and so the battler was tried out against Jack Renault, who can go some himself. It's a camp scandal that Renault, for all his speed and strength, couldn't lay a glove effectively on Ghee's battling chin, while Ghee could and did swing many a husky wallop Renault's way.

Dempsey only looked on. But after Jack had boxed a couple of rounds Thursday with Patsy Cline and Herman, just to see if his eye was all right, he decided that he'd take on a bunch of heavyweights next day and see what Mister Ghee had.

Only Pains for His Efforts.

When it was over the principal thing the battler could show was a cut lip and a few bumps. Ghee went right after Dempsey as if Jack wasn't a champion at all. He was a willing walloper, all right. His long arms failed out and his twelve ounce gloves grazed Dempsey's head many a time. They use twelve ounce gloves for the training, because they don't cut like a smaller glove and there's less danger of a knockout.

But Dempsey was in there to do some hitting himself. He seems to have partly abandoned his usual fighting style, the curious weaving that makes him so hard to hit. He stood nearly straight up part of the time, varying that by ducking low under blows, crouching for a moment, and moving straight in or straight away to confuse the enemy's range. With this method he drew Ghee's fire and then countered sharply.

Picks Up Fallen Man.

Once as they were sparring at long range Jack shot over a right hand punch that dropped the black man flat on the floor, and leaping in picked him up, clinched a moment to let him recover, and then went after him again. Here Dempsey held back his own punches and getting into close range let Ghee whale away, cleverly avoiding his punches until the Memphis darkey was winded from his own efforts.

Another knockdown followed a sharp right counter thrown across by Dempsey as Ghee reached for his chin with a hard right. Dempsey was showing judgment and hitting ability.

Ghee landed several punches over the injured eye, but Dempsey had a plaster on it and a leather headgear like a football helmet that came down to the edge of the eyebrow and provided at least a partial protection.

Feet Heavily Weighted.

During the last half of the second round Ghee was all in from the hard thumps he had taken. He bluffed and lunged at Dempsey's body and was so heavy on his feet that he could hardly get around the ring. Last time Jack dropped him with a short inside right he caught Ghee as he toppled and held him up. When the bout was over the Memphis terror wabbled to his corner shaking his head and looking a little shopworn.

Followed two fast rounds with Larry Williams, who caught a lot of what came his way. All the sparring partners were helmeted. Dempsey didn't want any advantage. Jack complained of not feeling at home with the padded leather guard on his head, but it was the thing to wear as long as there's any chance of reopening that cut.

Shows Great Condition.

I'm going over these small details just to emphasize a few remarks about Dempsey's changed condition.

During the six rounds he didn't draw a long breath.

He didn't pay any attention to blows that got through his guard.

He was in great spirits, full of pep and speed, like the going, and as soon as the boxing was finished, went into a lot of workout exercises without waiting to rest.

He tired out three big men, and they didn't tire him.

He battered three good men in a row and they didn't put a mark on him.

Looking over Dempsey's work, he has improved in condition astonishingly in the last two weeks. He has taken off the few pounds of extra weight and has regained his old speed. Drying out will make him still faster. Carpentier will have to be a streak to keep out of his way.

Referee Question Worries.

Like Manager Kearns, Dempsey is a lot annoyed over the referee mixup.

"We agreed on a list of referees to choose from and make our choice at the time the contract was signed," said Jack, "and I'll string with Kearns in insisting on having that agreement honored. When Tex Rickard took the bout to New Jersey he was assured that the conditions of the contract were satisfactory and that he'd have no trouble in going ahead. Now they want to force us to accept a referee we know nothing about.

"If Kearns is not satisfied we are getting fair treatment I'll back any decision he makes, if it means that I go back to work in the mines."

The referee question comes up before the boxing commission in Jersey City Monday afternoon.

IN CARPENTIER'S CAMP, NO. 1 — CAREY ORR

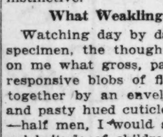
PROPHET'S CORNER

"UNLESS DEMPSEY PUTS UP A BETTER FIGHT THAN HE DID WITH BRENNAN, HE'LL LOSE!"—DOC ROLLER.

DEMPSEY'S SHOULDERS LIKE ARMOR PLATES ON BIG BATTLESHIP

BY EYE WITNESS.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 18.—Special]—Close your eyes and let the Farnese Hercules, relinquishing at last the posture of weary leaning upon the club, stride toward you from out of the shadows of the Museo Nazionale at Naples.



Touching thus to life the Hercules of Glycon—if it was Glycon's—you have the shoulders of Jack Dempsey as they are today.

Let the statue further metamorphose itself into dancing Dempsey and the emblem of weary might becomes scintillant might, but the identicalness of shoulder structure between the Athenian master's demi-god and this Irish-Indian boy remains. It is the dominant note both in the image that is 2,000 years old and the living man who is five and twenty.

Merely Targets for Jack.

Nor is such prodigious shoulder development common even among men of extraordinary physical development. Other fighters—men who will give a creditable account of themselves—mount the platform as targets for Dempsey. They stop. The contrast between him and them makes you smile.

In Dempsey is structure and modeling. Of the minor men you would say that their shoulders grew; of Dempsey's that they were fashioned and fabricated with other purpose than merely to hang arms from.

They are architecture. They shield him like the plates of a battleship and serve him like the blades of a propellor which makes the fraction of a revolution at the touch of a button. They are both endowment and development. They would not be much if they were solely the first.

Form Great Protection.

It is in his mastery of those gliding plates that the marvel and the fascination lie. Behold how they seem automatically to slide upward to protect his jaw from blows, and, when he strikes, how one or the other of them shoots forward, lengthening by four inches his reach and increasing beyond even his calculation, the power in the blow. The man's frame seems topped with sliding turrets, as you see in a fortress, at once impervious and grandly flexible.

So much that Dempsey does is so easily done that one is tricked into the word instinctive. It is much less than half correct. He was ignorant once. He has known knockouts. The exact statement is that today his calculations are so swift and true that they seem instinctive.

What Weaklings We Are.

Watching day by day this amusing specimen, the thought bears itself in on me what gross, paltry, flabby, unresponsive blobs of flesh held loosely together by an envelope of lax fiber and pasty hued cuticle most of us are—half men, I would say, without the pulchritude of children or the proper prowess of adults.

If there is any value in pugilism it is the value of the shamed, consciousness of sick inferiority which a prize fight, and the training for it, ought to bear in on the beholder of both.

In this Dempsey, as I watch him under the hot sun, I see an instructive specimen, for he is not all endowment. If he were he, too, would soon slope and be paltry. Once more, it is the superb endowment only as founded on development and pertinacity that instruct and fascinate me.

Here is a bow. They make them of hickory, do they not? Place the palm of your hand over one tip of an upright, excellent bow, and, pressing and giving a little, so dance it over a firm surface, and you get the picture of Dempsey shadow boxing, preliminary to taking on the creditable but slope shouldered boys.

Never still, not even when the slope shouldered boys, having served their turn as moving targets, are led dazed away from him. Edging, tetering, dancing, skipping, pirouetting with his feet, plunging, shimmering, darting with his arms, advancing, retreating, seeming to bend three ways with one movement. My eye is slower than his members, slower than the heaviest of his members.

Certainty of Motion.

The delight in movement for the sheer sake of movement, which Dempsey displays, would not, however, long hold you fascinated at these exhibitions were it unaccompanied by that certainty of motion which tells of the purposefulness behind every feint and shimmer.

Therein lies the moral instruction which, if you think the thing out, is inherent in pugilism. Pugilism stands for peril of the most immediate and concrete kind. The least imaginative of men can comprehend this kind of peril. There is nothing recodite about a blow between the eyes, but to avoid it when some hundreds of thousands are at stake requires erudition of a very special kind.

That is why the displays of calculation by the masters of the art are at once so dazzling and so precise. The certainty of motion, the combined lightness and steadiness of posture, the command of muscles and members, the sureness of the eye, the dexterity of pass and wheel and sidestep, and block and bend were delightful to watch and at the same time, they shamed and abased the onlooker.

Question of Fortitude.

For his mechanism, speaking relatively, was the same kind though not the same quality, as Dempsey's. Same members, organs, tissues, and fluids. But to what had nine out of ten of the thousand men and women at this ringside reduced their mechanism? A sluggish, wheezing, sensitive, undependable, easily wearied mass of humors and vapors incapable of functioning them comfortably off to sleep or restfuly to their food.

Why should not we all be that way, thought I, and the answer was so obvious as to be childish. Because we have not fortitude.

But while I was thinking these easy thoughts I wondered why Dempsey puffed so. "Stertorous breathing," as they say in the narratives of death scenes, it seemed to me and it made me anxious, but it was not puffing at all. What it was I will tell you in the next dispatch, for what I learned was instructive, and to get some instruction out of this rottenly environed game is what I am here for.

An Assortment of No. 1 Junk Picked Up on Fight Rialto

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

New York, June 18.—[Special.]—It probably has been mentioned before that among the boxing persons at Manhasset is Italian Joe Gans. Mr. Gans is celebrated for his left ear. It looks as if it had been stepped on by Jumbo.

Now everything—and this, too, probably has been mentioned before—everything is funereal at Manhasset. The visiting folks stand about in small knots as at a village funeral, stand about and whisper. One can almost hear them say, "Doesn't he look natural."

Only Looks Tough.

Well, there comes out of the silence the pattering of a punching bag. That will be Italian Joe Gans. He is muscled like a circus acrobat and looks as ferocious as a gorilla. The women gasp and comment upon his unexampled ferocity.

"He is scheduled to fight next Wednesday," says a New York sporting writer.

The women gasp again. "How terrible!" they cry.

"But," says the sporting writer, "the odds are 5 to 1."

"That he murders his opponent?" inquires a mere person.

"That he doesn't show up," returns the sporting writer drily. "He only looks tough."

Parking Space for Photogs.

Smack up against the arena in Jersey City is a six story factory. It would be an ideal spot for free lance photographers. Some of these personages approached Tex Rickard for the privilege of making snapshots from this magnificent viewpoint.

"Surest thing you know," Mr. Rickard said. "Go as far as you like. Any arrangements you can make for that roof will be all right with me."

The concession seekers hurried out to reason with the factory owner. He listened patiently until they had outlined all their plans and explained how careful they would be.

"Sorry," he said at length, "but Mr. Rickard is going to build a high board partition all 'round that roof."

This was bad. But hope returned. "Why not let us have the water tank on top?" was the next question.

"Well, the truth is," the owner said, "Mr. Rickard has leased this whole building for the day of the fight and is paying the wages of all my employés for the day, with the understanding that they are not to work. There will be only two men in charge, and they will be paid to keep you fellows out."

Which proves that Mr. Rickard improves each shining hour.

Nearly Stumps Deschamps.

M. Deschamps has a name that is slow in filtering into the speech of the natives. Pronunciations vary from the crude and impossible Dezchamps to the correct and orderly Day-kahm. A young woman only imperfectly versed in the romance language implored the privilege of viewing the interior of the Carpentier training camp.

M. Deschamps swiftly appeared before the young woman as if out of nowhere with upraised hands and many "Non, non, nons."

"Why, this is ridiculous!" exclaimed the young woman. "People always go to training camps. It's dreadfully silly of you."

"Bot, madame," the manager returned, "thees eez not for every wan. Een thees countree you hav' wot you call respec' of the law. Tha's wot they say of all Americaines. I mak' wan leetle law an' you wan' come an' brak' eet. Es zat nize?"

The young woman demurred a moment. Then she plucked up.

"But the French are famous for their politeness, their chivalry, and true knightly courtesy," she cooed.

Deschamps seemed to have struck a rock. The young woman saw she had him. She was going to get in. She was sure of it when Deschmps' face lighted up with true Latin affability.

"Ah, madame," he said, "would you not lak' for come an' see ware M'sieu Carpentier often come for peek flowers?"

Foxy M'sieu Day-kahm.

Standing Room for 8,000.

Proving the ancient saw that there's always room for one more, Mr. Rickard has provided standing room for some 8,000 more persons in the Jersey arena by nailing a couple of extra planks all around the extreme edge of the amphitheater. With Elmer Douglass' three inch telescope one might see the ring on a clear day.

"The Iron Man."

Out on the coast a couple of years ago there was a likely looking lightweight called "The Iron Man." He could take a world of punishment and could hit with both hands standing on his elbow. What the eighteenth amendment forgot to do to booze "The Iron Man" did. He was on the way to a championship, but he accepted the chairmanship of the likker lover's league instead.

It rained yesterday; workmen on the Jersey arena laid down their tools and went home. The huge wooden bowl was deserted, save for a lone watchman, who slouched across far down in the center of this valley of terraced seats. A little imagination could picture 60,000 howling citizens applauding two boxers in the ring. The watchman wasn't imagining. He was wet from earning $5 a day slouching around. A little dog was barking at his heels.

This was what had been "The Iron Man."

Peoria Merchant to Make Trip to J. C. with Krone

Abe Strause, merchant of Peoria, has made reservations for himself and a party of five on the special train Doc Krone will run to the Dempsey-Carpentier fight. Krone reports that the special over the New York Central is nearly made up.

James Dwyer and J. F. Million, brokers, will join the party on the Hotel Morrison Special to the Dempsey fight. They have ordered ten tickets. R. J. Raleigh and Eddie McGovern also will be in the party.

Benton Harbor, Mich., June 18.—Sailor Freedman, who battles Benny Leonard here July 4, descended upon the twin cities today. Just when Benny Leonard will arrive is problematical.

NEW YORK STEWS IN MASS OF PREDICTIONS ABOUT TITLE SCRAP

BY HARRY NEWMAN.

New York, June 18.—[Special.]—This old town of ours seems to have gone plumb cuckoo over that Jack Dempsey-Georges Capentier wrangle which will be decided at Jersey City on July 2. About every seven steps we are tripped up by wildly excited persons shooting interogations and spilling opinions, until right now we are all set to join the paper doll league.

Round they dash, this collection of ordinarily well behaved citizens, clogging the subways and hotel corridors, blocking traffic regulations for hours at a time, and, worst of all, they are just as divided now in opinions as when they started their rampage of discussion weeks ago.

It all has to do with that big international scrap which Tex Rickard is going to stage in his mammoth arena next month—Tex will have a lot to answer for before the whole thing is settled.

Welter of Opinions.

Opinions are scattered about with utter abandon. They never arrive at any conclusion, but groups are in there every minute shooting their views from every angle. Hotel corridors are favorite spots for these birds, and it was our misfortune unconsciously to flop into one of the gatherings today.

"D'ye think Carpentier has a chance?" "Why, Jack will grab that frog so fast that he'll never know what hit him." "Carpentier will knock that mutt stiff." "Why, 'at guy couldn't lick Brennan." "Why don't 'at mutt fight Harry Wills?" "Betcher three to one Dempsey cops in the first round." "That Frenchman is a false alarm." "Tom Gibbons could take both of them tramps in the same ring."

There they were, all going at top speed, until finally we eased ourselves on the outskirts of the mob and made a wild dash for the door, only to run kerflunk into another gathering, which was going through the same threatening attitudes and holding up no less than 20,000 persons right on Broadway's busiest spot.

Maelstrom of Argument.

Yes, indeed, the folks of this well behaved village are gunning around in rings and getting nowhere. Arguments flourish in every direction. Homes are being neglected, and if they don't hurry up and pull that big quarrel there is no telling what will become of some our best citizens.

While all this fuss is going on, we thought we would step around among some of the first guessers and find out what they thought of the coming scrap. These wise birds are morally for Carpentier, but financially they are ready to send in everything, including the family jewels, on Dempsey.

Sentiment cuts no figure with most of the gang with which we met up, and their ideas on the subject might be worth some consideration.

Here's How They "Pick" 'Em.

The appended list of fight notables and their opinions is respectfully submitted:

IKE DORGAN—Carpentier has a lot of speed, but I think Dempsey ought to get him in about four rounds. It's a lot of hokum to think that Dempsey will take him in one round—he won't be able to catch the frog for two rounds.

EDDIE FOY—Carpentier was made to order for Dempsey—Jack will grab him early.

HONEST JOHN KELLY—Carpentier is a good bet at three to one. I think the Frenchman is a much smarter boxer than Dempsey.

FRANK E. COULTRY—Carpentier will furnish the surprise.

FRANCIS ALBERTANTI—Nothing to it but Dempsey! About two rounds is my guess.

JIMMY SULLIVAN—Carpentier will beat this bird! Just mark my words.

DR. ROLLER—Dempsey will be knocked out if he isn't any better than when he fought Brennan.

DR. PHIL HANLEY—Any time that Dempsey gets ready the show will end.

BILL BRENNAN—I don't think Carpentier can go four rounds with Dempsey.

JACK HAS PERFECTED GREATEST WALLOP OF ALL, SAYS M'AULIFFE

BY JACK M'AULIFFE.

[Retired undefeated lightweight champion.]

I heard a lot about the improvement in his left hand, but I got the first proof of it here when he was sparring with Battling Ghee, the colored boy.

His left is not only the best, but he has perfected the greatest of all punches, the one-two left of the original Jack Dempsey. It is the greatest blow of the ring, because there is no defense against it.

If Dempsey gets an opening for that left in the first round and gets it over with a right cross, the Frenchman will go down and stay down.

HEWITT TRACK CAPTAIN.

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 18.—Orville Hewitt, Pittsburgh, has been elected captain of the 1922 track team of the University of Pittsburgh. The champion and challenger are known for their aggressiveness and their willingness to take a punch to land one. They are fast and clever and the contest should be featured by action in every round.

According to Nate Lewis, manager of Burman, there was little to choose between the fighters in their previous mills. Their last contest at Cleveland went ten rounds, and the popular verdict was a draw. While Lynch will enter the ring at catchweights and Burman at 119 pounds, there is not expected to be more than three pounds' difference in weight.

The main bout of this show will be supported by a corking semi-windup which will bring together Babe Asher, bantamweight champion of the A. E. F. forces, and Jack Sharkey. This contest would be a suitable windup for most any show. Frankie Snaeffer, local lightweight, and George Chaney of the east will be the principals in the opening contest.

Tickets can be secured at 129 North Dearborn street and at 153 North Clark street. Al Bloom will run a special train over the Illinois Central.

TITLE BATTLES IN MIDDLE WEST NOT OVERLOOKED

Although the heavyweight contest between Champion Jack Dempsey and Challenger Georges Carpentier is commanding most attention of pugilistic fans, the fights between Joe Lynch, bantam champion, and Joe Burman at the Twin City A. C. in East Chicago on the night of June 28, and the one between Benny Leonard, king of the lightweights, and Sailor Freeman of Chicago at Benton Harbor on the afternoon of July 4 are not being overlooked.

In fact, there are hundreds of fans in Chicago who will forego the heavyweight contest to take in the matches in the middle west. Others have made arrangements to witness the June 28 battle and depart on the following day for Jersey City.

According to articles of agreement binding the Leonard-Freedman match, both must be on the battle ground two weeks before the contest. Tom Bigger, chairman of the Michigan State boxing commission, always has been a stickler for rules, and the champion and challenger will settle down to earnest training at Benton Harbor tomorrow.

Freedman Realizes Big Chance.

Freedman left yesterday with his corps of trainers and sparring partners. The pride of the west side ghetto is determined to put up the fight of his career, and with an even break in the luck expects to give the champion one of the hardest battles since he became master in his class.

Freedman and his manager, Hirshey Miller, realize what the result means. They are looking a long way ahead. Since he started training for this fight, Freedman has been developing a left hook, which will be mastered during the two weeks of training at Eastman Springs. With both fighters settling down to the final lap of preparation tomorrow, fight fans will begin to draw conclusions.

Promoter Floyd Fitzsimmons is making arrangements to handle the crowd in much better shape than last year. Tickets for this show are on sale at 129 North Dearborn street and at 153 North Clark street.

Big Crowd at Hoosier Scrap.

Because of the sterling battles put up by Lynch and Burman in their three previous meetings, Promoter Harry Hyams of the Twin City A. C. should draw a capacity crowd to East Chicago.

MORE ABOUT "BEST" BAITS.

OUR recent article on "Best Baits" aroused more curiosity and brought more requests for details than we anticipated. Perhaps we made a mistake in assuming that all of these old true and tried lures are better known than they really are; that almost every man or boy who goes a-fishing is familiar with them.

LARRY ST. JOHN.

Take, for instance, our choice of the "best" black bass and pickerel casting and trolling lure—the old spinner, fly, and pork strip combination. Laws a-massy, I thought EVERYBODY knew all about this venerable, ancient, time honored fish getter; but I reckon I was wrong on that guess, judging from the number of inquiries I am getting as to how to go about rigging up the thingamajig.

Here's how:

To the end of the line tie a swivel snap, or, if fishing in waters where the pike tribe abound, use instead a short wire leader or trace, with a swivel snap on the end. On the snap hook a dipsey sinker, say of quarter ounce size, for added casting weight. On the same snap hook the spinner—a No. 3 single or tandem is the average size with this rig.

To the snap fastener of the spinner fasten the fly. This may be a common bass fly, although the regular casting fly is better. It should be weedless, either by having a wire weed guard, or with stiff feathers covering the hook point. These flies are often made with weighted bodies, in which case the dipsey sinker need not be used, if the caster casts with a light line. A piece of pork strip is fastened to the hook of the fly and the rig is ready to use.

Sometimes a piece of pickerel gullet is used instead of the pork strip, and this is a famous lure. The white rubber imitation pork strips are gaining in favor also, because they eliminate the bothersome pork bottle.

The spinner, fly, and strip combination is a favorite lure because it catches fish, is as weedless as any good hooking bait can be, is easy to cast, and is sportsmanlike—hooking the fish always in the jaw and giving him a good fighting chance. By using spinners of different sizes and finishes, and flies of different coloration, an endless variety of lures may be employed, suitable for every condition of weather and water.

There are a number of patented baits on the market built on the spinner and fly principle, to which a pork strip or gullet may be added, with splendid results. No two ways about it, the spinner, fly, and strip combination, in almost any of its varied forms, is SOME combination.

A good many inquire about the details of the "best" carp bait. It is quite simple:

Get some red dog flour, or some other coarse kind, as it is more "gooey" than the kind you will buy eventually. Mix it with water into a very stiff dough. Roll into pellets of about hazlenut size and drop them into a kettle of boiling water. When they come to the top fish them out and plunge them immediately into a bucket of cold water; this hardens them so they will stick to the hook and avoids the trouble common to ordinary dough balls, which soon wash away.

Put two or three of these pellets on the hook and, if possible, do your fishing at a spot that has been baited well with these pellets the night before.

To prepare our "best" catfish bait is easier still:

Get some liver at the butcher shop—chicken livers if you can get them—cut it into pieces about the size of a silver dollar, place them in an earthenware jar, and cover thoroughly with powdered alum. Set in a cool place until you are ready to go fishing; then wash the liver and cover it lightly with table salt. Fresh liver no doubt is just as appealing to a hungry "cat" as the alum treated, but the alum toughens it and makes it stay on the hook longer.

ROSCOE SARLES WINS AUTO RACE AT 97.75 AVERAGE

Uniontown, Pa., June 18.—Roscoe Sarles today won the sixth annual Universal trophy race—225 miles—in 2:18:20, at an average speed of 97.75 miles an hour. Eddie Hearne was second in 2:18:57, and Eddie Miller third in 2:20:52.

Sarles stopped at the pits only once and Hearne covered the entire distance without pulling in for repairs.

The car driven by J. Ellingboe turned over on the 129th lap and both driver and his mechanician were painfully, though not seriously, injured.

PADDOCK BREAKS 5 SPRINT MARKS IN A. A. U. TRIALS

Pasadena, Cal., June 18.—Charles W. Paddock, University of Southern California sprinter, lowered the records for 90, 110, 130, 150 and 200 yards at tryouts for the National A. A. U. championships, according to official timing, but injured a muscle in his right leg just before reaching the last mark.

Dr. A. M. Weston of Los Angeles, who attended the runner, said healing would take about ten days, but he feared the injury might have the effect of slowing Paddock up for the A. A. U. championships here July 2, 4 and 5.

Paddock's time for the various marks follows: 90 yards, 8 4-5 seconds; 110 yards, 10½ seconds; 130 yards, 12 3-5 seconds; 150 yards, 14 1-5 seconds; 200 yards, 19 seconds. He also tied the record for 100 yards of 9 3-5 seconds, the timers announced.

The marks were made in the 110 and 200 yard dashes, three tapes being stretched in each.

The accepted records for the distances are:

90 yards, 9 1-5 seconds, made by Howard P. Drew at Brooklyn, N. Y., April 27, 1901.
110 yards, 10 4-5 seconds, made by Robert Cloughren, Celtic park, N. Y., Sept. 5, 1914.
120 yards, 12 4-5 seconds, made by Robert Cloughren at Brooklyn, Feb. 11, 1909, tied by Howard P. Drew at Brooklyn, Nov. 22, 1913; 150 yards, 14 4-5 seconds, made by C. H. Sperill Jr., at New York City, May 17, 1890, and tied by J. Owen at Detroit, Sept. 13, 1890; 200 yards, 20 seconds, made by W. Baker in New York City, Nov. 8, 1890.

Robert S. Weaver, president of the A. A. U., who acted as starter and referee, said he saw no reason why Paddock's records should not be accepted officially.

Two on Way from Coast Ahead of Their Schedule

Julian de Kestel Hankin of New York and H. G. Yerg of Nutley, N. J., reported at THE TRIBUNE office yesterday. Hankin wagered $1,000 with Fred Sherman of Toronto he could cross the continent from Oakland, Cal., to New York in forty-five days. He is not allowed to ride on railroad trains, but can solicit "lifts" in automobiles. So far the travelers have ridden in sixty-six cars. They started May 30 and have twenty-eight days left to make New York.

STEEL WORKERS PLAN CAMPAIGN AGAINST PAY CUT

Closing of Mills Weakens the Unions.

Denver, Colo., June 18.—Representatives of the Steel Workers' union will meet here tomorrow to plan a strong organization campaign in preparation for what they believe will be further wage reductions.

"E. H. Gary and other leaders in the steel industry have indicated they will soon reduce wages again," said David T. Davies, delegate to the American Federation of Labor convention. "There is one thing sure, and that is they will go as far as they dare."

Davies said the steel union had "come back strong" after the disastrous strike of two years ago. One reason, he said, was a reorganization of the committee which had charge of the strike. Some of the leaders, including William Z. Foster and John Fitzpatrick, dropped out.

Under normal business conditions, Davies said, the union would be stronger today than it was before the strike.

"Some of the mills are operating at only 35 to 40 per cent capacity," he said. "Many of the men aren't able to pay their union dues and organization campaigns among them are contemplated."

Many delegates today visited Colorado Springs as guests of the typographical union.

Lewis for President.

Colorado Springs, Colo., June 18.—The probability that John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, would oppose Samuel Gompers for reelection as president of the American Federation of Labor, was increased today by report that representatives of the majority of the railroad organizations at a conference last night had decided to support his candidacy.

These reports brought here today by delegates to the federation convention, who came from Denver on a special train for an outing in the Pike's Peak region, declared Lewis would announce his candidacy before next Monday.

The miners' chief, however, continued to maintain silence, but his boomers were busy rounding up supporters for his candidacy. They claimed that Lewis had sufficient votes to win, if he decided to run.

"WANTED AT HOME AND NEEDED BADLY," PLEA TO MISSING HUSBAND

Mrs. Minnie Key of Elwood, Ind., writes to THE TRIBUNE asking its aid in locating her husband, Ira, 26 years old, who left her and their two children recently.

IRA KEY.

"There was no trouble," she says, "only he was out of work and had lots of debts and was disgusted here. I would like to let him know that everything here is O. K., and to tell him to come back or write.

"Here is his picture. Please print under it: 'Wanted at home and needed badly by his wife and family.'"

"BIG FOUR" PACTS STILL HOLD, RAIL BOARD DECIDES

Only National Agreements Die on July 1.

Through a formal interpretation of its decision of April 14 directing that existing national working agreements between railways and their employés terminate July 1 the United States railroad labor board ruled yesterday that this decision (No. 119) does not apply to the four big brotherhoods—trainmen and yard employés.

A second far reaching interpretation of the same decision, also announced yesterday, disposed of the question whether agreements covering rules and working conditions shall be negotiated directly with the employés or with organizations representing them. The ruling favored the unions.

Decision for Unions.

In dealing with this the board cited a passage from decision 119, which read:

"The majority of any craft or class of employés shall have the right to determine what organization shall represent members of such craft or class. Such organization shall have the right to make an agreement which shall apply to all employés in such craft or class."

The question came to the labor board through a dispute between the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employés, and three railways—the Missouri, Kansas and Texas, the Wichita Falls and Northwestern, and the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railway of Texas.

Closed Shop Point Involved.

The roads had objected to having a working agreement with employés labeled to designate the agreement as one between the railways and the brotherhood. They contended such an agreement would not include nonmembers of the brotherhood, and would result in a closed shop. The brotherhood, on the other hand, maintained it did not aim at a pact that would exclude nonmembers.

The board's interpretation now definitely stipulates that any agreement shall be labeled as between the roads and organizations that may have been selected to represent employés.

"Big Four" Case Not Included.

The interpretation affecting the four big brotherhoods read:

"The labor board did not, nor could it, under the provisions of the transportation act, 1920, include in its decision No. 119 any matter which was not properly before it as a dispute. Decision No. 119 did not therefore, terminate the existing schedules or agreements of the train, engine, and yard employés in the service of the carriers involved. Changes in such schedules or agreement, however, may be made after the required notice, either by agreement of the parties or by decision of this board after conference between the parties and proper reference in accordance with the provisions of the transportation act and the rules of the board."

Railway expressmen, who will be affected in greatest number by the proposal of the American Railway Express company to reduce the pay of its 80,000 employés about 25 per cent, completed their case protesting against the cut. The express company seeks to wipe out increases awarded by the labor board in August, 1920. A decision is expected by July 1.

MINERS TO WORK COAL MINE IN CO-PARTNERSHIP

Lease from Owner When He Fails.

Ottawa, Ill., June 18.—[Special.]—Cooperative coal mining is about to be given its first trial in Illinois. Monday the G. & J. coal mine at Senaca, Ill., will begin operation under a lease held jointly by the miners and the operator, Joshua L. Jones.

Jones, who operated the mine for the last ten years, was forced to close down a month ago because of financial difficulties. He could not meet the pay roll.

The men suggested that they band together and lease the property from Jones. After several conferences the plan was adopted. Yesterday the state mine inspector gave permission to operate the shafts.

Under the agreement the price of coal is fixed at $5.75 a ton. The miners will pay themselves so much a ton and at the end of the year divide the profits after paying Jones a royalty.

They have induced local financiers to back them and have employed a general manager and a pit boss.

The lease has been made out for one year. The miners believe they will make less money per day at the start, but later, in dividing the profits, will gain by the arrangement.

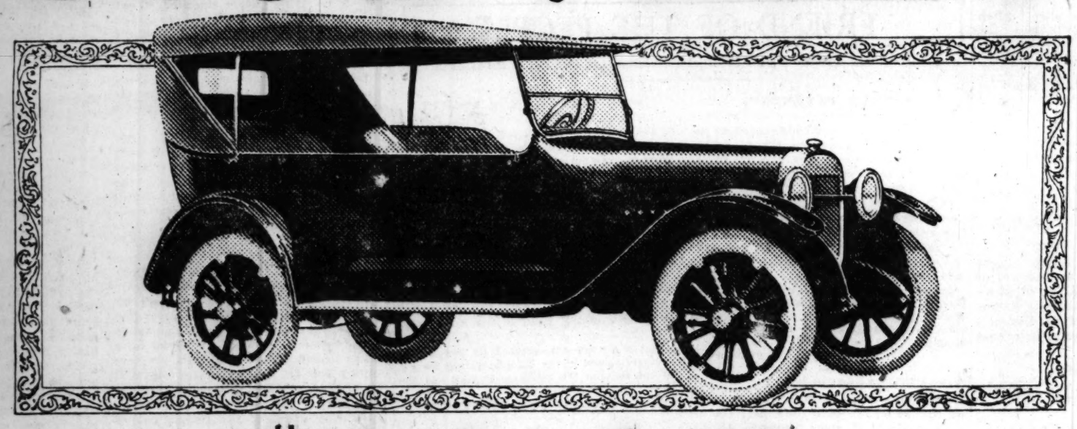
THE MOST REASONABLY PRICED FINE CAR EVER MADE

The Test of Good Value



$1145

New Price — F. o. b. Pontiac

ON MAY 9th the prices on all Oakland models were reduced $250.00.

Thus Oakland was the first among the larger builders of automobiles to join in the movement towards the general readjustment of values and prices on all things.

And thus Oakland overnight established a new record for high value in automobiles that in spite of reductions made in the prices of other cars is still a record.

Today's Oakland has not been "cheapened" in order to establish the new price.

Not a single part has been eliminated or less expensively made; no feature of equipment has been omitted; no part of the car has been made smaller. Instead it has been improved and refined.

So at the new price Oakland Six gives a greater value per dollar than at any time in its history—if not a greater value per dollar than offered by any other car.

Compare Today's Oakland with any other standard automobile. Put it to any test.

You will find that no other car at Oakland's price has as much horsepower—44 H. P. at 2600 R. P. M. or 1 H. P. to every 55 pounds of car weight.

No other car at Oakland's price has as long a wheel base—115 inches.

No other car at Oakland's price produces greater gasoline economy—18 to 25 miles to the gallon.

No other six cylinder car at Oakland's price is equipped with as large as 32"x4" tires.

No other car at Oakland's price has as deep a frame as 6½ inches.

No other car at Oakland's price has as much room in both front and rear compartments.

No other car at Oakland's price has as wide seats both front and rear.

No other car at any price has as low a center of gravity insuring the highest percentage of safety on the road.

No other car of Oakland's wheel base is as light in weight—2421 pounds for the open models, 2733 pounds for the Sedan and 2550 for the Coupe—effecting an economy of maintenance and operation not possible to heavier cars.

Prove these things for yourself. Call at our show room and examine Today's Oakland.

Or without obligation on your part we will arrange for a demonstration if you will phone us.

Place the car alongside any other you may be considering and by comparing sizes, weights, measures, equipment and all other essentials that decide the worth of a car, determine for yourself, as we know you can, that Today's Oakland Six is Today's highest value car.

AN AMERICAN FOREIGN POLICY.

Mr. John Steele, London representative of THE TRIBUNE'S foreign news service, says that our government "will be consulted before the Anglo-Japanese treaty is renewed and there will be no renewal unless the pact is agreeable to the United States."

This is, perhaps, too broad a statement, but as to the critical terms touching war and immigration we have no doubt it is accurate. Mr. Steele, an exceptionally well informed and judicious observer, gives as his authority "one of the most important figures in the imperial conference which opens next Monday." He also reminds us that Prime Ministers Hughes of Australia, Massey of New Zealand, and Smuts of South Africa have already declared that the Anglo-Japanese agreement must be acceptable to us, and we can not doubt that Premier Meighan of Canada will coincide with them.

In fact, we do not see how it could be otherwise since all the English speaking commonwealths have a common interest in the peace of the Pacific and in the protection of their nations from the grave evils of race conflict. We cannot conceive that any British government would be permitted to jeopardize the vital interests of the colonies for the benefit of any lesser interests, and nothing would so fatally sacrifice them as an agreement with Japan which would alienate the great power of the United States.

But while British consideration of our opinion seems to us founded on enlightened self-interest, as all state policy should be, we have none the less reason to appreciate and welcome it. Indeed, American opinion should take note of this fact as representative of a still larger fact, namely, that it is to the advantage of both the American people and the British that their international policies shall be intelligently cooperative and mutually supporting wherever possible.

Doubtless we have competitive interests and no illusions as to the will of our respective peoples to pursue those interests with the shrewdness and energy which mark both nations. But underlying these competitions are common interests of a more vital moment to the lasting welfare of both peoples, and our common language, morale, and habit of thought should make it possible for us to form our larger policies so as to give mutual support to such underlying interests.

To be concrete, both are commercial nations whose basic concern is the maintenance of world peace. Both are vitally concerned in the protection and healthy development of the vast structure of international credit. Both are trading nations whose common concern is the maintenance within reasonable limits of open world markets and secure world thoroughfares. Neither is in need of territorial expansion, although both have interests outside of their boundaries which they must conserve. And because of the immense transactions growing out of the world war, each is vitally interested in the economic and financial stability of the other.

These, stated very generally, are the material considerations which should and we confidently believe will compel a general harmony in Anglo-American relations. We do not ignore the moral content of the problem of international relations. We do not expect there will not be sharp clashes of self-interest and unpleasant friction from time to time. We are aware of the fact that British interests are being pressed with vigor and adroitness in all parts of the world, and we hope American interests will be as ably furthered by ourselves. We are not seeking from the British nor they from us unworldly sacrifices in affairs of this world. But we have an abiding confidence in the common sense of both the British and the American peoples and we are equally confident that it points clearly to a practical harmonizing of our major policies and an intelligent mutual support in the basic concerns which are common to us.

For the time being, the problem of giving our international policies the true form of essential American interest is more difficult than the similar problem with which the British governments must deal. For one thing, our people and their representatives are new to the intense contacts of contemporary international relations. We have been an insular people, and we do not find it easy to think clearly and definitely in terms of international relations. We are, in fact, illy informed of the subject matter of international relations even where our own interests are immediate and substantial. It is wise, therefore, for us to move with caution. At the moment, this caution is intensified by a sense of our narrow escape from ill considered commitments, to which we were urged by our own chief representative with a minimum of knowledge or concern for our legitimate interests.

Another deterrent to confident and decisive action is the existence among our people of strong ties of sentiment and tradition which lie without the American scheme and often resist the free direction of American interest. These influences retard but we do not believe will defeat the evolution of a sound American foreign policy. Sentiment for alien causes, violently expressed as it often is, is compelling the assertion of American self-interest, and we find day by day that American opinion increases its resistance to the bias of alienisms existing within our citizenship. It is possible, indeed, that we shall have this alienism to thank for accelerating rather than retarding the establishment of a firmly outlined American policy.

That policy must and will be founded on basic American interests. It will not be perverted by alien sentiment or alien interests. American spirit and intelligence will in the long run see to that.

A CASH JOB FOR THE MID-WEST SENATORS.

If the agrarian bloc just organized in the United States senate under the leadership of Mr. Kenyon of Iowa, and including among others the senators from the two Dakotas, Nebraska, Iowa, Wisconsin, Kansas, and Oklahoma, will turn its attention from the visionary and questionable advantages of regulating grain exchanges and packer bills and devote its efforts to improving waterways it may net some $300,000,000 a year for its farmer constituents.

Julius H. Barnes, former president of the United States Grain corporation, speaking before the international joint commission on Oct. 20, 1920, set the improvement in the farm position at $336,000,000 a year if the reduction in transportation costs which would follow the improvement of the St. Lawrence seaway could be fully reflected to the farmers in the sixteen states whose farm price level would be improved by reduction of transportation costs. His figures were based upon a comparison of projected water rates and rail rates at that time.

Mr. Barnes, basing his figures on long and careful study, declared that any one familiar with the operating statements of lake carriers must agree that a standard grain rate of 6 cents a bushel for the seven day trip from Chicago or Duluth to Montreal, with no west bound cargo whatever, and only eight months of operation, would earn substantial dividends on the cost of such lake carriers. This, he figured at that time, would save middle western grain growers 10 cents a bushel at least.

But between April, 1919, and April, 1921, the rail freight charge has risen from 19 cents a bushel to 26 cents a bushel, while in the same time the market value of a bushel of wheat dropped from $2.65 to $1.36½. In the meantime the cost of operation of lake carriers has not increased. It would appear from these figures, therefore, that today the substitution of water transportation for rail transportation, through an improved seaway, would save middle western farmers in close contact with lake ports in the neighborhood of 20 cents a bushel, and would extend at least part of this saving as far south as Oklahoma and as far west as the Rockies.

Instead of paying as today approximately one bushel out of every seven for freight, the Iowa or Illinois farmer would pay approximately one bushel out of every thirty. From Montreal to European ports the rate is exactly the same as from New York to such ports, so with elevator and transshipment charges the same there would be no loss to the farmer on that score. Incidentally, if ocean carriers would come all the way in to lake ports to pick up their cargoes, as they could do with the improved seaway, even the transfer charges would be eliminated.

It means hundreds of millions of dollars to middle western farmers, both in saving and in the stimulation of a foreign market, even though the entire saving does not go to the producer. There is something definitely and tangibly progressive. It does not smack in any way of reform. Perhaps for that very reason it is not popular with legislators. But it would be popular with the farmers and of advantage to the entire country if the mid-west bloc in the senate would only devote its efforts to such constructive work rather than to tearing down existing institutions.

THE COST OF NATIONAL DEFENSE.

Every now and then THE TRIBUNE hears from some reader who is much perturbed because more money is appropriated for the upkeep of the army and navy than for any other branch of government. We cannot sympathize with such complaints.

The first and fundamental duty of a state is to provide for its defense. This is in obedience to the "first law of nature," self-preservation. States which neglect this duty pay a heavy price, a price the accumulated total of which is far greater than the tax levied for the upkeep of the reasonable defense required under a pacific policy such as ours. China has neglected this duty, and because of the philosophy which has produced the neglect, as well as of the neglect itself, she has paid, and is paying, a price which no American would like his country, himself, or his posterity to pay.

Men and women who are living in comfort and security behind the defenses which the army and navy provide are very short sighted to begrudge the cost of defense. It would be a good thing for them, for all of us, and for our future, if they could have been in France to see what invasion means and to have shared the cost of a nation's struggle for existence.

Instead they remained at home, paying a price in money that has given them, not a realization of how well spent are taxes devoted to the army and navy, but a reluctance to pay them. This is the result of ignorance and want of vision.

Armies and navies do not insure peace. They do, if large enough and efficient enough, keep war away from the countryside. In the recent war our army and our navy, in conjunction with those of our allies, kept the war out of our country. The hostility expressed toward military appropriations betokens an animosity towards our country's defenders—past as well as present.

Editorial of the Day

A GREAT VICTORY.

[Daily Oklahoman.]

One of the greatest newspaper victories scored for clean city government since the San Francisco Bulletin got Mayor Schmitz through Abe Ruef was registered by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE last week when the voters of Cook county, Ill., elected the coalition ticket of Circuit court judges and defeated the Lundin-Thompson hand picked crowd of machine candidates.

Mayor Thompson and his black pope, Fred Lundin, went further than any boss politician since the days of Quay has ventured when he boldly stepped out to command the judiciary.

THE TRIBUNE never minced matters. Every connection from the machine candidates to Lundin and Thompson was turned up and published broadcast. Probably the most effective angle of THE TRIBUNE'S campaign was the use of John T. McCutcheon, with a series of front page cartoons that pictured the gang control of the bench with a power that even those who could not read would understand.

Chicago is better off today because of THE TRIBUNE'S fearless flight.

The Lundin-Thompson Republican machine crowd thinks THE TRIBUNE is a rotten newspaper and is talking about starting a big newspaper to put it out of business, but THE TRIBUNE probably will continue to worry along with the support of the people.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

SERENITY.

How like a perfect gem is this dear day.
The sky, since early morn, no cloud has known;
The winds with gentleness the leaves have blown,
Nor from the rose one petal borne away.
The bird that sang at dawn, now sings his lay
At twilight's hour, and makes its peace his own;
While up across the meadows, newly-mown,
A fragrance, like to incense, bids us pray.
Lo, now, above the mountain's top, appears
Night's harbinger of sleep's benign caress;
Westward, the young moon sails adown the skies;
Upon the grass a moisture, like to tears,
Glistens—and on the lashes of mine eyes
Large drops, welled up from love of loveliness.

A LETTER TO B. L. T.

Dear Judge: When I awoke this morning, and peered out the window of a night boat on the river, we were passing Grant's tomb. How restful a night one can have on a river boat, lulled to sleep by a distant pulsing of engine throbs and with a sense that the boat is striding along as if walking carefully instead of floating!

So was the last leg of a journey from Albany to New York. At this season you would be yearning for the pack and trail and the open road, but with me it is different. My paths are brightest, my day less dreary when I come in more close to packed-in civilization. Where men are thickest there is more interest, more competition, more clash of mind, and some eccentric thing about it all feeds the wanderlust that was always in me and will ever seek to cut the ties and ropes that hold my body while my mind is elsewhere on a bright quest.

We slipped gently along and tied up, so that we were free to leave. But before this time we passed some foreign ships pulling at anchor and, it seemed to me, anxious to crest a series of big waves back to foreign ports. I wonder why some inanimate things so exercise one's mind and imagination? When I saw these ships, no longer freaks of war's cubist art of camouflage, but in regulation coats of paint, my mind flew back to France. The associated picture was an event that will always come to mind when Armistice Day arrives. A cold house, a group gathered in the little kitchen, the old Grandmère, and "Madame," who was known to my orderly as "Old Hardnose," and little Leone, who was 8 and my teacher of French, and a little American whom Leone had nicknamed Lieutenant "Toto" because he was so very small and active. Grandmère had gone to the untouched recesses of her cellar and brought out a cherished bottle of ancient wine. A toast to the two American officers who had been not billeted on Grandmère's simple premises, nay! We were her guests, and so appraised and measured. Grandmère's arms about our shoulders and our genuine regret at parting.

"You are like my son who was killed in battle," said Grandmère; and then her tirade against the Kaiser. The snap and go of a march to entrain—little Leone walking, with her hand in mine, at the head of the column, and "Madame's" anxiety that her small daughter would march too far, so that she herself must perforce walk alongside and cry from time to time that the child had already gone much too far.

Well, what a picture one can find to unreel when the sight of an ocean tramp is photographed to the mind by a casual look! URSUS.

SONG.

All the world is lovely,
Life is sweet and fair;
They are blind who find it
Desolate and bare.
Smiles and birds and roses throng
Every heart that thrills with song;
If one has but eyes to see,
Beauty bides eternally.
For the heart that's loving,
Love is everywhere. T. C. C.

Expressing hope of a mild winter, Adaline More cites congressional bill 2223, men's section 19, of the revenue act, which provides for a tax of $8 on union suits and $5 a garment on two-piece underwear. One of the crueler sections of bill 256 provides for a 100 per cent tax on incomes in excess of $500,000.

Will a Neighbor Clip This for Aries?

Sir: Hasn't some one commented on the restraint of the Bar Association in asking the Attorney General to investigate election frauds because Mr. Crowe has "publicly announced he is friendly to the Thompson administration"? And what would be the verdict if you were the judge called to pass upon the sanity of a chap who asked that his conservator be the silent boss of Springfield politics? And would Mr. Edison be interested in knowing that the useful Mr. Hughes gave books on shellac and beetles the go-by while in college, although he was a bear for fiction? I say, Aries, I'm a poor guy m'self. But while out in the woods I couldn't wait for my Sunday paper (which came on Monday)—had to buy one Sunday morning besides. Just had to see your stuff. Believe me or not. HTS.

ANGELUS.

Like a red lantern in the misty sky,
The full moon hangs above the silver lake,
Along the curving beach the hemlocks sigh,
Among the wharves the waves soft murmur make.
Across the water, from some hidden shore,
Thru the half-darkness chime low evening bells.
The forest sinks to silence more and more;
Still their cool silver music fades and swells,
With golden flame the first pale stars appear,
Once more the bells peal out, then slowly cease.
The echoes from the hilltops far and near Thin into nothing, whispering of peace.

BREAST FEEDING.

EACH of the baby foods has some advantages and some disadvantages. No food compares with human milk for the human baby. It is practically free from bacteria, does not contain tubercle bacilli or other disease producing bacteria, is always fresh and of the right temperature, never spoiled, and comes nearer having the food elements present in exactly the right proportions than does any other baby food.

The baby who takes it rarely has diarrhea, and, if so, it is not serious as a rule. They have only one-seventh the death rate of babies otherwise fed, and their advantage in the hot months is greater still. They have far less measles, scarlet fever, diphtheria, and other contagious diseases. The only disadvantage is that if the baby cannot get or take mother's milk because of diarrhea, or because the milk disagrees, or because of other reasons, it is difficult to feed the baby.

The advantage to the mother is that she is spared the strain of nursing her baby through serious illnesses. Some women fatten and feel at their best while nursing their babies. The mother who breast feeds gets more pleasure from motherhood and gets a firmer hold on the affections of her child.

The disadvantages to the mother are few. It keeps the mother at home. She cannot stay away from her baby longer than four hours. This is in part overcome by having the mother give one artificial feeding a day. This permits her to get away once a day from six to eight hours. In many factories where women are employed the mothers are encouraged to go home once or twice during the day to breast feed their babies. Some women find breast feeding their young babies at 10, 2, and 6 o'clock and their older ones at 10 and 6 more troublesome than getting up, preparing and heating the babies' bottles. Others think it less trouble.

Extensive trials made in various parts of the world show that more than 95 per cent of the mothers of young babies can breast feed provided they can and will make that their principal business.

To do so they must not worry. They must get plenty of good sleep. They must not overwork. They must empty the breasts properly at regular intervals. As a rule complete emptying is advisable even though each breast is emptied not oftener than once every eight hours.

Some women fail because of broken sleep, others because they are overworked. The necessity for working out prevents many women from breast feeding. Diet is not much of a factor. A few women cannot breast feed because they eat too little, but the number in this country is small. As a rule mothers eat too much. In their desire to eat enough to furnish milk for the baby they overeat, cause some degree of digestion, or start on the road to obesity. There are no special milk producing foods. A diet composed of good milk, meat, bread, cereals, soups, vegetables, and fruits fills all requirements. Closing the breweries will not lessen the supply of mother's milk.

FEEDING TOO MUCH.

X. Y. Z. writes: "My baby (a girl) is 5 months old and only weighs 10¾ pounds. She weighed 7 pounds at birth. She was entirely breast-fed for four months, but did not seem to gain in weight or strength. So for the last month I have been giving her three feedings each day of 4½ ounces of boiled water and 9 teaspoonfuls of dry milk. As she suffers from constipation I add a half teaspoon of milk of magnesia to one bottle each day and since doing this she has one normal movement every day. She gets three feedings and I nurse her four times. She has been nursed every three hours from birth and only gets one feeding from 10 at night until 6 in the morning. She averages sixteen to seventeen hours' sleep out of the twenty-four. She has never been handled much and has never been rocked. She is good natured and never cries and frets unless needing attention. Is very strong and can almost sit alone. Is very bright and notices a great deal. So far as I can see there is nothing wrong with her, only she does not gain weight. She has gained about two ounces since beginning the dry milk. 1. Would you advise me to continue the dried milk or to try fresh or condensed milk? She likes the dried milk and it seems to agree with her. 2. Am I making it the proper strength?"

REPLY.

1. Yes, but you are feeding her too frequently. Feed her once every four hours during the day. Do not feed between 10 at night and 6 in the morning.

2. I do not know the weight of nine teaspoonfuls of dry milk. A child that age should have a little less than one-half an ounce of milk powder dissolved in six ounces of water at a feeding.

IT'S FOOLISH PRACTICE.

N. P. writes: "1. Is the use of veronal dangerous to health?

"2. Can 10 grains nightly be taken with safety by a person in a normal state of health?

"3. Does continuous use accustom the system to such an extent that increased doses are necessary to induce sleep?"

REPLY.

1. It is in a certain sense.

2. From a certain standpoint it would be safe, but it would be poor judgment to take it.

3. Yes.

SUNKEN PAVEMENT.

Chicago, June 14.—[Friend of the People.]—There is a square about four or five feet in size, the center of which has sunk to about six inches below the street level on North Ashland avenue. Every time a vehicle passes over this hole it sounds as though a collision has occurred. I understand an attempt has twice been made to repair this with no result. Kindly advise what course the neighbors can take to have this properly repaired. H. F. B.

Superintendent of the Twenty-sixth ward reports that temporary repairs have been made. Permanent repairs will be made as soon as asphalt forces are operating in this vicinity. THOS. H. BYRNE, Superintendent of Streets.

LOST DEED.

Chicago, June 16.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—What can be done in case a deed of some property is destroyed? The property was left to a daughter by her parents in a small town in Michigan. A. K. P.

Nothing need be done if the deed was recorded. If not, get grantor to execute a duplicate. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

BAD BUSINESS METHODS.

Chicago, June 15.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—One month ago four men, including myself, started an insurance agency of all kinds. We each put in an equal amount of capital. Now that the business is going good the other three want to oust me out of the business. We have contracts. Can I get my money back, if they have cause to get me out of the business? One fellow who did not put up a cent yet is doing to most to get me out. H. L.

Your rights depend largely on the wording of your partnership agreement. We advise you to employ an attorney. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

RETURNING PURCHASE.

Chicago, June 15.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Is there any law compelling a tailoring concern to refund the price of a suit of clothes which had been purchased from them? The suit was not made to order. J. S.

No, in absence of special agreement. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

LOSES INHERITANCE RIGHTS.

Chicago, June 14.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Has the state of Indiana any law prohibiting a divorced person from marrying another within any certain period following the divorce? If so, what is the prohibited period? "A" is divorced in the state of Indiana and within a few weeks proceeds with "B" to the state of Illinois and is there immediately married. They return to the state of Indiana to reside, "B" dies intestate, leaving real property and no parents or children to inherit it. Can the husband, "A," inherit the real property, or would it pass to the brother of "B"? A. W. F.

If the divorce was secured on one of the grounds named in the Illinois statute we are of the opinion the marriage is void and the husband would not inherit. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

A LOVER OF MUSIC.

Chicago, June 15.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Is there any law in Chicago regulating the time when one must cease the playing of musical instruments in an apartment building?

2. If there is such a law, what time is set as the limit?

3. Can a lease be terminated because of violation of this law? C. G. L.

1, 2, and 3. No specific limit; unreasonable playing might on proper facts be enjoined as a nuisance. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

INSTALLMENT PURCHASES.

Chicago, June 14.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I bought a machine from a company the other day on the installment plan, signing a contract and paying $10 down. After using the machine a couple of times I do not find it satisfactory and I have been asking the company to take it back, which they refuse to do and threaten to take legal action if I do not pay for it. Can they take the payments out of my husband's salary or take some other property from us to pay for it if I refuse to make the payments? E. A.

Yes, if the machine is in compliance with their agreement. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

TELLING E. J. MARTIN WHERE TO GET OFF.

Chicago, June 15.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I would like to say to Edward J. Martin, who is so pro-Dempsey and pro-everything else but pro-American, that his language is an insult to every red-blooded American in this country, and particularly to our finest American manhood, our boys who fought, whether volunteer or drafted. The thing is they went, while Martin and thousands of his ilk, as "conscientious objectors," or hiding behind some weak woman's skirts or other pretexts, stayed behind and spread their rotten ideas to excuse their cowardice and hatred of our laws and country.

Personally, the coming prize fight interests me little, but in comparing the character of the two men engaged in it, the Frenchman, Georges Carpentier, stands ace high, and I hope he wins.

I am and have been an American woman for sixty years, and if I could meet that Edward J. Martin for about ten minutes I would try to convince him it is not safe to speak his little piece of twaddle except to boneheads of his own kind.

Mr. Martin, as you live off of our beloved country, do try to be at least an imitation of an American citizen. If you can't, get off our earth. MARGUERITE JOHNSON.

A WOUNDED VET'S VIEW.

Chicago, June 15.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I want to say a good word for the cartoon you had in your paper on Sunday, May 12. John T. McCutcheon's cartoons tell the truth (without reservations) and are doing more for the ex-soldiers than anything published in the newspapers.

The law says Dempsey made no effort to evade the draft—but we all know he made no effort to enlist. No one will say that Dempsey is not ablebodied, so what is he, if he isn't a slacker? What held him back? Some Chicago papers are afraid to call him a slacker, but I am glad to see one (at last) that will. A few cartoons and articles with "a kick" will do more than a lot of "hot air" and "political guided" talk. I'll drop the question of nationality when it comes to the Carpentier-Dempsey fight.

Carpentier is a man that fought four years for our allies. Dempsey never wore a uniform, but wore patent leather shoes while building ships, yet he gets the money today and we who fought are still waiting to hear from a little compensation for disabilities.

A WOUNDED VET.

SHALL WE GIVE HIM YOUR ADDRESS, MARTIN?

Chicago, June 15.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The article of Martin defending Dempsey is typical of the stand taken by the millions [?] who hid behind false claims to exemption while their brothers donned the $15.00 khaki and captured the German machine gun nests to which he refers. Now Martin would like to know why some of the heroes out of jobs won't hire out as Dempsey's sparring partners if they are such gluttons for punishment. I'll answer Martin. They've done their bit—drafted or enlisted—they're all alike to me—now let the yellow streakers like Martin do the light chores, such as hiring out as the sparring partner of a slacker. It's a whole lot safer than it was in France, because if the shipyards worker should happen to kill one of his sparring partners the law will step in and prevent further slaughter. We had no protection of this sort in France. I don't claim to be able to lick Dempsey, but I'd like to meet one of the brave "cost plus" guys like Martin. "FULL HITCHER."

GOOD LUCK TO GEORGES.

Chicago, June 15.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Replying to one Edward J. Martin concerning the Dempsey fight and his exemption from the service, I happen to be an ex-soldier, which I am proud of, although I don't call myself a hero. I agree with Mr. Harry Lewis, 82d division, and hope Dempsey gets beat. I believe Mr. Martin owns a Ford and couple of dollars; that is the reason he makes such expressions concerning the men who went and gave all they had while he was staying home getting big wages, and no doubt he still holds a good job while ex-service men are walking the streets. With my heart and soul I am with ex-service men, enlisted or drafted, and, like Mr. Lewis, I hope Dempsey gets his block knocked off. M. M. KRAMICH.

A WORD FROM THE VOLUNTEER.

Chicago, June 15.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In reply to the article written in this column by Edward J. Martin, we wish to advise him that not all members of the 82d division were drafted into the service, and the writer happens to be one of those who volunteered.

However, we would much rather have been drafted or kicked into the service than to have remained out with the blood of the dead American soldiers on our hands. We doubt very much if Mr. Martin would dare make his statement in the presence of the wounded United States soldiers in any of our hospitals.

We have no apology to make for having served, and furthermore we know that the United States soldiers out of jobs would rather starve than to ask aid of Martin's type. I wonder how far this country would have gone in the world war if we had nothing but Martins and Dempseys to call upon.

It would be interesting to know how long Mr. Martin thinks he would last before some of the boys who wore the "$15 suits, of khaki" in a real fight on a French battlefield. It would not take much "printers' ink" to record his engagement. We admit it would be far easier to get rid of him than it would be to capture enemy "machine gun nests and hundreds of Germans."

HARRY LEWIS.

Wounded while serving with 82d division in France.

HOW TO WIN A HUSBAND.

Chicago, June 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In the issue of THE TRIBUNE of June 5 there appears a letter in which the writer, Caroline Duffield, proclaims her resentment of "those kind of boys" who neglect "the few nice girls that there are who never paint, flirt or wear their skirts to their knees." The burden of the writer's complaint rests on the charge that after a young man invites such a girl out once, he drops her thereafter.

But, are you sure, Caroline, that the reason for this conduct on the part of boys is their alleged discovery that such girls do not flirt? Granting that the specifications you give for "nice girls" are virtues, they remain as merely negative virtues, and I believe that, Mr. Floyd Brown, in the news item you mentioned, cited a number of positive qualities for ideal girls as he thinks they should be.

The fact is, Caroline, that, whether you wish it or not, sedateness and modesty are not the only requisites for gaining a young man's fancy. There are other essential points in the technique of attracting and holding his interest after the first meeting. I shall indicate a few of them:

First, never fail to laugh heartily over his jokes and attempted witticisms. Trying to be witty is man's way of crowing before the female. Second, try to do some of the entertaining yourself. Many girls think that men were made to make life interesting and entertaining for them. The reason I make this point is because to entertain and interest through the spoken word means intellectual exertion, and though men have more brains than women, yet the general distribution is not too extensive.

Third, feign an interest in the young man's personal affairs. If you are tactful you can get him to divulge all his fine schemes for securing fame and fortune. After the first meeting, what a man desires most of a woman is mental sympathy.

These few points I offer you, Caroline, from my own empirical knowledge. Practice them, and if you are physically attractive you will, before you know it, acquire the reputation of being a charming young lady. Then it will not much matter whether you dress sensibly or powder and paint with impunity.

A GENTLE CYNIC.

THE COST OF OBTAINING JOBS.

Chicago, June 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—While investigations are going on in matters pertaining to high cost of living, rent hogs, grafters, etc., why not investigate the employment agencies, who camouflage themselves as business men and who rob applicants who obtain positions through them, under the full protection of the law?

Why are jobs so very scarce? There are plenty of jobs for many of the unemployed, but many business houses still think that the employés who are sent by an employment agency are more efficient, reliable, and better fit for the position that must be filled, whereas the most important thing to have to obtain a position through an employment agency is one-half of the total commission they charge. Sixty per cent of a month's salary is quite a commission.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

A REQUIEM.

By Robert Louis Stevenson.

Under the wide and starry sky,
Dig the grave and let me lie,
Glad did I live and gladly die,
And I laid me down with a will.

This be the verse you grave for me:
Here he lies where he longed to be;
Home is the sailor, home from the sea,
And the hunter home from the hill.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

Last week's best sellers at a leading Chicago book store were:

FICTION.

"Dust" [Boni and Liveright], by Mr. and Mrs. Haldeman-Julius.
"Growth of the Soil" [Knopf], by Knut Hamsun.
"Main Street" [Harcourt, Brace & Co.], by Sinclair Lewis.
"Kingdom Around the Corner" [Cosmopolitan], by Coningsby Dawson.
"Moon Calf" [Knopf], by Floyd Dell.
"Sister Sue" [Houghton, Mifflin], by Eleanor H. Porter.

NONFICTION.

"Outline of History" [Macmillan], by H. G. Wells.
"Mystic Isles of the South Seas" [Century], by Frederick O'Brien.
"What Really Happened at Paris" [Scribners], by Col. House.

Last week's six best circulators at the public library were:
"Main Street," by Sinclair Lewis.
"Star Dust," by Fannie Hurst.
"Growth of the Soil," by Knut Hamsun.
"Outline of History," by H. G. Wells.
"Mystic Isles of the South Seas," by Frederick O'Brien.
"Steeplejack," by James Huneker.

"LOAFING DOWN LONG ISLAND," by Charles Hanson Towne, is a gentle, casual, pleasant jaunt along the lanes and the highroads of a part of our country which we have come to consider the greenhouse of America. Flowering with estates, like unto the golden hibiscus (if there is such an animal), with its lilies gilded and its roses painted by the hand of art, guided by wealth, with the sands of the sea shores blessed by the touch of golden feet, Long Island has come to mean to many the least "loafing" place in America. Such is the idea that we simple middle westerners have of Long Island, an idea directly resultant from the photographs of estates published in all of the smartest of the smart journals.

No such thing. Long Island is the charmingest place imaginable to loaf, a sort of specially designed walking spot for the gentleman tramp, Mr. Towne convinces us. For three days each week end—sometimes four—he and a companion (gentleman) tramped over lovely roads and through quaint villages, ate clam chowder, and paid a dollar a night for a room. They discovered Long Island as no motorist ever could.

Mr. Towne has made the kind of book which will be given to week end hostesses by grateful guests. Thomas Fogarty has made purty pitchers, and Mr. Towne says all the nice things imaginable about Long Island.

"God's Country," by James Oliver Curwood, is a statement of his philosophy of life, his love of nature, and his religion—which are the triune to him. "The Trail to Happiness," Mr. Curwood modestly subcaptions his little book. The world is crying for a great faith, he says, for a proof of divine power. The proof is so near that the world looks over its head. It is in the grass under open windows, in the song of the whippoorwills. If you are in need of a spiritual spring dose, Mr. Curwood has mixed sulphur and molasses that seems to have a kick in it.

Another reading of "The Invisible Censor," by Francis Hackett, before I get into Lytton Strachey's "Life of Queen Victoria"—of which more anon. In that pleasant little essay on the real censorship which clamps down most writers, Mr. Hackett says of Lytton Strachey:

"The impeccable craft of Mr. Strachey was shown in his evaluation, not his acceptance of decorum . . . that decorum which to obey is to produce falsification. He did not take his characters at their face value, while he did not do the other vulgar thing, go through their careers with a muckrake. In vivisecting them, he never let them die on him. He opened them out, but not cruelly or brutally. He did it for the best result under the circumstances, and with a form that comes of a real command of the medium—genuine 'good form.'"

The invisible censor which says that truth mustn't out because it would, under those circumstances, really be akin to murder, is the bugaboo of biography, says Mr. Hackett. Unless Lytton Strachey has changed beyond recognition, his "Queen Victoria" should be the greatest biography of the season. We shall see.

Maurice Level, who wrote those "Tales of Mystery and Horror" which came to us last year in translation, has just been made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in recognition of his literary prowess. More of Level should be translated. He is an artist in his metier.

In "At the Supreme War Council" Capt. Peter E. Wright, who was a secretary and interpreter in the supreme war council during the winter of 1917-'18, accuses the most distinguished allied leaders—Clemenceau, Petain, and Haig, among others—of "crass stupidity, underhand and treacherous conduct, and of the meanest conceivable motives," to quote the New York Evening Post. Capt. Wright certainly fires all of the Big Berthas in the political ordnance department. They make a glorious noise, but thus far in America they don't seem to have wrecked anything.

Sinclair Lewis has gone to England to spend two years. When he meets H. G. Wells he is going to have a surprise for him. All through Sinclair Lewis' literary youth H. G. Wells was his deity. He thought Wells was the greatest living writer. When his son was born he named him Wells Lewis. He has never, however, told Mr. Wells about his namesake. He wanted to be able to present Wells literary fils to Wells literary père in person. Sherwood Anderson, of Main Street, Chicago, has just gone abroad, too, but he will be back in the fall. His exhibit of paintings at the Sunwise Turn created much discussion in the New York psycho-analytical circles.

"Unless my mind is very evil," writes a friend of mine, "some of them have a Freudian significance. N—— in fact was rather shocked by two or three."

Things are so now that one's mind hasn't any privacies at all any more, what with William Bayard Hale psychoanalyzing Woodrow Wilson's literary style and the P. A.'s suspecting every geometrical figure of being a complex! In the meantime Sherwood Anderson is prouder of his paintings than he is of his literature. And he tells you with that childlike joy of his that he sold two of them last year, and made more money from them than he did from his books.

"The Sand Doctor," by Arnold Mulder, is a story of the dunes; not, of course, with any of the sheer poetry of Eunice Tietjens' "Jake," which has the dunes for its background in part, but with a feeling for their gentle power and their shifting loveliness. It is the story of a doctor so interested in science that he neglects the illnesses of his neighborhood and the spiritual sickness of his wife and her lover, who is a strange case of dual personality.

"Shackled Youth," by Edward Yeomans, is a plea for more liberal tendencies in education. Mr. Yeomans longs for what he calls "cross-fertilization," which is his expressive word for a real democracy, with its roots in better education.

Nearly 100,000 books and pamphlets have been written about the great war. Most of them have been collected by the French War museum for the use of future historians. The collection includes German as well as allied books and reviews.

"The Growth of the Soil," Knut Hamsun's masterpiece, has been made into a film in Norway. It would seem to have—to an American—the least possible movie material in it. Perhaps they have taken some of those slow exposure things that show the grain sprouting and pushing its way up through the soil.

"Golf Simplified" is a small book of golf instructions by Dave Hunter of the Essex Country club. Mr. Hunter thinks that the proper turning of wrists and forearms at the beginning of the swing is practically all there is to a good game of golf, and he explains by word and picture what he considers that proper pronating.

If you'd like to get a good picture of Georges Carpentier, made by a man who knows how to use his words, read "The Prize Fight" in Arnold Bennett's "Things that Have Interested Me." And, by the way, do you remember how George Borrow is always talking about "the bruisers of old England." Somebody ought to make an anthology of literary prize fights, including "Cashel Byron's Profession" and etc., as they say on Main street.

Padraic Colum in an article in the Literary Review of the New York Evening Post, "Memories of John M. Synge," says: "John M. Synge was like Fritz Kreisler in appearance, less couth, less vivacious, wearing rougher clothes, but still as like as a brother might be who had gone not onto the platform but into the study." Mr. Synge had a theory that words had a cycle of life, that the time came when they were too worn out for journalism even. Then they might be brought back into dramatic speech again. He had taken up many words that were at the end of their cycle. Interesting article, though nothing especially stirring.

Joseph Conrad is just back in England from a trip to Corsica, where he went for material and local color for the novel which he is writing about the Napoleonic era. It will be one of the contributions to the Napoleonic centenary. The novel occupies about six weeks during 1815 when Napoleon at Elba, in Mr. Conrad's words, "was a spiritual presence all around the Mediterranean—in Spain, Algeria, Barbary, and Italy."

"Ye Olden Blue Laws," by Gustavus Myers, is a pleasant exposition of the days that some of our fellow citizens fear are about to be reincarnated among us. They had jolly ways of punishing breakers of the law. Torquemada was a little more wholesale in his methods but no less ingenious. It would make a pretty idyll to have one of the blue lawyers turned loose in one of our plush lined cabarets.

THE OLD MAN'S MUSINGS

BY EDWARD GOLDBECK

MY body feels often like that of a vigorous man, my heart feels sometimes like that of a boy, but I am old. Yesterday I said to a young friend of mine that I could still walk for hours and that my muscles were in fine shape. It is true, but when I had said it I knew for good that I am old—an old fool who indulges in senile bragging. Death is near. Of course I shall not make any fuss about that.

A friend of mine used to say to his wife: "Lina, if I should die in the morning, take care that lunch be served punctually. You know that I hate confusion." And Ernest Renan said, "Subissons les lois de la nature!" (Let us submit to the laws of nature!) The Frenchmen like to die with an epigram on their paling lips.

I prefer this well bred attitude to the pedantic comfort of Schopenhauer, who preaches that only the individual dies, but that the species, the idea, remains alive. The individual cat dies, but the idea cat is immortal. The only kind of immortality which appeals to me is that which Charles Lamb coveted after a symposium which would have horrified our "drys."

"Sun, and sky, and breezes, and solitary walks, and summer holidays, and the greenness of fields, and the delicious juices of meats and fishes, and society, and the cheerful glass, and candle light, and fireside conversations, and innocent vanities, and jest, and irony itself—do these things go out with life? Can a ghost laugh, or shake his gaunt sides, when you are pleasant with him? And you, my midnight darlings, my folios! Must I part with the intense delight of having you (huge armfuls) in my embraces? Must knowledge come to me, if it come at all, by some awkward experiment of intuition, and no longer by the familiar process of reading? Shall I enjoy friendship here, wanting the smiling indications which point me to them here—the recognizable face—the sweet assurance of a look . . . ?"

No, I am not concerned with life after death. I did not exist before I was born, and so I can bear the idea that I will not exist after having died. But it is inevitable that an old man should ask: What has life taught me?

Very little, I must confess. Of course I am not speaking about making money and earning a reputation, being a success or a failure. I am asking myself whether I have come to know any fundamental truth about nature or mankind which I could bequeath to my family. Nothing. Nothing but Renan's serious joke: "Everything is relative, even the absolute!" (Long before Einstein!) A question mark: that is the result of an immense amount of desultory reading and a little bit of undisciplined thinking.

The Mystic Element—Antagonist of Nature.

MY relation towards nature has changed entirely since I was a boy. I still remember that I had hours when I felt completely one with nature, especially when I was lying for hours on the beach of the Baltic sea, listening to the endless melody of the waves. Now I have gained distance from nature. I look at her splendid pageantry with critical eyes, enjoying a sunset esthetically. "Bold indeed, this ashen gray in combination with the somber deep blue!" Or "Look at those Corot trees!" Or "Why, Monet never could have done this trembling haze!" But nature does not soothe me any more. I know too well that nature means cruel war, relentless struggle of life. Nature cannot give peace. The finest, subtlest joy of contemplation is to admire the beauty of a landscape in the reflecting eye, the echoing voice, the spontaneous gesture of the woman you love.

I remember a girl of 16 who always began to rave when people broke out in cries of ecstasy in face of a lake or a mountain: "Why can't you admire in silence? Confounded gush!" Often I smiled at her intolerance, as I knew that the time would come when she, too, would like this communion, or at least this duet.

No, nature is something alien to me now. It is beautiful and grandiose and idyllic, and I grant you a dozen other adjectives to picture your illusions, but there is in me the mystical element called spirit which is antagonistic to nature. We cannot get rid of this dualism. We cannot become pagans again. "Thus conscience does make cowards of us all." And the idea that soon I am going to return to nature in the most literal sense of the word cannot satisfy me.

Could I leave to my only child a truth about mankind which would be worth a million or more? The trouble is that only those truths are of real value which your own life has revealed to you. This is one reason why the progress of humanity, if there be progress, is so slow. But, on the other hand, if youth would accept the dogmas of old age reverently and submissively, there would be no progress at all.

The only truth which I have learned after the usual share of striving, suffering, despairing, hoping, dying, resurrecting, is that love is the key to the world. If you can't love, you cannot enjoy. If you can't love, you cannot understand. If you can't love, you cannot create. Enjoying and understanding is but recreating. But not everybody has the talent of love, the genius of love. To love is to be strong. Love is a surplus of strength, and the day will come when you feel so exhausted, so dry, so barren, that you cannot love anybody or anything.

"Do not dry, do not dry, tears of eternal love!" says Goethe. And his flirtatious Philine has spoken the wonderful words in which the secret of love is laid bare to those who have ears to listen and a heart to feel: "If I love you, what does it matter to you?" To love for the sake of loving: that is beautifying.

Result of a Long and Laborious Life.

YES, the capacity to love is a rare gift of the gods. It is a talent like all other talents, and it is at the bottom of all other talents. It demands a good deal of quixotism. Very little depends on the real qualities of the object. This labor of love, with its imaginative transmuting and idealizing of the beloved one, Stendahl has called "crystallization."

A log of dead wood which you find in certain grottoes where the air is permeated with certain kinds of salt covers itself with brilliant crystals and becomes a huge piece of diamond. Those who know this tendency of the human mind will always have moments when they awake from their passionate reverie, and then they will look at the disappointing reality with relentless and inexorable criticism.

Do not demand any return, do not expect any reward: love and rejoice if you can do it!

I hear the question: Is it necessary to love a man or a woman? Is not that small, selfish, narrow? Isn't it more sublime to give oneself to humanity, to love humanity? We have heard a good deal of such talk in the last years, but it could never convince me. Humanity is an abstraction which means too much or too little. You cannot love humanity. We all know how immensely difficult it is to love our family, if we understand by loving that we subordinate all our wishes to those around us, try to help them, to guide them, to rejoice with them, to suffer with them.

We know how difficult it is—although much easier—to fulfill our duties toward the community and the nation. We know that it is a tremendous undertaking to love your competitor, your creditor, your debtor, your boss, and to deal with them in the spirit of good will and kindliness. There are tasks enough for us without our trying to burden ourselves with the love of humanity. "Words, words, words!" Hamlet groaned.

It is queer that these last years have made me optimistic in my judgment of human nature. If men like MacSwiney in Ireland, Paul Claudel in France, Otto Braun in Germany, are possible, I do not see why the human soul should not be able to soar to unknown heights. The idea fills me with joy, and I am astonished at myself. What can it mean to me whether mankind is improvable and perfectible or not? I shall not see those marvelous changes. Could Schopenhauer be right after all? But no; there is a difference between his viewpoint and mine. If the species remains what it was, its existence does not interest me; if it beautifies itself, I want it to last.

Renan chose as his epitaph the words "Veritatem dilexi" (I have loved truth). I love truth, but this love, too, is unrequited, as truth is beyond our reach. We can, however, be sincere, and a man who calls himself a gentleman ought to be not only morally but intellectually honest. And I love beauty, but I do not know what it is, and nobody knows.

Is not this a paltry result of a long and—every now and then—laborious life? It certainly is. My old friend, Detlev von Liliencron, said: "Let us try to become every day a little more courageous and much more lenient!" The rest is silence.

Coal Insurance

DO you realize, Mr, Coal Buyer, that high grade coal stored at once is absolute insurance against all kinds of possible trouble in the future? With many industries temporarily closed down or working part time and many of the railroads not laying in their usual reserve stocks of coal, but buying from day to day, the mines are operating at only a bare 20% of normal.

When business revives, as confidently expected after the new crops are assured, will the railroads be able to meet the demand for cars and motive power to haul crops, coal, all the varied materials for building and road work, in addition to replenishing the depleted stocks of the merchants and manufacturers?

15% of the cars available for hauling coal are in bad order. In common with other industries, the railroads have been forced to economize and it is common knowledge that while there are plenty of cars right now, there is no surplus of engines to handle the rush of business such as may come in the near future.

Your time to buy coal is now. Better be safe than sorry.

LUMBER DUTY KEPT IN TARIFF BY COMMITTEE

Washington, D. C., June 18.—[Special.]—Opponents of a duty on lumber failed today in an attempt to eliminate from the permanent tariff bill the provision for a countervailing duty equal to the 25 per cent ad valorem Canadian rate on finished lumber.

An amended provided that the provision shall apply only to lumber which is planed on one side or more and which also is tongued and grooved. Originally there was no mention of tongued and grooved lumber, the effect being to make all finished lumber subject to whatever duty is imposed by the country from which imports are being brought in.

The amendment was made for the purpose of heading off, if possible, a fight on the floor of the house against the lumber duty.

Imposition of a tariff on lumber, pulp, and pulpwood "will prove detrimental to the trade interests of the United States," according to Donald D. Conn, representing the Northwestern Lumber Retailers and Manufacturers association.

GARRITY CHOSEN ILLINOIS HEAD OF VETS OF 1898

Dixon, Ill., June 18.—John J. Garrity, former Chicago chief of police, was this morning elected department commander of the United Spanish War Veterans of Illinois, at the annual encampment in session here, by a one vote plurality. He defeated John Wold of Chicago by one vote.

The veterans closed their session with a military parade this afternoon.

H. E. Burns of Chicago was elected senior vice commander, Philo Hoyt of Joliet junior vice commander, and Dr. S. D. Wilkins, Rockford, department surgeon. The next convention will be held at Aurora, Ill.

A Solid Train of Essex Cars for Chicago

This is how Chicago endorses the Essex. All motordom recognizes its value and sales everywhere give definite evidence of its popularity. Men now judge values as never before.

They demand qualities that last. It is from owners that they have learned these facts about Essex. You should do as they have done in your car selection, for you are entitled to the same values.

It is because owners report the lasting performance and freedom from repair cost of Essex that this solid train-load shipment is needed this week in Chicago.

The men to whom these cars will be delivered have compared Essex value with all rivals.

They have asked the same questions that occur to you. And they apply to every car. You should know them.

What will the car be like after a year's service? Will it become loose and noisy? Grow wasteful of oil and fuel? Lose efficiency? Require replacements, frequent repairs and adjustments?

Or will it remain free from these disabilities?

The qualities that count are revealed by long, hard service. So don't buy a car sight unseen. Buy from what owners tell you.

You can learn all about Essex from any Essex owner.

This Is Why—Owners Tell

These few letters are picked at random and represent wide sections of the country to indicate all kinds of motor service.

They are offered only as a suggestion of what you will hear from any owner, for they are typical expressions of admiration.

Like New After 27,000 Miles

"Have driven our Essex 27,000 miles, over all kinds of roads, and still find it practically the same as new. We find it has great economy, with small, infrequent repair bills, and remarkable performance. It gives the qualities of performance to be had only in a high-priced car."

N. B. WATTS, Ironton, Ohio.

He Asked 10 Owners

"This spring when I was looking for a car I was undecided just what to buy. I liked the appearance of the Essex—liked its ability to step by the higher priced cars—liked its manner of easy performance and comfort. "The car gave perfect demonstration, but I wanted to find out what an owner would have to say about it. I stopped ten different Essex owners and asked them how they liked their cars and what service they were getting, and how long they had been driving them, etc.

"Every owner was a booster. These cars had been driven from ten days to eleven months. They were so enthusiastic I could hardly wait until my car was delivered to see if what they said was true. My car is sure a "whiz," and I have had no trouble with it whatsoever."

J. D. HUFFMAN,
1826 Whittier Ave., Springfield, Ill.

Runs Like New

"My Essex has been driven over 15,000 miles, and runs as quietly and well as when new. About 6,000 miles of this was over rough, unpaved roads, and there is neither squeak nor rattle in the car. Original tires gave nearly 10,000 miles. I get 17 to 18 miles in city driving and 21 miles on long trips per gallon of gasoline. Use a quart of high grade oil every seven or eight hundred miles."

H. W. PARMELEE,
Box 10, Santa Barbara, Cal.

Better Now Than Ever

"Over 16,000 miles at very small upkeep cost. I got 15,000 miles on the tires it came equipped with. My business takes me through bad, rough country, but have never been stuck. The Essex runs better now than it ever did—gets better day by day. If this one ever wears out, and I doubt it, my next car will be an Essex.

INVESTORS' GUIDE OPENS ANSWER TO 100,000TH QUERY

Public Now Well Guarded from "Blue Sky."

"If a man is determind to be parted from his money he still an find opportunities without much difficulty, but he cannot help knowing that he is gambling rather than investing."

This statement is made by C. W. Emerson, head of The TRIBUNE's Investors' Guide department, who has just received and answered the 100,000th letter written to his department.

In those 100,000 letters can be found tales of romance, mystery, and wealth. A school teacher asked advice about investing in a Florida pecan grove, which she never expected to see until the promoters had made her financially independent by growing the pecans. A hospital interne was thinking of getting rich in five years by buying shares in a big ranch and seeing two pigs increas to thousands. A company with a diving apparatus to recover all the sunken treasury in the ocean attracted a clergyman. And so the stories go.

Blue Sky Law Helps.

"Gradually, by continual exposure of the true character of such promotions, the more preposterous ones have been driven out of sight," said Mr. Emerson. "The state law has a law requiring that full details of the finances of unknown promotions be made public. A few concern evade this law, but people who buy their shares do so in the face of ample warning.

"Not only have blue sky schemes been kept down by exposure and law, but they have been starved out by the growing intelligence of the average investor.

"A vast body of new investors has been added to the ranks as a result of the Liberty bond campaigns during the war. Probably no more than a tenth of the millions of people who bought Liberty bonds still are saving money and investing it, but that tenth includes a huge number who wish to invest and not speculate.

New Questions Arises.

"With all these new investors and most of the old ones now asking about an entirely different class of stocks and bonds, the average character of the questions received has changed entirely and this has raised a delicate problem. Should the department continue to divide investments into only two classes, 'safe' and 'hazardous,' or should it undertake to pass on the comparative merits of legitimate but more or less speculative business projects?

"To hold to the former plan it is necessary oftentimes to criticize unfavorably a project that has some real merit. To point out its speculative merits involves the certainty of being misunderstood by the more enthusiastic readers, thus leading them to undertake a risk that likely is out of proportion to their financial strength. The only safe course seems to be to follow the original plan and keep small investors from losing their money.

Some Victims Resent Truth.

"It is an interesting fact that most of the fault finding encountered has come, not from promoters—the sale of whose ware was hindered—but from victims who resented an opinion unfavorable to a stock which they had purchased.

"The average small investor, however, does not find fault. He is thankful for all the effort put forth to assist him and glad to use the facilities available. The smallest wage worker who seeks information about a $100 bond can find it just as readily as the man with $100000 to invest could have found it a few years ago. Not only can he get the facts from the Investors' Guide but he can get information in the bond department of any bank or broker's office.

"Now there are few publicly owned companies which do not publish complete reports at least once a year and many issue quarterly reports.

"In other ways has the path been opened for the small investor to place his money, on even terms with the 'millionaire.' Practically every new bond issue offered to the public in the last year or two could be had in $100 and $500 sizes at just the same rate as $1,000 bonds."

AMERICAN LEGION NOTES

Hyde Park post will give the first of its summer dances at the Kenwood club, 47th street and Lake Park avenue, Thursday evening, June 23.

Square post is running an excursion to St. Joe and Benton Harbor next Sunday, June 26. Several wounded soldiers from Chicago hospitals will be their guests.

The Gold Star Mothers will gather about the memorial tablet in the forest preserve at Edgebrook, the end of Milwaukee avenue, today and hold services in memory of soldiers, sailors, and marines who died during the war.

Members of the Siberian Expedition auxiliary will meet this evening at Washington boulevard and Kedzie avenue in connection with the death of the Hon. William E. Mason.

HARDING RULE IS RULE OF PEOPLE, COOLIDGE SAYS

Niles, O., June 18.—[United Press.]—There has been established in Washington a government of the people, Vice President Coolidge said here today in a speech at the dedication of the memorial to William McKinley. That, Coolidge said, summed up the work thus far accomplished by the Harding administration.

Detailing the accomplishments that he said had gone to put the government "in contact with the people and other nations," Coolidge said:

"The confidence of South American republics is being restored. The terms on which commercial relations with Russia can be entertained have been stated. The existing difference between this country and Mexico have been at last clearly defined. Invitations to meddle in Europe have been refused, but the obligation to make reparations according to stipulated agreements has been expressed in a way most effective in preserving peace."

STEAL $6,300 IN MEN'S WEAR.

Men's furnishings valued at $6,300 were stolen from the store of J. K Harris, at 3435 West Roosevelt road early yesterday.

STRIKE PICKETS NEVER PEACEFUL, COURT RULES

"There is no such thing as peaceful picketing."

This is the verdict of the Appellate court in four opinions handed down yesterday by Judge Charles M. Thomson affirming the fines and sentences imposed in 1919 by Judge Denis E. Sullivan of the Superior court against twelve striking employés of the American Cigar company. They were found guilty of contempt of court for placarding and picketing the company's plant in violation of a writ of injunction.

Can Protect New Employes.

The decision is considered as clinching the right of employing firms to protect nonunion employés hired to fill vacancies made by union members "walking out," from molestation by unionists. It reads in part as follows:

"The very fact of establishing a picket line by appellants is evidence of their intention to annoy, to embarrass, and to intimidate the employés of the appellee company, whether they resort to violence or not. The decisions of the Supreme court have abundantly established that as the law of the state.

Openly Defied Court.

"But in the case at bar the evidence shows that the appellants, in addition to picketing, bore placards in direct violation of the injunction order, openly defying the court.

"To us it seems exceedingly unfortunate that, after our Supreme court has repeatedly held that peaceful picketing, so-called, is illegal, and that there is not such a thing as peaceful picketing, a number of men and women will not only persist in their refusal to obey the orders of constituted legal authority, but will go so far as to parade the public streets bearing a placard claiming the right to do what they have not a right to do, and daring authorities to prevent a continuance of their conduct."

NEGRO HOLDUPS GET $40.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

NEW BOULEVARD TO LINK LOOP TO FAR SOUTH SIDE

Diagonal Should Bring Joy to Motorists.

BY AL CHASE.

Gray haired Chicagoans who, by pondering long and strenuously, can dimly remember when the Michigan boulevard link was first talked of may smile broadly when told the next great step to relieve congestion on Boul Mich—the extension of Grand boulevard into Grant park—is already so far under way that it is predicted by those in charge that the end of 1922 will see it finished.

But these predicting officials point to gangs of men already at work instead of to blue prints, and declare that even if slightly legal obstacles intervene, the project will be finished on time.

The main plan in the Grand boulevard extension, as is commonly known, calls for the widening of South Park avenue to 198 feet between 35th and 23d streets, and the turning of the new boulevard east across the Illinois Central tracks and then north along new made land to Grant park, just east of the Field museum.

Plan New Diagonal Boulevard.

A new angle to the main plan, however, has just been worked out, which is expected to do much toward relieving Michigan boulevard congestion south of Roosevelt road, and which will open a brand new route from Grant park to the far south side. This is the cutting of a new 120 foot thoroughfare diagonally from Grand boulevard and 23d street to Calumet avenue and 22d street. This will be built by the city. Already plans are under way to widen 22d street between Calumet and State from 66 feet to 120 feet and Indiana avenue between 22d and Roosevelt road from 66 feet to 100 feet.

This means motorists will be able to leave Michigan avenue at Roosevelt road, turn east one block, and then whirl south over Indiana to 22d, east to the new diagonal boulevard, and by it directly into Grand boulevard.

It is possible that later on Prairie avenue will be boulevarded all the way south to Garfield boulevard, which would give three boulevard entrances from the far south side to the loop.

All Set for 1,000 Foot Bridge.

Plans are practically complete for the great concrete bridge to carry Grand boulevard across the I. C. tracks at 23d street. The Condron company, engineers, have designed a structure 700 feet long, which, with the approaches, will be 1,000 feet. It will cost in the neighborhood of $700,000. It will be 120 feet wide and will span forty-three tracks. It is planned to carry two street car tracks, so that 22d street cars can swing in over the new diagonal boulevard at Calumet avenue and cross to the lake shore.

Work already is well advanced filling in the section south of the Field museum. A breakwater is being built between Roosevelt road and 24th street, behind which will be dumped 2,000,000 cubic yards of filling just contracted for at $900,000. So, no matter if the actual widening of South Park avenue is delayed somewhat, work will continue at the other end of the improvement.

May Be New Motor Row.

As the new section of Grand boulevard is expected to be lined with business blocks, it has been decided to have a 45 foot park strip down the center, with two 56½ foot driveways, as in Drexel boulevard, instead of three drives and two grass plots, as in the old section of Grand boulevard. At 24th the roadways will be merged into one 80 foot center drive, with 20 foot sidewalks, and these will gradually rise to the level of the bridge.

Plans have just been completed by C. Howard Crane and Kenneth J. Franzheim for the sixteen story Ascher office building and Washington theater to be erected at 16-30 West Washington street by Ascher Bros., who recently opened their Roosevelt theater in State street and who have a chain of movie houses throughout Chicago and adjoining cities. The Washington will have 2,800 seats and will have combination vaudeville and films. The exterior of the office building will be in Grecian and the interior of the theater will be Pompeian.

'WASHINGTON' TO BE NAME OF BIG LOOP THEATER

Building to Be on Site of Crosby Opera House.

Following the precedent set by naming their new State street theater "the Roosevelt," Ascher Brothers have decided to call their new 2,800-seat loop vaudeville and picture house "the Washington." It will be at 16-30 West Washington street and in addition to a playhouse there will be a fifteen-story office building on the front part of the property.

C. Howard Crane and Kenneth H. Franzheim have designed a playhouse with a stage 110 feet wide and twenty-eight feet deep. The auditorium will be 110 feet wide and, including the foyers, will be about 94 feet deep. There will be one large balcony.

The office building will be 110x60 and will have shops on the second, third and fourth floors. Ascher Brothers probably will have their main offices in the new building.

The site of the Washington has historic associations. On it the old Crosby Opera house once stood—Chicago's first large theater. It was there the Republican national convention was held in 1868 when Ulysses S. Grant was nominated for president and Schuyler Colfax for vice president.

The Ascher Brothers leased the 110x182½ property in June, 1920, from William A. Fuller, the Simon Reid estate and the Leiter estate, for 101 years at an average annual rental of $83,787.

True to expectations the regular ticket was chosen at the annual election of the Illinois chapter of the American Institute of Architects at the Art institute Tuesday evening. Albert Moore Saxe of Zimmerman, Saxe & Zimmerman, is the new president. F. W. Puckey of Puckey & Jenkins was elected first vice president. Edwin H. Clark of Clark & Walcott, former secretary, is now second vice president, and John Archibold Armstrong is his successor as secretary. Richard E. Schmidt of Schmidt, Garden & Martin was named treasurer of the chapter.

$2,000 COST FOR HOOVER AT THE R. E. CONVENTION

It's going to cost the Chicago Real Estate board more than $2,000 to have Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, talk before the national convention of real estate boards next month in the Auditorium. After the Chicago committee some weeks ago gracefully extended their request for his honored presence in Chicago and Mr. Hoover had got so far with his acceptance that the committee members were breathing normally again, he startled them by declaring he simply couldn't think of coming to Chicago unless they had an amplifier handy. Not being absolutely sure what an amplifier was, the committee took a chance and nonchalantly agreed. So Mr. Hoover promised.

Later they learned the sad news and last night, following long and expensive wire negotiations, President Fred E. Taylor telegraphed from Portland, Ore., that he had located the only amplifier in the country and it was on its way to Chicago in a special express car.

The amplifier is a huge electrical device hung over the speakers' platform which enables the lowest conversational voice to reach every one in a large auditorium. It requires a room full of electrical contraptions and several experts around and will cost exactly $2,000. But—you'll hear what Hoover says and maybe what the President has to say.

Automat Company Buys Cafeteria on West Side

Even the automats are succumbing to the cafeteria idea. The Horn & Hardart company, which introduced the nickel in the slot café in Philadelphia long years ago and also pioneered in Chicago, has just bought the Mid-City cafeteria, at 728 West Madison street, 41x190, just east of Halsted street, for $26,000, through Rosenberg & Lurie, together with lease for nine years at an average yearly rental of $7,900. The H. & H. company operates six loop automats and one in the Wilson avenue district. This is its first on the west side. It is understood the company plans several more in the loop and outlying districts. It is introducing cafeteria features in all of its automats.

Sheridan-Argyle Flats to Be Made Into Offices

Tenants in the eighteen flat building at the northwest corner of Sheridan road and Argyle street are moving out, and work will start as soon as possible on converting the property into a store and office building, from plans by Architect David Saul Klafter, at a reported cost of $150,000. A polychrome terra cotta front will be installed. There will be ten stores, twenty offices, and twelve flats. Rudolph Lederer is owner. Willis & Frankenstein are agents.

Realty Notes

M. E. Huhnke, with Sears, Roebuck & Co., for the last six years, is now connected with the Louis J. Castelli Realty company, 3157 North Crawford avenue.

The north side office of the George W. Stewart company at 4750 Broadway, in the Riviera theater building, has been taken over by M. Hoffman & Co., who also have an office at 2240 East 75th street.

Building Permits

Eleven permits were issued, the following being for $10,000 or more:

Sheridan-rd., 5000 to 5008; 1 story brick stores; R. Lederer, owner; D. S. Klafter, arch.; H. Sjoblom, mason. C. Anderson, carp. $50.000

Leland-av., 1120-22-24; 1 story brick stores; H. D. Rubloff, owner; Alfred S. Alschuler, arch.; H. E. Johnson & Co., mason and carp 25.000

BEGIN WORK OF HYDE PARK FLATS.

Dr. George W. Mosher has begun work on a three flat building at 1216-18 Madison park, to cost $70.000, designed by Architect Orlando Van Gunten. It will be 46x96 and will be in the Italian renaissance style.

APRON MAKERS BUY FACTORY.

The two story brick manufacturing building at the southeast corner of Wentworth and 46th, 65x125, has been sold by Joseph F. Rhodes of Pasadena, Cal., to Sopkin Bros., makers of aprons, through H. G. Howard & Co., for a reported $20,000.

PASS IMPORTANT REALTY LAWS AT STATE CAPITAL

BY JAMES K. BRITTAIN.
[President Real Estate Association of the State of Illinois.]

Two new laws have been passed at Springfield during the week which are extremely important, both to realtors and the public at large. The substitue zoning bill drawn under the auspices of the Real Estate Association of the State of Illinois, in coöperation with the governor's housing and zoning commission, was introduced in the house by Representative Carl Mueller.

JOSEPH K. BRITTAIN.
[Wallinger Photo.]

This bill has been commented on by such eminent authorities as Edward M. Bassett of New York City, as the best in enabling zoning legislation which has been proposed in the country. It gives to Chicago, in my opinion, a fine opportunity to create a comprehensive zoning plan, and is of the utmost importance to the city.

Many Illinois cities already are working on comprehensive zoning plans, and it is of the utmost importance that Chicago immediately undertake the development of a comprehensive zoning plan, and that such a plan be put into operation at the earliest possible date, before the extensive building operations throughout the city get under way.

Senate bill No. 322, introduced by Senator Dailey of Peoria, is an act in relation to the definition, registration, and regulation of real estate brokers and salesmen. It will go into effect Jan. 1, 1922.

Briefly, it makes it unlawful to engage in the real estate business without a certificate of registration issued by the state department of registration and education. Proof of honesty must be given by the applicant. The registration fee will be $10 and a renewal fee of $5. Certificates may be revoked if any fraud or misrepresentation is practiced, either personally, through salesmen, or in advertising. The new law does not affect the power of cities and villages to tax, license, and regulate real estate brokers.

CLEVELAND REALTOR WRITES BOOK ON LONG TERM LAND LEASES

STANLEY L. McMICHAEL.

The first of a series of books on real estate, planned by the National Association of Real Estate Boards and written at the request of its publication council, has just been published. It is "Long Term Land Leaseholds," by Stanley L. McMichael, realtor, former secretary of the Cleveland Real Estate board. Mr. McMichael is publishing his own book from his offices in the Realty building, Cleveland, O. Its price is $3.

A list of chapters gives about the quickest idea of the scope of Mr. McMichael's work. They are: "Definition and Origin," "Maryland's Redeemable Ground Rents," "Unusual Long Term Leases," "Advantages to the Owner or Lessor," "Advantages to the Tenant or Lessee," "Security to Lessor and Lessee," "Types of Long Term Leases," "Loaning on Leaseholds," "Essential Features of a Lease," "Contents of a Lease," "Taxes, Building Clause, and Bonds," "Insurance, Trustee, Strikes, Assignments, Payment of Taxes by Lessor," "Use of Leased Premises," "Where Leased Land Is Appropriated," "Termination Provisions," "Effect of Federal and State Income Tax Laws," "Commissions on Leaseholds," "Agreement to Make a Lease," "Appraising Long Term Leaseholds," "Who Shall Write the Lease?" "Suggestions to Brokers," "Legal Aspects of a Long Term Lease."

In addition there is an addenda containing five complete ninety-nine year lease forms, worth of money and valuation tables and various documents. The book has several illustrations of buildings on leased land. Mr. McMichael spent twelve years preparing his book, which is said to be the first ever written on this subject.

"The author is not only a realtor of experience but a student and writer of distinction," says Irving E. Macomber of Toledo, O., chairman of the publication council of the National Association of Real Estate Boards. "His work is basic in scope, rich in accurate detail, interesting in narrative, and is recognized by the national association as an important contribution to the growing literature of a new profession."

The one story building, containing three stores, at 4653-55½ Broadway, 50x72 on the south and 83 on the north, has been sold by Simon Lorch to Benjamin P. Ruekberg, attorney, for an indicated $100,000 through Greenlee & Co.

Bachelors, Attention!

"Bachelor realtors of marriageable age are requested to send in their names to Miss Marian L. Ringer at the Chicago Real Estate board rooms." This simple announcement in a recent number of J. Soule Warterfield's lively special news bulletin of the coming realtor convention, called "Chicago Realtor," has brought so many anxious inquiries that the following explanation is given by Reinecke, chairman of the board:

MISS MARIAN L. RINGER.
[Lasswell Photo.]

"Young unmarried women are always bored to death after the daily routine is over at conventions. They'd like to fox trot or go to a theater in the evening. So we've decided the best way to care for our young visitors will be to have a committee of bachelors entertain them. Miss Marian Ringer, chairman of the young women's committee, is in charge of corraling these young realtors."

Judging from the inquiries there'll be much toddling and shew going July 12, 13, 14, and 15.

We forgot to mention that the initiation fees will be turned over to the big fund being raised by the Chicago Real Estate board to entertain visiting realtors at the national realty convention next month.

I WILL

WHEAT HITS HIGH POINT; SHOWERS PUT IT ON SKIDS

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Grain traders were mostly set for a good advance, but cooler weather with showers in the northwest and southwest and predictions of more normal temperatures with showers over the greater part of the country for the coming week started a selling movement. Under this selling movement, the general week-end evening up and extremely heavy pressure from longs, prices declined and closed well toward the low point, with wheat off 3c for July and 1c for September, corn 1⅞@2c, oats ⅝@¾c, and rye 2@2¼c lower for the day.

Weather and crop news are the main interesting factors and are expected to continue for some time. Although wheat prices were up at the highest of the season, the finish was at a loss of 10c for July and ¾c for September, with corn ⅝c lower for July and ¼c higher, oats unchanged to ¼c lower, rye 4½@10¾c, with July leading, and barley 2½c lower. Provisions had a better tone and gained 5@10c on lard and 22½@35c on ribs.

Wheat at Highest Point.

Wheat prices reached their highest point soon after the opening, with fair buying on less favorable crop reports from Le Count, who said rains were needed and the bumper crop prospects have been lost in South Dakota with wheat starting to head short, although the crop is not far enough advanced for black rust development. His comments on oats indicate slight damage by drouth with heads short.

An advance of 2¼c over Friday's close to $1.38¾ for July and 2c up for September to $1.26⅝ brought on a general selling movement, which was helped by the weakness in stocks on Wall street and brought out a lot of July and September from weak holders, carrying the price down 7c for July and 3¾c for September, with the close at 1c above the low point for July and ½@¾c over for September.

Selling September and buying July in large volume by a cash house was a feature and narrowed the spread to 4¾c, the smallest so far this week. Nothing was heard about export business. Cash premiums here were firm to 1c better, as compared with July.

The trade is looking for the movement to continue the largest at this time in recent years and is expecting a good export demand. At the same time, Baltimore offered to resell wheat. The buying of futures on the break, however, was by cash interests and houses with eastern connections.

Big Business in Corn.

A big business was on in corn, with the buyers of Friday the principal sellers. An immense holding, attributed to an eastern trader, and selling by leading cash interests enabled the short sellers of the previous day to get in, and they bought round lots as prices declined. July broke 3⅝c to 62¾c, with 1c rally at the last, while September sold off nearly 2c and closed 1c above the low point at 64¼@64⅝c. Crop news was generally favorable, although rain will be beneficial.

Heavy sales of July and September oats by cash and commission houses combined with the break in wheat and corn, offset the effect of unfavorable crop news. After a decline of 1c to 1¾c with September leading, the largest cash interest became a heavy buyer. There was active spreading between July and September, the difference being 1½c to 1¾c, with the close 38¾c for July.

Seaboard houses were good sellers of July rye, breaking it 3¾c, after a bulge of 1¾c. September broke 3c and all closed at almost the bottom. Cash rye was 3c over July.

Provisions Trade Small.

Business in provisions was small. The Armour house takes a more encouraging view of the situation, their weekly market letter predicting an improvement in the domestic and export trade. Shipments of lard and meats for the week were 26,689,000 lbs, against 18,035,000 lbs last year. The run of hogs was the largest in three months. Packing here since March 1 aggregates 1,824,000 hogs, or 58,000 more than last year. At the close lard was unchanged to 2½c higher and short ribs 5c higher. Prices follow:

CASH GRAIN NEWS

While some export business was reported as having been put through in wheat at the seaboard as the result of the break, details were not given. Exporters bought 100,000 bu corn at Chicago.

Domestic shipping sales at Chicago were 12,000 bu wheat, 46,000 bu corn, and 180,000 bu oats. Sales of 500,000 bu corn were made to go to store at 63¾c, and charters made for 500,000 bu to load in about two weeks.

Premiums on hard winter wheat at Chicago were ½@1c higher, while red winter was unchanged to ½c higher. No. 1 hard brought 10@16½c over; No. 2 hard, 14c; and No. 2 red, 10@11½c over July. Receipts, 54 cars.

A slow demand prevailed in outside markets and prices at St. Louis were 1@2c lower and Omaha 1@5c lower. At Kansas City hard winters were unchanged to 5c lower and red 1@2c lower. Premiums at Minneapolis were unchanged early, but 2@5c lower later, with a limited demand.

Offerings of cash corn were not large and sales after opening unchanged declined 2c and closed around the bottom, with No. 2 yellow and white ½c under July and No. 2 mixed 1c under. Receipts, 248 cars. Outside markets were generally ½@1¼c lower, except Kansas City, which was 1@2c higher. Cash oats were ¾@1c lower, with receipts 60 cars. No. 2 white sold at July price to ¼c under.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

The grain markets are regarded as two sided at present with the weather and crop news leading factors. It is said that the large holding of wheat and corn for eastern and Wall Street account are nearly through liquidating, the selling being due to the unfavorable situation in Wall Street. Failure to settle the British coal miners' strike tends to unnerve holders of securities and grains and all bulges run into selling orders. For the present traders are looking for nervous sharply fluctuating markets with wheat showing changes of 5@10c in periods of three to four days.

Cash corn was ½@¾c under the July for No. 2 white and No. 2 yellow yesterday. It is deliverable at ½c over. Buyers were not particularly anxious for it even at the discounts, which is ½c lower than heretofore. The selling of 500,000 bu contract corn to go to store created the impression that there will be good deliveries on July contract and there is more money in delivering the corn on July trades than in selling it for eastern shipment or for export.

A cargo of wheat was sold yesterday for export and bids at the gulf were unchanged for June loadings, 2c lower for first half of July, and 1c lower for the more deferred loadings. Country offerings of new wheat Saturday were not large, which is rather surprising when the nearness of the movement of the new grain is so close.

Reports from central Illinois said cutting of wheat will be about over in a week, should good weather prevail.

Minneapolis July wheat, which recently was 2c under Chicago, has advanced to 8c over. This is natural, as Minneapolis is a spring wheat market and was not influenced to any extent by the winter wheat harvest, while Chicago is largely a winter wheat market.

Julius H. Barnes and all the former vice presidents of the United States Grain corporation established such friendly relations during their three years of active association and coöperation in handling the United States wheat crop that they have formed an association to perpetuate the good feeling. The majority of the former officers were together in New York on Wednesday and Thursday the last week and formed an association with Julius H. Barnes president and W. E. Moore secretary. Mr. Barnes presented each member with a souvenir in the shape of a watch charm inscribed with the individual's name.

Memberships of the Milwaukee grain exchange to be $100 bid and $150 asked.

Broomhall's cable says Poland promises to harvest 90 per cent of the country's requirements, so that 10 per cent is all that will have to be imported.

Herbert J. Blum, who has been active on the long side of wheat and corn of late, left yesterday for his summering at Woods Hole, Mass.

PRODUCE MARKETS

The fruit trade Saturday was fairly active in peaches, berries, and lemons, the market for the latter being firmer, with supplies liberal. Melons were taken more freely, with watermelons $600 to $900 per car and cantaloupes $2.50 to $3.75 per crate.

New potatoes were 10c higher at $2.00 to $2.50 for Alabama stock in car lots per 100 lbs, with Louisiana white stocks $1.75 to $2.00. Receipts were 21 cars. Old potatoes were shaded to make sales, with receipts 14 cars and trading at 50c to 60c per 100 lbs in car lots on track.

Butter prices were 1c higher for standards, with offerings reduced. Receipts for the week of 95,363 tubs compared with 74,365 tubs last year.

Egg supplies were ample, with prices unchanged and trade good at 23½@24c for fresh northern firsts. Receipts for the week were 121,615 cases, against 163,066 cases last year. Live poultry prices were unchanged, with fair supply, hens bringing 25c, broilers 32@40c, roosters 15c per lb.

Investors Need Patience.

The investor needs a liberal supply of patience. Experienced investors know this, but people who did not begin investing till they bought Liberty bonds have much to learn. Some of them are in danger of losing their grip and becoming little speculators. Disappointed by the decline of Liberty bonds and their persistency in staying close to the bottom price, these people have sold out and invested the proceeds in bonds which yield a higher return but are not so safe.

Recently higher yield bonds in general have declined below the issue price, and the new investors holding them are listening to talk about buying the shares of companies whose business has got "down to bed rock." The total of their bonds being only a modest amount, they propose not to reinvest their principal in stocks but to use it as a margin for carrying shares which are practically certain to sell much higher in the future.

This sounds attractive, but several possibilities are overlooked. First, interest rates are exceedingly high and a speculative account will eat up its own margin at a rapid rate. Then there are no stocks on "bed rock" except dead ones. Any stock that has fair probabilities of advancing may decline first. A little decline combined with a long period of dullness may mean total loss.

The problem suggests its own solution. Interest rates are so high that they make an old investor dizzy. If all the investors will keep an investing and collect the interest that other people are willing to pay they will make most of the real profits, and their investments will advance if they wait long enough.

Brief Answers.

E. G., Burlington, Ia.—The 7 per cent notes of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit company are secured by collateral whose worth is uncertain. They are a speculation. The stock exchange estimates their present value at about 46.

R. D. D.—If you buy fake oil stock you can recover if the man who sold you the stock is financially responsible and you can find him.

T. J. C.—Sugar stocks have declined because the price of sugar has declined.

NEWS OF THE CROPS

A message from Hutchinson, Kas., said new wheat is starting there at $1.25 net to the farmer. As little thrashing has been done, offerings are light. Harvesting is progressing rapidly, and some sections are practically through.

R. O. Cromwell, who is out for E. W. Wagner & Co., estimates the Kansas wheat crop at around 115,000,000 bu. Corn from Wichita, Kas., to Sioux City, Ia., is excellent, with Nebraska looking especially good. Oats over the same territory he estimates at 65 per cent of a crop.

"Wheat has lost its bumper prospect in this territory," wired George M. Le Count to Stein, Alstrin & Co. from Bradley, S. D. "Recent rains only partially relieved the situation, and more moisture must come soon. Wheat starting to head short. Crop not far enough advanced as yet for black rust development. Oats slightly damaged by drought and some heading very short."

The monsoon in India is reported as fairly normal. On the strength of the monsoonal rains depends the outcome of the Indian crops. European crop conditions continue favorable, with Roumania and Bulgaria claiming excellent conditions. The United Kingdom is still dry. Beneficial rains are reported in Australia, while in Argentine extremely dry weather prevails in the north, which has been damaged.

F. F. Thomson wired J. E. Bennett & Co. from Mitchell, S. D.: "From Tyndall west and north to Armour, S. D., corn stands excellent, but lacks proper cultivation. Armour north to Plankington corn fine and clean. Oats acreage large and stand heavy. Late oats beginning to head. Unless something happens it looks like bumper crops for this territory. Condition of spring wheat spotted. Many fields affected by smut. Red rust in evidence, but no black rust. Rye and barley condition excellent on large acreage.

Rogers Park Apartments Building

Sheridan Road and Pratt Boulevard

$950,000—7%

FIRST MORTGAGE REAL ESTATE BONDS

The Building

It is 9 stories high, of reinforced concrete construction, faced with pressed brick. Contains 168 apartments. Five stores on Sheridan Road, two on Pratt Boulevard, also restaurant, lobby and lounging rooms. The construction in every respect is entirely modern.

The Location

is at the junction of two boulevards—on the northeast corner of Sheridan Road and Pratt Boulevard, the most desirable corner in Rogers Park. One block from the lake, in a lively and refined neighborhood, the location could not be improved upon for this high grade building.

Transportation

The Rogers Park Apartments are served by four separate means of rapid transportation. (1) The N. W. L. (2) The Chicago and Northwestern Railroad. (3) The Sheridan Road Motor Busses. (4) The Broadway surface cars. All within a short walking distance. Very few locations can boast of better facilities.

Earnings

We estimate the earnings as follows: Total annual rent from stores and apartments, $290,340. Total expenses including taxes, management, $100,960, leaving a net income of $189,000. Greatest annual interest at any time is only $66,500. Leaving a surplus of $118,500 for the reduction of the loan. The net income is almost three times the greatest interest charges.

For Protection

Borrowers agree to deposit monthly one-twelfth the principal and interest due each year. No dividend above 7% is to be paid in any one year without first retiring $26,250 of last maturity Bonds at 105. A semi-annual statement by certified accountant must be given to us.

General Information

The building is under the management of Mr. Fred Kihm, previously with the Harvey Hotel system, and former manager of the North Shore and Evanston Hotels. Normal Federal Income Tax up to 4% is paid for by the borrowers. Chicago Title & Trust Co., Trustee. Principal and interest payable at the office of Lackner, Butz & Company.

Your Money Should Earn 7%

GET IT!

The Coming July Investment Period Offers an Exceptional —Perhaps the Last—Opportunity to Secure This Attractive Interest Rate With Maximum Safety

FOR almost a year it has been possible to obtain the exceptionally attractive interest rate of 7% on the best class of first mortgage investments. Instead of 6%, which was formerly the maximum safe rate, 7% is now entirely safe, due to general conditions which have increased the price of money.

This condition will continue during the coming July investment period—but whether it will last much longer is a question. Conditions have begun to change, and although no one can predict accurately, it is fairly certain in the near future interest rates will be lowered and MADISON & KEDZIE BONDS will be back to a 6% basis.

A Rare Opportunity

There is no reason why your money cannot earn 7%—it is coming to you and you should get it. An opportunity such as this may never again present itself, and you should take advantage of it while it lasts.

But—

—while you should be quick to avail yourself of this opportunity, do not overlook that the character of house offering the investment is of greatest importance. Safety above all should be your paramount consideration.

LARGE SELECTION OF 7% BONDS

We are now offering a wide selection of MADISON & KEDZIE BONDS paying 7% interest. These are the same investments in which funds of this Bank are also placed, and afford the highest degree of safety you can obtain. See us now about your July investments. Reservations can be made now for payment and delivery in July without extra charge.

Your Best Assurance of Safety

When you buy a MADISON & KEDZIE BOND you know your money will be safe because you are dealing with a bank—an institution with a reputation to maintain, whose affairs are under State and Federal supervision. We have had years of experience and have underwritten and sold many millions of dollars of first mortgage investments. You can, therefore, rely implicitly on our recommendation that your money will earn 7% WITH SAFETY.

For this July investment period, DO NOT BE SATISFIED WITH LESS THAN 7%. And to be sure you are safe, buy MADISON & KEDZIE BONDS!

1921 IS REWARDING FIGHTERS

ATTACK SHIFTS TO RAIL STOCKS; DECLINES SHARP

YESTERDAY'S AVERAGES

	High.	Low.	Close.	Net chge.
25 railroads	51.54	50.23	50.37	— .41
25 industrials	72.94	71.60	71.87	— .67

The New York Times.

New York, June 18.—[Special.]—It has been a matter of frequent comment during the last two weeks that while the industrials were suffering sharp price recessions, the rails presented a firm front in stock market transactions. But today this strength was supplanted by decided weakness as speculators for the decline turned their attention against the stocks of the carriers, causing a break of from 1 to 5 points.

The extreme recession in this group developed in the case of Canadian Pacific, which dropped to 105, the lowest price that has been recorded in twenty years. St. Louis, Southwestern and Chesapeake and Ohio declined 4 and 3¾, respectively, while Chicago Great Western preferred and St. Paul preferred lost more than 2 points each.

Weakness Surprises Market.

The vulnerability of the rails was not particularly surprising, in view of the tangled situation which surrounds them. But it was a bit disconcerting to find prices in several instances giving way so readily with no new developments of a character to account for unsettlement of such proportions, as came to light in the short session.

That stability of the rails, which was supposed to have been derived from the declaration of the regular dividend by the Northern Pacific railroad a few days ago, was of short duration. The attack on the rails was doubtless brought about in part by the failure of the Chesapeake and Ohio directors at their meeting on Friday to take action on the dividend which was deferred a month ago.

Clearing Banks' Loans Rise.

The weekly statement of the associated banks showed an increase of $115,811,000 in loan account, this comparing with a decrease in loans of $61,258,000 in the preceding week. The advance in loans now is undoubtedly in anticipation of the July 1 requirements as to dividends, interest, and the like. In surplus there was a decrease of $1,479,630, the excess reserve now standing at $46,806,790. Net demand deposits increased $2,727,000, but time deposits declined $3,985,000. Government deposits expanded $231,764,000, due to the week's financial operations. The figures follow:

Foreign Exchange Is Firmer.

Foreign exchange prices were inclined toward higher levels, but the market was without any outstanding factors. The upward movement of sterling after a hesitancy on the news of the British coal strike referendum is probably in part a reflection of the cutting down of dollar purchases in London in connection with the reparations payments. At the high of 3.73¾ today sterling was nearly a full cent above the previous close.

MAY LIST CALIFORNIA STANDARD.

The New York Stock Exchange has received an application from the Standard Oil Company of California to list its common stock.

NET INCOME OF K. C. SOUTHERN SHOWS INCREASE

New York, June 18.—[Special.]—The net operating income of the Kansas City Southern Railway company for May is $387,379, an increase of $112,642 over last May, when there was improvement in traffic following the depression of the early months and the adverse results caused by the "outlaws" strike in April, 1920. The Kansas City Southern is generally the first railroad to make public its figures for each new month, and its report is considered indicative of what other roads may be capable of.

Other figures which make this report particularly interesting are those which show the net operating income for the first five months of this year to be $714,480 over the same period in 1920. The net operating income this year for the period mentioned stands at $2,054,958, as compared with $2,769,438 last year.

These figures show a surplus equal to about 4½ per cent annually on the $30,000,000 common stock. After the regular 4 per cent on the $21,000,000 preferred, the report shows 5¼ per cent annually for the common after the preferred.

The following table shows some of the more important figures of the report:

May gross	$1,827,980
Increase over 1920	109,758
Net after tax	387,379
Increase over 1920	112,643
Net after tax for first 5 months	2,054,958
Increase over 1920	714,480

The five months' gross revenues stand at $9,275,519, an increase of $1,048,627 over the same period last year.

FINANCIAL NOTES

This week will be the last of the New York Curb Market association's trading in the open air in Broad street. On June 27 the business will be transferred to the association's new building in Trinity place. The curb market then will have its own ticker service, giving all quotations, similar to that now furnished by the stock exchanges.

There were 329 commercial failures in the United States last week, according to figures compiled by R. G. Dun, compared with 300 in the preceding week, an increase of twenty-nine, and 152 failures for the corresponding period a year ago.

Extension of a government loan of $500,000 to western banking interests to finance the exportations of American provisions to Great Britain, Germany, France and Holland has been announced by the war finance corporation.

The Studebaker corporation last week paid off the last of its bank borrowings, says a New York wire to Paine, Webber & Co. On Jan. 1 last the company owed the banks $8,500,000. Studebaker's cash account today is approximately $2,500,000 larger than at the start of the year.

New U. S. Treasury Issues Heavily Oversubscribed

Total subscriptions to the treasury's combined offering of $500,000,000 of three year notes and one year certificates amounted to $788,007,000, on which the total allotment was $625,375,600, Secretary Mellon announced yesterday. The allotments were divided into $311,191,600 of notes and $314,180,000 of certificates.

In the Chicago federal reserve district subscriptions, amounted to $54,424,700, and the whole amount was allotted, $20,650,200 being three year bills and $33,774,000 the one year certificates. New York district subscriptions totaled $394,353,000, on which allotments of $294,380,700 were made. Cleveland district subscriptions were second largest at $83,012,200, the allotments being $60,400,200.

CHICAGO·STOCK·TRANSACTIONS

TRADING in Chicago stocks yesterday was the dullest for a week-end session in many months. If there could be said to be any price trend it again was downward. The largest turnover was 660 shares of Libby-McNeill, which declined a minor fraction. Booth Fisheries preferred and Armour preferred declined 2 and ¼ point, respectively. Cudahy was up 2½ points. In New York, Sears-Roebuck declined 1⅝, while Chicago Pneumatic Tool was up 4 points.

How much should you pay for a fine car these days

The old standards of value are not reliable measures today. The old relations between various cars no longer hold. This is a time to investigate the position of the maker whose car you want to buy. Learn his condition, his plans.

If there are any makers who are forging ahead, they are assuredly those whose product and whose values are in tune with the times. There could not be a stronger evidence of desirability in a motor car than to have the public preferring it in increased numbers—especially today.

If there are any makers whose models are modern enough to stand for a year or two, whose plans are definite enough to be dependable, those makers should today be enjoying a good business.

Paige Jumps From 15th to 6th Place in Volume of Business

Consider the Paige. On January 1st, 1921, the Paige occupied 15th place in the industry in volume of business. At the close of the first quarter Paige had jumped to 6th place—passing 9 competitors and outstripping every maker in the fine car field.

How is it that Paige is thus improving its position? What is there about Paige cars that makes comparatively more people want them than ever before? Things like this do not just "happen." There must be a reason.

We think it is the astonishing new-efficiency performance which was built into the Paige models, new last fall. We think, too, that it is public appreciation of the Paige position today—the position of having introduced the leading efficiency cars so recently that buyers need not fear depreciation from changes in design. But, whatever it is, it is a sound suggestion to the careful car buyer of today.

Paige 66—with Unequaled Performance—at Least $1,000 Under-Priced

It takes more than steel, aluminum, wood, leather and workmanship to make a fine car. With them one maker will produce, let us say, a good, dependable automobile. But another maker, with the same materials, will produce not only a dependable automobile but an extremely delightful, active, powerful automobile.

Judged by these things that make desirable cars, the Paige 66 is easily worth $1000 more than an equally well built car. Judged by what other makers ask for lesser performance, the Paige 66 is at least $1000 underpriced. Because no other car at any price can match Paige performance—in speed, acceleration and hill-climbing, fast or slow.

102.8 miles per hour at Daytona Beach on January 21st is one Paige record. New world's records for 5, 10, 20, 25, 50, 75 and 100 miles were made by the Paige at Uniontown, Pa., Speedway May 19th. A car that can do these things at around $3000 marks a new era in automobile value. It makes higher priced cars a questionable investment.

Paige 66—the Leading Fine Car—Out-Sells All Above $2,200

In these keen competition days it is an engineering achievement to produce a car which out-performs and out-sells all others in its price class. But even as low as $2000 there is no car enjoying the Paige 66 demand today. And no car, at any price, equals its performance. It is astonishing.

Here is a car which you ought to know about if you expect to invest $3000 or more in motoring satisfaction. Especially if you are considering any higher priced car, look at and drive the Paige 66 before you buy. Test it out against any car you think is better.

Style and beauty you take for granted in the Paige. But the comfort of this Paige 66 on the road will be a new experience for you. Its economical, smooth, easily controlled power is far ahead of anything you have imagined possible. And its price—made possible by currently purchased material—gives you a pleasant surprise. Such superior performance for so little money was never before obtainable.

It answers, without further argument, your question of how much to pay for a fine car these days—$3000 is all you need to pay, because even twice the price will not buy a dollar's worth more comfort or performance. Buy a Paige Six-66.

A TWELVE-INCH SALVO AT CLOSE RANGE—This remarkable photograph was taken during the recent maneuvers of the Atlantic fleet on the occasion of its inspection by Secretary Denby. The salvo was fired simultaneously by the Utah, Delaware, Florida, and North Dakota, and all registered hits, showing ten complete "straddles," each of which would have sunk a battleship. The picture was taken from the Nevada, which towed the target. Secretary Denby viewed the proceedings from under one of the big guns in the foreground.

Holland Furnaces Make Warm Friends

A Service That Has Created Good Will in Over 150,000 Homes

Twelve years ago the Holland Furnace Company started selling furnaces in a new way.

They based their policy on a principle that every buyer of furnaces should understand.

And that is that no heating plant, no matter how cleverly it is designed or honestly constructed, will give you the service you have the right to expect, unless it is properly installed.

Our experience proved that you cannot guarantee complete heating service through installation by hardware stores, tinsmith shops or dealers who make a side line of the heating business.

Therefore, from that day to this Holland Furnaces have been sold and installed only by factory branches.

Every Holland Furnace is planned and correctly installed by a factory branch expert according to the location, size and exposure of your rooms. And no Holland job is considered finished until it is working to the complete satisfaction of the customer. Finally, we give you a five-year guarantee which includes all replacements free of labor or material charge and any advisory service that you may need to get the best results out of the Holland Ventilating and Heating Plant.

That is why you never hear anything but friendly words about the Holland system from its users. That is why our business has grown in twelve years to over 200 branches and 150,000 users in the north central states.

If you are planning a new home or a change in your heating plant do not leave it to others to carelessly specify your equipment. You are the one that pays the coal bills—you are the one that suffers or enjoys the results.

There is probably a Holland branch in your neighborhood. A talk with the Holland man will save you money now and trouble and expense later.

Let him show you why the Holland will burn less fuel—heat your home more uniformly and prevent repairs through our guaranteed personal service.

And, if you prefer it, our time payment plan helps you pay for your furnace while it is actually saving you money and providing better health and comfort in your home.

"GOING DOWN"—AND DOWN THEY WENT—Fred Lundin, the "boss," and William Hale Thompson. The mayor posed for this study in facial expression after he had got the news that the city hall judicial ticket had been swamped in the tidal wave of votes June 6. "Big Bill" has just pressed the elevator button and has shouted "Going Down"—a prophetic truth clothed in a colloquialism—while just around the corner the "Yes, Yes, Bill" boys are busy with their alibis and the election returns have tied a bow of crepe on the saxophone in the jazz band which was all set for the "Hallelujah Chorus" in ragtime. Not even the mayor's "lucky" cowpuncher's lid saved him this time. Lundin, the power behind the throne, who loves to call himself "the poor Swede," was snapped on the street. He still has the amber goggles and the black velvet "weskit" with the jet buttons, which he boasts has been in his possession forty years or so, but to judge from his expression he seems to have bitten into a lemon.

The strange discovery of Sir James Dewar and its remarkable new development

The last step in perfecting the invention of a famous Scottish scientist—an all-steel vacuum bottle that will not break

FORTY-EIGHT years ago a famous Scottish scientist, Sir James Dewar, made a curious discovery. He found that by "blowing" one glass bottle within another and then creating a vacuum between them, he could keep liquids in the inner bottle hot or cold for hours at a time.

After many experiments he produced a bottle of remarkable efficiency, but it was so delicate that it had no practical value except for laboratory use. It was kept suspended by the neck to avoid breaking.

From that day to our own, attempts have been made to construct an unbreakable vacuum bottle. It was not until 1915 that the problem was finally solved by William Stanley, an American inventor. He discovered a process by which a vacuum bottle could be made entirely of steel—a bottle that will not break.

To-day the all-steel Stanley Vacuum Bottle is bringing new comfort to hundreds of thousands of people. No fall or blow can break it! It is lined with blue Amalite, a mineral substance that will not rust or tarnish. With the Stanley the expense and inconvenience of "refills" are eliminated. The first cost is the last cost.

Made in pint, quart, two-quart and carafe models. Lunch kit equipped with pint bottle. Look for the name Stanley on the bottle. If your dealer does not carry the Stanley send us his name and address. Stanley Insulating Company, 200 Fifth Ave., New York. Factory: Great Barrington, Mass.

JUST LIKE ANY MARRIED MAN — by Lucian Cary

Being the Sprightly Adventure of a Suburban Siren and a Citizen Without a Vice SPARBOROUGH is one of those immensely respectable suburbs of Westchester, between the Bronx and White Plains. It is literally a town without a slum. Hurlbut was one of the immensely respectable citizens of Sparborough. He was literally a man without a vice.

Hurlbut was in charge of the credit department of a great wholesale house, and what is more reputable than a credit man? Being a credit man is like being something in a bank. Hurlbut was so correct that he reflected a kind of righteousness on the credit man's job instead of the job's reflecting it on him. He was so correct that nobody called him Bill, although his first name was William. He was often pointed out as a model to other husbands.

The Hurlbuts had lived in Sparborough for five years. William was chairman of the greens committee of the Sparborough Country club and Margaret was president of the Sparborough Improvement association. They had twins, a white house in the Colonial manner, and a Rankin sedan. There is something as inherently respectable in twins as there is in a Rankin sedan, and everybody knows what the Rankin sedan is—so well-made, so economical, and not in the least sporting.

Margaret Hurlbut was a Bryn Mawr girl. All Bryn Mawr girls are nice, but Margaret was extremely nice. She was extremely patient also. She did not believe in corporal punishment, and she had brought up her twin boys to the age of five without ever once spanking either of them.

Now there is probably no reason in the nature of things why William Hurlbut should not have gone on exemplifying all the virtues to the very end of a long and useful life. But the fact is he didn't.

On the last Saturday in April William Hurlbut took his friend, Arthur Tompson, to Sparborough for the week end. Arthur was a bachelor who expected soon to be married, and he was earnestly considering the purchase of a house in the suburbs. William had volunteered, after the fashion of suburbanites, to show him Sparborough.

After lunch at the Hurlbuts'—one should, of course, say luncheon in speaking of the Hurlbuts—they visited the Sparborough Country club. They were standing on the veranda of the club house, from which one has almost a birdseye view of the course, when Maisie Blaze drove up in the yellow speedster she affected. Maisie parked the car and nodded to William as she walked into the club.

"Who's that?" Arthur asked.

Men who didn't know Maisie Blaze invariably asked "Who's that?" when she went by. Maisie was slim, dark, and full of the elan vital.

"That's Mrs. Blaisdell—otherwise Maisie Blaze," William said.

"Yes?" said Arthur, raising his eyebrows after the fashion of a man who wants more information and doesn't want to ask for it in so many words.

"She's the local siren," William explained. He did not mean to be insinuating; his tone quite unconsciously expressed his disapproval of Maisie Blaze. She was rather the leader of the younger set in the town and in the club. This set irritated William, though it would have puzzled him to say precisely why. If pressed he would have said that they were irresponsible, or that they lived only for a good time, or something equally damning and equally general.

"What d'yu mean, siren?" Arthur asked.

"O, she's perfectly nice," William answered. "But she's just like any young widow—looking for trouble."

Such a speech was really not like William Hurlbut. He was a little astonished at himself for making it. And when he turned to lead the way into the house to show Arthur the club cups, and saw that Maisie Blaze had stopped almost in the doorway and was standing there talking to Mrs. Green, he was a little worried for fear she might have overheard. He would not have liked her to overhear a remark so unkind. But William immediately reflected that Maisie had been at least a dozen feet away when he had made the remark and that he had spoken in rather a low tone, and that it wasn't in reason to suppose that she could have overheard. William was entirely governed by what was in reason, or so he believed.

William showed Arthur the cups, and played a round with him, and introduced him to the people he ought to know. Arthur spent Sunday with a real estate agent and went in with William on Monday morning quite completely sold to Sparborough. William was pleased. He felt that Arthur would make a solid addition to Sparborough. He was the sort of man William sometimes wished there were more of—a man of thirty, a business man, a man who wasn't light minded. Sparborough was, he would have admitted, chiefly populated by solid, respectable citizens. But there were people like Maisie Blaze and her crowd—the Greens and the Medways and Phil Barker and Ann Follett—who were perhaps too young to feel the seriousness of life, and people like Mr. and Mrs. Bronson, who, though mature, had the frivolity that sometimes accompanies inherited money.

On Monday evening, when William Hurlbut got off the 5:15, which regularly dropped him on the Sparborough platform at 5:50, he saw the yellow speedster of Maisie Blaze drawn up beside the walk, in defiance of the parking rules. William experienced a strange, for the moment, an inexplicable, desire to turn his head the other way as he walked past. But just before he reached the speedster he remembered the remark he had made about Maizie Blaze and knew why he wished to avoid speaking to her. It was part of William's character that he instantly turned toward the speedster instead of away from it. Maisie Blaze was standing beside it watching the passengers coming down the platform with an expectant eye.

"There's nothing for it but to wake up the Bronsons' chauffeur," Maisie said.

"How do you do, Mr. Hurlbut," she said.

William paused.

"Hello, Mrs. Blaisdell," William said, cordially. "Expecting some one?"

"Yes," said Maisie Blaze. "I'm expecting Mrs. Walker out from town for dinner, but I'm afraid she hasn't come."

William turned to survey the platform. The last half dozen commuters were hurrying toward the ramp. The train was moving out of the station.

"No," William said. "She didn't come." He hesitated. He wanted to be on his way, yet he wanted to say something pleasantly hopeful to the disappointed Maisie. "She may be on the 6:10," he added.

Maisie Blaze slipped into the seat of her low car, in which one did not so much sit as lie.

"In the meantime," she said to William, "I'll take you home."

William was in the habit of walking to and from the Sparborough station. It was just a mile, and he felt that a mile walk morning and evening was the least he could allow himself, even if he did play golf every Saturday afternoon during the season, and take a stroll every Sunday afternoon when the weather permitted. Besides—

"Jump in," said Maisie Blaze. She started the engine.

"O, I wish you wouldn't trouble yourself," said William.

"I shan't. I'd much rather drive you over than sit here waiting. It's chilly, and besides I never did like waiting.

William rather awkwardly took the seat beside her. He felt exposed in the low car, without the enclosing sides of his Rankin sedan, without a top, without even a windshield. He did not approve of speedsters. He did not approve of Maisie Blaze. He instinctively recoiled from permitting her to drive him home.

But, after all, there was no harm in it, and there was no getting out of it, either. He hoped she wouldn't drive as fast as she usually did. She had been arrested once for speeding.

But Maizie Blaze did not speed. The large ninety-mile speedometer under the cowl gave a premonitory quiver or two and settled at a point just beyond ten. Indeed, the car moved so slowly through the streets of Sparborough that William was uncomfortable. He felt that as long as they were going so slowly he ought to talk and he did not want to talk to Maisie Blaze; he could not think of anything to say to Maisie Blaze.

She said nothing. She seemed to be thinking. Or did such a woman ever think?

William was mildly occupied with this question, when Maisie Blaze turned her head

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

SOMETHING ABOUT A TEENIE WEENIE SHOWER. BY WM. DONAHEY.

THE coming wedding of Tess Bone and Buddy Guff was being looked forward to by the Teenie Weenies with much interest. The wedding trousseau was almost finished, and plans were being fixed for the wedding ceremony.

"I think it would be nice to give Tess and Buddy a linen shower," said the Lady of Fashion one warm evening to a number of the Teenie Weenies who sat on the tiny porch of the old shoe house.

"A linen shower would be nice," said Mrs. Lover. "But it seems to me we ought to make it a general shower. Anything any one would care to give—of course it would have to be something useful about the house—something that would help furnish their home."

"That's right," cried the Old Soldier. "Make it general and not just linen, so we all could give something."

"I have it! I have it!" shouted the Doctor. "Let's each give something we have made ourselves. Now I could make a little family medicine chest, and the Clown could make a couple of brooms, and so on."

"That's a perfectly wonderful idea, Doctor," cried the Lady of Fashion. "We'll all make our presents, and then we'll all meet at the school house and get the band to play, and we can march over to the shoe house and present our gifts."

All the little folks thought the idea a good one, and they set to work the next day to get their presents ready.

For several days there was much dodging about under the rose bush, where the little village stood, for each Teenie Weenie wanted to have his present a secret, and the little folk had to work in many queer places to keep Tess and Buddy from learning their plans.

Saturday afternoon was chosen as the time for the surprise, and when all the Teenie Weenies had gathered at the school house, the tiny band led the parade up to the shoe house where the Lady of Fashion and the General had managed to keep Tess and Buddy for the occasion.

As the band and the Teenie Weenies stopped before the shoe house, Tess and Buddy stepped out on the porch, followed by the General and the Lady of Fashion.

While the band played, each Teenie Weenie passed along and laid his and her gift on the porch at the feet of the tiny couple.

Tess and Buddy quickly unwrapped the packages, and it was very plain, from the smiles on their tiny faces, that they were much pleased with the presents.

"Speech! Speech!" shouted the Teenie Weenies, and both Tess and Buddy blushed as red as cherries.

"Go on and make a speech," cried Tess, and she gave Buddy such a push he nearly fell off the porch.

"E-e-er I-I-I that is we-w-w-we oh shoot—I can't make a speech. Thanks," gasped Buddy, and he ran into the shoe house before Tess could stop him.

"Friends," said Tess, stepping to the front of the porch. "That's just like a man. He runs and lets the women face the music. We certainly thank you for all the wonderful presents," but that was all Tess could say, for the band suddenly started to play so loudly that not a single word could be heard, and the little lady gave up in despair.

After the band had played several pieces the crowd was invited into the shoe house, and a whole strawberry was sliced up and passed around for refreshment.

Tess and Buddy received so many beautiful presents there was hardly room enough in the shoe house to store them.

Paddy Pinn gave the little couple a wonderful carving knife and fork. The fork and knife blade were hammered out of a piece of darning needle, and the handles were made out of carved fish bone.

The Old Soldier's present was a hickory nut baking dish with two silver handles on the cover.

The General gave a half dozen drinking cups which were made out of hollow reeds and bound with silver bands to which were fastened silver handles.

Gogo gave Tess and Buddy a beautifully carved basket which the little chap made out of a hazel nut.

The Doctor's present was a half dozen cherry seed finger bowls.

The Lady of Fashion gave a lovely hand embroidered lunch cloth, one and a half inches square, and a half dozen napkins.

The Turk's present was a wonderful serving dish made from an olive seed, set in silver.

There were many more presents, and you can well believe that Tess and Buddy were about the happiest little couple in all the Teenie Weenie world.

and smiled at him. William felt a curious and incredible thrill when she smiled at him. It was a slow smile, and yet a smile that somehow lighted up her whole face; her eyes positively sparkled when she smiled. William was aware of the scientific fact that eyes do not and cannot sparkle. But he observed that Maisie Blaze's eyes did sparkle—there were little points of light in their brown depths when she smiled.

"You know, Mr. Hurlbut," said Maisie Blaze, "I have an odd feeling about you." She paused. Her eyes were again on the road.

William was more than a little surprised. He had not been aware that Maisie Blaze had any feeling about him. Also, he was curious. He could not imagine what was coming. There was no precedent in his experience for such a remark. He turned expectantly to Maisie Blaze. But she seemed to have forgotten her speech. She seemed to be completely engaged in driving her car. They were within a block of the Hurlbut house. In another moment he would be getting out of the speedster and going into the house.

"Well?" he said.

Maisie Blaze drove her car the remaining hundred yards and stopped it opposite William's front door. William got out. But naturally he turned to Maisie Blaze.

"Do you mind my being quite frank?" she asked. And as she spoke she looked straight into his eyes. The little points of light were gone now; her eyes were velvety; it occurred to William that Maisie Blaze was not, perhaps, an altogether happy woman, even if she was frivolous.

"I should be glad to have you speak frankly," William said.

"Well," said Maisie Blaze, and dropped her gaze. "It's an odd thing to say—but I have sometimes felt that you didn't approve of me." She paused.

"Why," William began. "Why——" He really didn't know what to say. The truth was, of course, that he didn't approve of her. Margaret didn't approve of her. But William could hardly say as much. Besides, he didn't seriously disapprove of Maisie Blaze. It was only——

"Not that you've ever said anything—I mean snubbed me," Maisie Blaze continued. "It's just a feeling I've had. Perhaps there's nothing in it. But you see how it is, Mr. Hurlbut. You're one of the best known men in Sparborough and I have a tremendous respect for you—everybody has. And—well, it's just the way you look at me when I speak to you—in passing. It makes me feel as if I were a naughty little girl."

"Why—why," said William, "I don't think anything of the sort."

"I'm glad," said Maisie Blaze simply. "I was afraid you did. And, of course, I'm not a—a very useful citizen—or anything."

William held out his hand. He couldn't quite assure Maisie Blaze that she was a useful citizen, and yet he wished suddenly to assure her of something.

Maisie took his hand and pressed it. William felt that she had a nice hand. Indeed, William felt that she was a nice girl—a surprisingly nice girl.

"Thank you," said Maisie Blaze. "It's good of you to understand. I knew I could trust you."

William lifted his hat and smiled and Maisie smiled back—that slow smile which lighted up her face and made the little points of light sparkle in her eyes and gave William a curious and incredible thrill. The yellow speedster started down the street and William turned toward his own front door.

Margaret met him in the hall.

"Wasn't that Mrs. Blaisdell you were talking with?" she asked.

"Yes," said William, "she was at the railway station to meet some woman who didn't come and she volunteered to drive me home."

"H-m-m-m," Margaret said. "I wondered how on earth you happened to be with her. It must have been rather trying."

"Why, no," William said honestly, "it wasn't trying at all. She——" He hesitated. He had been about to tell Margaret what Maizie Blaze had said. He always told Margaret everything. But hadn't Maisie implied, by that phrase about trusting him, that he wasn't to repeat what she had said? Of course he could tell Margaret—he wasn't bound to confidences that excluded his wife. But it might sound rather silly when repeated.

"She what?" Margaret asked.

"She—a—a—a——" Again William hesitated.

"William," Margaret said, "your trick of beginning a sentence and then pausing indefinitely before going on is most annoying. Will you please go on."

"She struck me as a much more—well, a much nicer person than I had always supposed she was," William said.

"It's a habit of hers," Margaret said tartly.

"What?" said William.

"I say it's a habit of hers—to strike men as being a much nicer person than they had always supposed."

"Well," said William judiciously, "she has seemed rather flirtatious."

"Rather," said Margaret.

William, with a guile that he did not know he possessed, changed the subject abruptly with an inquiry about the twins.

He did not see Maisie Blaze for several days after their chance meeting at the railway station. He found himself strangely expectant of meeting her. He intended to be just as friendly as he could be when he did meet her. He quite wanted to meet her. He found himself remembering her smile and those lights in her eyes. It was pleasant to remember them. It would be even pleasanter to experience them again.

He experienced them again at the country club on Saturday. He was going through the club on his way out after playing nineteen holes when he ran plump into Maisie Blaze.

"O, Mr. Hurlbut, do come and have tea with me," said Maisie Blaze.

"I'd be delighted," William said.

He was an hour late for dinner and Margaret was inclined to be petulant about it.

"I wish you had telephoned," she said.

"I hadn't any idea it was so late," William protested.

"But it isn't like you to forget," Margaret countered. "What were you doing, talking to Mrs. Blaisdell?"

William knew it was a chance shot, but it wasn't any easier to meet for being that. He felt his face grow red. He felt that he must look guilty.

"Why, yes," William said, "I was."

He hoped his tone sounded matter of fact.

"Well," Margaret said. It was one of those noncommittal "Well's" which promise nothing except a "to be continued."

After dinner Margaret reminded William that she was going up to Boston to visit her mother for a few days.

"I hope, William," she said lightly, "that Mrs. Blaisdell won't occupy all of your attention while I'm gone."

"What nonsense!" William said.

"I'm perfectly serious," Margaret replied. "Mrs. Blaisdell is a dangerous woman—and you've been with her twice in the last week."

"Just chance," William said. "I probably shan't so much as meet her on the street while you're away."

"Well," Margaret said, "I really think you ought to be circumspect in my absence. You know what a gossipy place Sparborough is."

"My dear Margaret," said William testily, "are you seriously considering the possibility that I might be gossiped about?"

"Very seriously," Margaret said slowly. "I think, for instance, that you oughtn't to call on Mrs. Blaisdell while I'm away."

William rose to his feet and strode across the floor.

"Good God, Margaret," he cried, "have I ever called on Mrs. Blaisdell while you were here?"

"No," Margaret admitted; "that's why it would be so pointed if you called while I was away."

"But who said I was going to call on her while you were away," William roared.

"You needn't shout," Margaret said sweetly.

William opened his mouth to speak, thought better of it, and stood staring at Margaret.

"I must say you surprise me," he said. "I feel as if I didn't know you at all. Five minutes ago I couldn't have imagined you saying such things."

"Five days ago," Margaret countered, "I couldn't have imagined you running around with Mrs. Blaisdell."

"But I'm not running around with her," William groaned. "I haven't the slightest desire to run around with her. I don't care if I never see her again."

William was instantly conscious that this last statement was a lie. He had not meant to lie. But what he said was a lie. He wondered if he ought to modify the statement. He wished he had said, "I don't particularly care if I never see her again." That would have been strong enough.

"I'm awfully glad to hear it, William," Margaret said.

William spent the first evening of Margaret's absence reading a new book on business management. It occurred to him that it would be pleasant to call on Maisie Blaze. He caught the idea in the very act of occurring to him. He was shocked at himself for entertaining it. He went so far as to realize that he might actually have called her up on the telephone if it had not been for what Margaret had said. He might even have gone to see her.

The next evening passed in a similar fashion, except that he was by now becoming used to this astounding impulse of his to see Maisie Blaze. He rather enjoyed the impulse as long as he refused to act on it. And he could not act on it. He resolutely put the idea out of his mind five evenings in succession and then on the sixth evening, the last one before Margaret's return, Maisie Blaze called him on the telephone.

"O, Mr. Hurlbut," Maisie said, "I'm so glad you're in. It's Phil Barker's birthday—and we've just discovered it. We're going to celebrate and we want you to help. Can we call for you in half an hour?"

"Why—why," there was certainly no harm in joining a birthday party of which Maisie happened to be a member; even Margaret could not object to that, "why—I'd be delighted," William concluded.

"Good for you," said Maisie Blaze. "We'll be round in twenty minutes, or half an hour at most. We're going to the club and dance."

William hastened into his dinner clothes. He had no means of knowing what the others were wearing. But dinner clothes could hardly be out of place at an informal party. He was dressed in fifteen minutes, except for his tie. Margaret always tied his bow ties. But he managed in fifteen minutes more to do a passable bow. It was another fifteen minutes before they drove up.

There were three cars besides Maisie's and William was simultaneously invited to enter all of them.

"You're coming with me," said Maisie Blaze. "I haven't room for more than one and you're chosen."

"I'm flattered," William said to her.

"We're going around to pick up the Greens," Maisie explained.

"It's 10 o'clock now," William said. "And it's eight miles to the club."

"It won't take long," Maisie assured him.

They arrived at the club at 11 and then William discovered that the party consisted of the Greens and the Medways and Ann Follett and George Hemenway and Gertrude Parker and Phil. It was precisely the crowd he had always felt to be irritatingly irresponsible. For a moment William wished he hadn't come. But he did want to dance with Maisie Blaze.

William found it a curiously upsetting experience. He hadn't danced with any one for a long time. He had supposed that putting one's arm around a girl in dancing was a formal convention, like shaking hands. But he was curiously embarrassed in putting his arm around Maisie Blaze. He wanted to and he was afraid to. He danced a dozen dances with Maisie Blaze. He suddenly realized it was late.

"Maisie!" he said.

"Yes—Bill," said Maisie.

William colored. He had not meant to call her Maisie. He never had called her anything but Mrs. Blaisdell. But he had got to thinking of her as Maisie.

"It's—it's——" he stammered.

"It's what?" asked Maisie Blaze.

"It's 1 o'clock," he said.

"O," Maisie said, "it's time for supper. We's got two bottles of champagne—to toast Phil."

It was half-past two when the supper was over, and the party began to break up. Maisie couldn't at first find the key to her car. And when she did, the battery refused to turn over the engine. The rest had gone on ahead. William dug the crank out of the tool box and started the engine.

"It's raining," Maisie said, as the car moved off.

"Yes," William agreed.

"I'm afraid we're in for a wetting.

"No harm done if we are," William said lightly. He was sitting beside Maisie Blaze, his shoulder just touching hers, and he cared nothing whatever for a bit of rain.

Maisie stepped on the throttle and the low car shot out of the club drive into the road to Sparborough.

The rain was coming hard now and the speedster was splashing mud over the hood and into their faces.

"There's a marshy place just below Bronson's," William warned her.

"I know it," Maisie answered. "We'll stick to the middle of the road."

But she didn't. She ran off a yard or so as they passed the Bronson house.

"Look out," William cried.

It was too late.

The car slowed down sickeningly, slowing in the mud, and stopped.

"We're stuck," said Maisie Blaze.

William got down to see. They were stuck. One rear wheel had buried itself to the hub in the mud. The lower side of the engine pan was resting in the mud.

"I wonder if it would do any good to put on the chains?" William asked.

"I think we'd better wake up the Bronsons' chauffeur and get him to pull us out," Maisie said.

"Let's try the chains."

"It's an awfully dirty job."

"I'm game," said William.

The mud seemed bottomless, but William knocked a board off the Bronsons' fence to rest the jack on and got the wheel up. He had to stand in mud up to his knees, to dig mud away with his hands, to wallow in mud, but he did it.

"Don't you suppose we could run out on a board?" Maisie asked.

William got another board, but after two tries they gave that up. Each time the car ran off the board he had to jack the wheel up again. He was beginning to tire and he was plastered with mud to the eyes. He finally got a chain on. The motor spun the wheel. William tried pushing from the rear, but still the wheel spun.

"There's nothing for it but to wake up the Bronsons' chauffeur," Maisie said. "It's nearly five o'clock now."

"Why don't we leave the car here and walk in?" William suggested. He did not like the idea of waking up the Bronsons' chauffeur. There was no reason to advertise their predicament. And the Bronsons would think it was a good story. William didn't want to be a good story.

"It's six miles," Maisie said. "I'd rather sleep in the car."

"Well," said William, "I'll go and see what I can do."

"I'll go with you," said Maisie Blaze.

"You stay there," said William, "I can do it."

"But I don't want to stay here all alone in the dark while you go away up to the Bronsons."

"All right," William said. He took her hand and started up the road. It was sloppy going.

"Let's be very quiet," he whispered to Maisie as they entered the Bronsons' gate. "We don't want to wake up the whole family."

"I should say not," Maisie whispered.

In that moment the air was split by a fierce bark. Instinctively they leaned against each other. The bark was the signal for a volley of barks, barks that rose in one vast crashing crescendo.

"It's that damn kennel of his," William said. "He's raising police dogs."

"I hope none of them are loose," said Maisie Blaze.

"If any of them were, we wouldn't be here," said William grimly.

They stole toward the garage, over which the chauffeur had his quarters. The dogs continued to bark like mad things. William and Maisie crept forward like a pair of burglars. They had reached the chauffeur's door when the night suddenly blazed with light.

"Hands up," said a voice behind them.

William and Maisie turned and faced the voice. Bronson was standing in a second story window with a shot gun in his hands.

"It's us," wailed Maisie Blaze.

Bronson slowly lowered his gun.

"Why, it's Hurlbut and Maisie Blaze," he said. "Wait a minute and I'll be down."

"Now we are in for it," said Maisie Blaze.

William made no comment. He knew it made little difference whether Margaret was at home or not if she was going to hear about it anyway.

Bronson beckoned to them from the kitchen door.

"What on earth are you two up to? Lord, but you're a sight, Hurlbut—what have you been doing?"

"We're stuck in the mud," William explained with dignity. "We were going to wake up your chauffeur and get him to pull us out."

Bronson began to laugh. When he laughed he shook. And when he shook he laughed harder.

"It isn't funny to us, Bob," interposed Maisie Blaze.

"I'm sorry," Bronson apologized. "I'm awfully sorry. But do you know what time it is? It's nearly five o'clock. You'd better let me put you up for the night and you can get the car tomorrow."

"We'd like to get it out tonight," William said.

"Well," said Bronson thoughtfully, "perhaps you'd better."

Bronson waked up the chauffeur and, at the earnest solicitation of William, returned himself to bed. The chauffeur was irritable. But he got out a big car and dragged the speedster out of the mud.

It was six o'clock when William got the on the significant ones. Margaret would note the hour at which they had left the club, the hour at which they had awakened Mr. Bronson, the hour at which he had got to bed.

"Just buries himself in it."

"Any time of the day or night."

"But he prefers it just before daylight."

William turned and faced them and they

"Nonsense," said William.

"E-e-everybody knows," said Margaret.

botched work, and what is more the jobs were got through so much more quickly that the output was doubled. Moreover, the men themselves became better tempered. Slacking didn't suit these energetic fellows, they lost the discontent which idleness had engendered—and usually does engender.

Altogether it was an illuminating morning for Ralph. He began to see where lay the trouble that was disturbing his father. Its seeds lay in men like Husky Bill, who, slouchers themselves, forced others to slack because they were big, dangerous, and bullying.

After the huge and appetizing mid-day meal that the Belgian chef served in the shack Ralph had a chat with the man Arty Griffin. He had been friendly in the morning, now he was more than friendly. Ralph found him a quiet and genuine fellow and liked him. He found that, being a true Canadian born, Arty didn't talk about 'Englishmen'; that slightly contemptuous manner was reserved for Husky and his sort, who weren't Canadians at all but only emigrants of a few years standing. In addition to liking Arty, Ralph had seen with his own eyes that Arty was a logger of real skill. He wanted to talk about that, but first Arty said:

"You gave me the shock of me life when you laid Husky out. What th' hell do you call that sort of trick?"

"What do you call it, chum?"

"I'd a called it fighting, only——"

"Well, just call it fighting now, in spite of that 'only,'" said Ralph cheerfully. "Perhaps you mixed up fighting with unskilled scrapping, which it isn't. That was the real thing, or a sample of it. In England they don't altogether neglect the arts of manhood. And that's enough about me. What I want to know about you is why you weren't in charge of that shackling from the beginning instead of Husky, who is lazy and hasn't half your skill?"

"That's too easy," said Arty. "Item one, I can't lay out Foxy as you laid out Husky. Item two, I don't care to be a partner in his low tricks. . . . Husky and Sulky Joe is the experts in both them items."

"That's the way the wind blows," said Ralph. Certainly his coming to the Mill was educative and valuable. "And Simms doesn't sack Foxy, who is incompetent, because——?"

"Becos Simms is another Foxy, only higher up, see?" Arty's anger carried him away.

"They're low trash, both of 'em. Simms is feathering his nest, all right; so's Foxy. They both play into each other's hands and are making pickings outter this Mill.

"I don't mind Old Man Child being fooled, that's his funeral, though I've heard he's a white 'un. What gets my gall is that the rest o' us men has to suffer. We gets brutes like Foxy and Husky, an' worst o' all, Sulky Jock put over us, snaffling the plums, an' making life hell fer us. That's the reason this isn't the happy crowd it ought ter be. Somethin' ought ter be done."

"Quite," said Ralph cheerily. "And we'll do it." Arty looked at him with both friendliness and dismay mingled. He said:

"You ain't asking fer a picnic, let me tell you, chum. You're walking slap inter trouble. Look here, don't monkey with Sulky Jock, he ain't the same sort o' goods as Husky. He's a big, ugly man killer. Don't you get on his queer side. He's real dangerous. Husky isn't in the same class with him."

"O well," said Ralph, "I don't believe in meeting trouble until it arrives. We'll wait until Sulky returns from his vacation or jag."

As the men returned to work that afternoon Ralph gained another insight into the methods of the Mill's management. Foxy sidled up to him. Foxy had heard all about the downfall of Husky and meant to find out whether this young man, who looked as thought he might develop importance, was an ally or a foe.

Deliberately he singled Ralph out when all the men were about. If Ralph was going to be popular, then it was best to get him into the Simms-Foxy régime at once. If he was going to be unpopular, then the suggestion Foxy had to make would speed up that unpopularity. The suggestion Foxy made was that Ralph, the newcomer, should take charge of the men shackling and hauling logs in Husky's place. All the loggers stood round, probably angry, but silently as they waited for Ralph's answer.

"When I know as much and have worked as long at the job as these chaps here I'll think about it," said Ralph tartly. "I should suggest that you put somebody who knows the work—not a greenhorn like me—in charge. . . . O! you don't like my tone? Well, if it comes to that, I don't like anything about you. . . ."

Ralph had seen that this was a good chance for him, too, and he hadn't minced matters. He declared war on the Simms-Foxy combination right there. Certainly he made Foxy and Simms his enemies at once, but Foxy had no alternative but to put Arty in charge. That was good for the work, even if it hadn't pleased the loggers and made them recognise that Ralph himself was 'white.' Certainly Ralph was going to be popular—but not in the way Foxy and Simms would like.

Ralph himself recognized the position, and that night dropped a line to his father. A wise step, for later, when Simms rang up Old Man Child saying that he wanted to fire that feller Steggles because he was making trouble, he was told bluntly that Steggles remained on at the Mill or Old Man Child would know the reason why.

The trouble, of course, came about on the return of Sulky Jock. Sulky Jock not only returned from his joy-time in a vile temper, but he was also informed by his crony Simms of the way the greenhorn, Steggles, was upsetting things at the camp, and how Sulky Jock's power for idleness was being undermined. Sulky Jock was not a brilliant thinker, but within his limitations he knew that the best way to strike terror was to apply his brutal strength in swift and smashing action. And he applied this plan on the whole, quite brilliantly.

He appeared suddenly and unannounced in the dining shack after his talk with Simms. He glanced round the room with that sullen and ugly rage that gave him his nickname, and with a quick movement was beside the chair where Ralph sat reading a magazine.

"What's a swab of a greenhorn doin' in my perticler seat," he roared. "Git outer it, you pup." His huge hands plucked Ralph from the chair, and with tremendous strength, he flung the young man across the shack.

There was no uproar. The loggers knew exactly what was happening. Sulky was here to put that greenhorn in his place without loss of time. They were sorry for the young greenhorn because he had the makings of a "regular feller," but facts were facts, and had to be faced. Sulky was undoubtedly here to break him up. The loggers backed against the walls silently, pushing the tables and chairs back.

Sulky stood huge and truculent, glaring at the fallen man, his hands dropped but ready, not really on the alert because he was confident in his gorilla strength and in the fact that his whirlwind assault, coupled with his ferocity, had already put the fear of death into the soft heart of the greenhorn. Ralph lay on the floor for thirty seconds staring, apparently with astonishment, at Sulky. Then he rose with curious slowness, and that manner of rising told Sulky that his method had been correct. The fight was finished, he'd knocked the heart out of the cub. . . . .

And as his heart glowed under that thought, his head clicked back with such force that only the vertebrae seemed to save it from falling off his shoulders, he staggered backward, a tree trunk seemed to hit him just under his ear, and his big body fetched up with such a clump on the shack walls that the whole building shook.

What had happened? The slowly rising greenhorn had abruptly changed into a streak of lightning. He had come across the shack in one flash even before he had risen fully to his feet, it seemed. Caught napping in his moment of self-confidence, Sulky had been not only unready but practically unaware of the terrific left and right that had shaken him to his feet. And in any case he had never encountered anything equal to the tearing, bewildering, tornado-like swiftness of the young greenhorn.

For Ralph was not the man of the Husky encounter, not the man of Simms' description. In that fight with Husky, Ralph had been casual, almost indolent; he had walked through Husky's guard with an almost languid unconcern. Now he was unchained lightning. His swiftness and power were appalling. There was no playing at the game of fighting now. He had measured the brutal strength of Sulky, and was not going to leave anything to chance. Sulky was a natural fighting animal, if an unskilled one, and as such was dangerous.

Ralph never gave him a chance. Sulky heaved himself away from the shack wall, turned with a bellow on Ralph. Ralph was in at once, both fists banging at the great head, both fists clip-clopping at the great body that had just been indulged to excess. And then Ralph was out. He was in and out in the swing of Sulky's arm.

By the time that giant hand had reached the end of its stroke, the greenhorn was so far out of danger that the loggers let out a gale of laughter at the wildness of the miss. Their laughter changed to a shout as Ralph swept in on his man, and before Sulky could recover from his swing had jabbed a cruel left onto the exposed jaw.

From his own momentum, from the stinging force of that blow, Sulky went down with a crash. He was on his feet at once—foolishly, for Ralph was on him like a tiger.

The awful punches came in again, left, left, right, left, right, and his battered head kicked sideways with the nervelessness of a doll's under the swinging smash of each hit. And then he committed his last folly, he rushed at Ralph. He charged at the greenhorn like a great bull, his hands anyhow in his anger and fear—and Ralph did not run away. He charged in, too. His arm went out in an awful straight left, and it took Sulky on the jaw with terrible impact and timing. Sulky disappeared in a wild crash under one of the tables, and remained there. As a matter of fact, it took him a full five minutes to recover consciousness.

Something like a minor riot broke out then, for all the men had felt the weight of Sulky's bullying and were rejoicing, but in the middle of the cheering Foxy made a fool of himself. Terrified for his position, he rushed at Ralph (who, he thought, must be nearly done), yelling:

"Look here, I won't have this. Creating a disturbance . . . dangerous element. See here, you quit this camp. You hear me? Quit; your fired. . . ."

He advanced on Ralph with ready hands, and Ralph hit him. He was neither as heavy nor as skilled as Husky or Sulky, and the punch Ralph landed spun him along the floor until he fetched up against the legs of some of the loggers, who kicked him back into the middle of the room. There, after an attempt to rise and a sudden better thinking about that act, he lay feeling his face and scowling at Ralph. And Ralph said to him:

"I don't like your ways, and I don't like the ways of any of the 'rough house' brutes who do your dirty jobs, and, by gad, I'm going to change 'em, if I have to break Sulky and Husky and you up every day of my life. And as for my quitting—you go and talk that over with the man who gave me my chance here, Old Man Child. See what he says. And when you've heard what he says come back and argue it out with me again—I'll be ready for you."

It was after this that Simms had his long distance talk with Old Man Child about the man Steggles, and got, as he said, "a flea in his ear" for his pains. The flea in the ear did some good. After hearing that Steggles was to remain, Foxy, Sulky, and Husky decided that they would not. They decided it would not be healthy.

Two months later Ralph again sat on the edge of his father's desk, and he was smiling with unaltered cheeriness, though he looked browner and harder. Now, however, Old Man Child saw the smile with a different eye. He was saying, with something of a chuckle in his voice:

"This Arty Griffin you got me to put in place o' Simms when I fired him, also thanks to you, writes me the best report I have had o' the Mill in years. Everything is going along in real proper shape; he's pleased—an' so'm I. He's a real good man. But—an' here's the point I want ye to attend to—he wants to propose a real good man as assistant manager. The increased work calls for an assistant, as I agree, an' he wishes to put forward the name of a regular feller, hard worker, popular with the men, an' one who has done even more than he, Arty, himself in getting the mill an' camp into a proper, healthy state. The 'regular feller' he proposes is a certain Ralph Steggles."

Ralph grinned.

"That's like old Arty," he grinned; "but he must have written that report before I decided to come away, before I told him and the rest who I was."

"O," said Old Man Child, lifting his rugged brows, "so you told them who you were. And did it make any difference?"

"Not the slightest. You see, they're 'regular fellers,' too, the lot we've got there now."

Old Man Child, who had been bursting with curiosity, could contain himself no longer.

"Look here, son, how did you do it? O, I've heard things from this Arty and from others. I've heard about Husky and that big brute Sulky Jock, an' all that. . . . How did you break up them big, rough house, all fire dangerous men?"

"O, that—because they were just rough house men, that an' nothing else. I admit that if I had 'rough housed' with them they'd have made short work of me. So I did it scientifically; they didn't. But since you sent me to England to obtain the best education money could buy, I bought the best scientific advice I could in 'rough house' stuff. I became rather an expert over there, because, I suppose, I had a natural liking for it. I imagine it's in the blood. If what I hear about the early days of a certain would be grumply Old Man——"

"Hmm," grunted Old Man Child, trying not to chuckle. "We'll leave that at that. Though I'm not saying that the grumpy old feller you refer to didn't have a nateral turn or aptertude fer making hay of toughs when they were uppish. All the same, son, you're good stuff. An' I takes back that bitter talk I give you—that talk where I hinted or suggested you weren't a real man."

"The clothes misled you, dad, and the English drawl. It does a lot of people. . . . But we're all the same underneath, if we're 'regular fellers.' And I say, going back to that talk, I've got to ask you the same thing. I guess I'm through with the Mill. Have you any work for me?"

"Have I any—have I any work fer you? I've got it all fer you. Just pull up that chair to the desk. You're going to sit down here with me and share the whole boiling now, an' now on."

himself to bed. The chauffeur was irritable. But he got out a big car and dragged the speedster out of the mud.

It was six o'clock when William got the mud out of his hair and turned in, and he had to get up at half-past seven in order to be at the office by nine. William never missed a day at the office.

In the morning William snatched time to put his dinner clothes and his overcoat and his hat and his shoes in a suit-case. He thought they were still good, but he intended to drop them at the cleaners on his way to the station; they were not the kind of things one leaves about the house.

He decided, in the interstices of a somewhat crowded day at the office, that it would be best to tell Margaret about his experience in coming home from the country club—immediately. He could describe it briefly and humorously and without too much insistence on the hour when he got home.

But when he was face to face with Margaret at dinner that evening, he began to consider the possibility of not telling Margaret. He had neither the skill nor the control to give Margaret the true picture—to sketch in the casualness of the occasion, to show the utter fortuitousness of his misadventure, and to suggest firmly the triviality of the whole business.

Margaret's mind would be certain to seize upon the more outstanding facts, instead of on the significant ones. Margaret would note the hour at which they had left the club, the hour at which they had awakened Mr. Bronson, the hour at which he had got to bed. Above all, Margaret would insist on the fact that he had been alone with Maisie Blaze. How could he make her see that time really had nothing to do with it? Or that his being with Maisie Blaze was the merest chance? It might have been any other woman. That is, well, it might conceivably have been some other woman.

He wished he could consult Maisie Blaze. He wanted to talk to Maisie Blaze. Half the fun of a thing like that was in talking it over afterward. But he couldn't have that half, unless he met Maisie by chance.

William arrived at the station the next morning five minutes early. He opened his morning paper, as he stood waiting on the platform. But he did not read. He was suddenly aware that one of three men standing in a group behind him had mentioned his name.

"There's Hurlburt," one of them said.

"Extraordinary chap," another remarked.

William was aware that they were talking in much louder tones than necessary, that indeed they were talking for his ears.

"Regular old mud turtle," said the third member of the group.

"Yes," said the first man, "they say he likes to get out and slosh in the mud."

"Just buries himself in it."

"Any time of the day or night."

"But he prefers it just before daylight."

William turned and faced them and they all burst into loud guffaws.

Margaret was strangely tense at dinner that night. William knew that she knew. But he did not broach the subject. He didn't know how much she knew.

After dinner Margaret took him upstairs. She dragged a shirt from the laundry bag behind his closet door. It was the shirt. When he looked at it now William was astonished that one shirt could carry so much mud; it looked as if you had washed it in mud and then stood off and thrown mud at it, to see how much would stick.

Margaret held that shirt up and looked at William.

William looked at Margaret.

And then Margaret burst into tears.

William essayed to comfort her. He put his arm around her shoulders to draw her to him. But she flung him off.

"No," said Margaret. "No."

William made another attempt.

"Don't touch me!" Margaret shrilled.

William let his arms drop to his sides. Helpless, he surveyed the wreckage he had wrought. He couldn't put his arms around her; she wouldn't let him. He couldn't speak; there was nothing to say.

"I'm going away from Sparborough," Margaret said distinctly between sobs. "I won't live in the same town with that woman and be-be-sides our reputation is ruined."

"Nonsense," said William.

"E-e-everybody knows," said Margaret.

William discovered in the week that followed that everybody did know. Bronson had made a story out of it and told it everywhere. William met the story, or some reference to it, every time he poked his head out of the house.

He wished he could talk to Maisie Blaze. But he couldn't. The first time he saw her yellow speedster waiting at the station he hesitated. But he didn't dare stop and talk to her. He hurried past with a nod and a lift of his hat.

A couple of days later he received an odd note from Maisie Blaze:

"Dear Bill:" (It began) "I judge from the way you avoid me you've had some explaining to do. Just like any married man—anything to keep out of trouble. I did some of it on purpose, Bill. But I'm sorry. I'm really sorry. Because I like you, Bill. I liked you awfully and I wanted you to like me.

"Maisie."

William read the note and re-read it and then he put it in his inner vest pocket. He carried it there until it was quite worn out, did William Hurlbut, who had been one of the immensely respectable citizens of the immensely respectable suburb of Sparborough.

A REGULAR FELLER

By W Douglas Newton

OLD MAN CHILD had heard from Simms up at the Mill that morning, and, to use his own expression, his temper had sand in it. It was not the best moment for his son Ralph to litter himself about the office. All the same Ralph materialized.

Old Man Child pretended not to notice he was about, but, as he put it to himself, if his eyes could overlook them clothes his ears couldn't; he muttered a ripe word, which he pretended arose solely from Simms' letter, and looked up.

"Hello, sonny," he said. "Run out o' games to play?"

Ralph sat on the edge of the big banker's desk and laughed. He didn't flush under his father's sly taunt—his father thought cynically, he was the sort o' feller who wouldn't touch up under a thing like that—and he said:

"I ran out of games the moment I—stopped off, isn't it from the C. P. R. Imperial No. 2, dad? . . . "

"I'm glad you don't call me pap or poppa," said Old Man Child stoically. "There's that to be thankful for anyhow."

Again his son laughed and did not blush, laughed not outright and heartily but in the quiet, tittering manner he had got at his English university.

"This isn't one of your sunny days, is it, dad?"

"Sunny—O, heck!" said Old Man Child, thinking of Simms' letter. "No, this is a thirty below day with me—you'll understand if I sorter freezes you out o' the office, see?"

The young man, a big young man, a too beautiful young man for his father, got off the desk at once.

"Right-o," he said in his too easy and cheery way. "Then you haven't any work for me?"

Perhaps Simms' letter had made Old Man Child more bitter than he knew. Certainly as his son spoke he thought of the Mill, and felt that if his son had been anything of the man he himself had been in his young day he'd be just the fellow to clear up that mess. And as his mind felt that emotion his eyes rested on his son's clothes, those beautiful English clothes and their creases. . . .

"You'll be heartbroken to learn as I haven't any work," he said with irony. Then catching his son's eyes—and they were steady and candid eyes of a light blue that one would call steel blue in a man of grit—he tempered his bitterness by adding: "Not work of your kind, anyhow."

The young man's eyes held him for a moment, then the pleasant face broke into its inevitable smile. Instead of leaving the office of a busy and irritable man, as he had tactfully meant to do, Ralph returned to the desk.

"And what work is my kind, do you think, dad?" he asked.

As he came up his father saw his sunset tinted vest (the thing Ralph called a waistcoat, in his English way) and his pretty silk shirt and his tie that matched everything he had on, including the socks, and his bitterness at the spoiling of a good lad by them soft English namby-pamby schools blazed up again. He drawled drily:

"Right-o. Then you haven't any work for me?"

"Your sort o' work—O, president of the Golf Talking federation, with a lady stenographer to do the work, or a Traveling Sample of the University Manner—somethin' o' that sort o' thing."

Again Ralph did not blush, as a decent man should at the thrust; he smiled in his too amiable way once again, and he said:

"O, those jobs—competition must be keen for them. There must be a waiting list as long as your arm for plums of that sort. Meanwhile, from the tone in your voice, I take it you have lesser jobs."

"O, there's real work, sure 'nuff," the old man grinned hardly.

"Work is the word I have been mentioning to you for the last week," said Ralph in his man of the world cheerfulness.

"This is work for men," said Old Man Child, his eyes fixed on those dandy clothes, on the sleek, pink, well washed face of his son. Why had he given way to the mother when she was alive and sent the boy to England for all those good years to spoil and make into a thing like this . . . a Nancy?

"And this work for men is what?" asked Ralph, still taking the matter with a good deal of amusement so that his father thought he was being superior and became even more bitter. He picked up the letter from Simms and said with a rasp in his voice:

"There'd be, f'instance, a job fer a man, a real man, up at th' Mill. If I had th' real thing about I'd put him in place of the half a human I've got managing that mill and camp just now. That half a human is known as Simms. He thinks he's managing for me there. He ain't. He's bein' managed hisself.

"A camp full of toughs are running the show for him—my show. They call themselves loggers. They would be loggers with a red meat feller over 'em, but now they're wasters. Just that. They are wasting time, they're wasting wood, they're running amok with their work. They ain't producing up to contract, an' what they do produce is bad, scamped . . . flawed wood, badly chosen poles, badly 'fallen' trees. That's what's happening up at my Mill because I've got half a human being in charge, and I can't replace him with the real goods."

Old Man Child had let himself go, had recited the whole of the facts because he was angry and disappointed. He stopped and scowled across the disturbing letter into space, thinking of the things he would do to those toughs himself if he were only younger, if, even now, he could only spare the time from the many interests he controlled. And as he scowled in impotence he was startled to hear his son say, still cheerfully, lightly:

"Wouldn't the idea of my going up to the Mill to replace that half a human appeal to you?"

He stared at the youngster. But his eyes caught those perfect creases. Ralph was talking through his hat. Simply because he didn't know anything, because he thought that as the son of his father he would be bowed and scraped to, he talked like that.

"These loggers are large, rough men," he said satirically. "They hit people, that's why Simms is water before 'em. They're men, my boy, toughs."

"Is Simms any larger than I am?" asked his son.

"O, you're large enough," said his father in disgust. "Only these chaps are fighters. Fellers with hard fists an' quick at usin' 'em."

"O, I used my fists a little at school and Oxford myself," said Ralph. And the old man felt sick with him.

"Glove flappin'," he snorted contemptuously. "This is real painful." Why wouldn't the boy talk sense? Why wouldn't he understand he was in a man's world now, not lolling round with his sissy little schoolboy chums?

And as he felt this the glowering old man began to feel that perhaps it wouldn't be a bad thing to send the young pup up to such a place as the Mill. It would "learn him" something. It'd knock the girlish nonsense out of him; it would take the crease out of those beautiful pants (Ralph called 'em "trousers"). It might after all cure him, make a man of him.

"All the same," Ralph was saying in his ignorance, "I'm not the delicate flower you seem to think I am."

"And what do you know about logging?" snapped his father. Really it might be painful, but a spell with those toughs at the Mill might do the kid good. "Simms is a rabbit, but he do know about trees and timber. You—you ain't learnt anything worth having only about Greek and H. G. Wells."

"There's that, of course," smiled Ralph without showing offense, as a spunky man should. "But there's such a thing as learning. Why not give me the chance to learn?"

"The way men learn logging is from the bottom up."

"That seems sensible," grinned Ralph, and that grin drove Old Man Child further than he intended.

"An' learning, not as the son of the boss, where hands'd fawn on him an' keep things from him, but as a hired man."

"That," said Ralph casually, "is quite sound."

"Roughin' it in a shack. Taking the hard with the soft, putting up with men who ain't been to Oxford university, and don't act like it. Being just a low, common hand."

"I gathered that at first," said Ralph.

"If I give you a letter to Simms—no more—he'd take you on."

"That's practical," said Ralph. "Will you write it now?"

And Old Man Child, half in anger, half in astonishment, wrote it.

Ralph dawned upon Child's Mill at an unpropitious moment. There was a certain liveliness in the air. Simms, spurred on by some dynamic conversation over the long distance wire with Old Man Child, had been endeavoring to exert his authority and bring an end to "the mess" at the Mill. That had moved the loggers to sturdy anger, and it hadn't improved Simms' temper either.

He didn't feel happier when the boss, who pear again, the Doubleday ranch—to get the cowboys started at poking out the hiding places along the creek.

McAlpin, with much ado, enlisted every man with any sort of a claim to being a tracker—and this included pretty much every loafer interested in a drink or a fight. He assembled a noisy crew at the barn and dispatched them singly with orders to scatter and watch the trail points outlying the town. But birds of this feather were hard to keep scattered. Urged both by prudential and social reasons, they tended continuously to flock together. They kept the barn boss busy by riding back furiously in bunches to report nobody seen, to ask for further orders, and to get a drink before reëstablishing a patrol.

Knowing the value of every moment in a long chase, and working with all possible haste, Laramie had to throw out his dragnet carefully before he could get away himself. He had told Kate to prepare at Belle's for a hard ride and he would get her to the ranch.

With every minute lingering like an hour, both women, nervously expectant, waited, talked, and watched for Laramie's return.

Divide lands north of Sleepy Cat lie high and over their broad spread, trails open fanlike, north, northeast, and northwest. Each of the trails penetrates at a negotiable point the broken country running up to the mountains that battle with the northern sky.

The first highways of the country followed the easiest travel lines. Without fences or boundaries, their travelers, to escape washouts or dust, were free to broaden them as they fancied. In this way older ruts were gradually abandoned and new ones formed. And with heavy travel these trails grew into sprawling avenues.

As settlers took up lands and fenced their claims, such pioneer roads were blocked at intervals. To meet this difficulty new trails were made around the gradually increasing obstacles, and in the end roads along section lines were laid out, with grading and bridging. But the wagon and cattle trails of the early days, rut-cut, storm-washed, and polished by sun and wind and sand to a shining smoothness, still stretch across country, truncate and deserted. Under their weather-beaten silence lies the story of other days and other men and women.

Along one of the earliest and broadest of these trails running into the north country, Laramie, an hour after Bradley's arrival, was galloping with Kate Doubleday.

But for the shadow of her father's condition there was everything in the ride to make for Kate's happiness. The sweep of the matchless sky, the glory of the sunshine, the wine of the morning air, the eager feet and spreading nostrils of the horses, and at her side—her lover! The trust a woman gives to a man, the security of his protection, the daily growth of her confidence in her choice and her surrender—these could temper, if they could not extinguish, her confused grief.

For Laramie the shadow meant less; sympathy drew him close to Kate; there was even happiness in knowing that she turned in her distress to him for consolation and guidance.

Timidly, she tried to tell him, as they rode, of some of the better traits of her father, traits that might extenuate his cold, hard brutality—as if to build him up a little in the eyes of one she wished not to think of him too harshly.

"Don't worry over what I'm going to think about him," said Laramie. "If I worried over what a lot of people think about me, where would I be? There's some good in most every man; but it doesn't always get a chance to work."

Kate's anxiety was reflected in her manner. "If only," she exclaimed, "they haven't killed him today."

A REGULAR FELLER

had been bullying him into things he hated doing, sent him along a young greenhorn, Ralph Steggles (Ralph and his father had agreed that it would be better for all concerned if his identity was completely suppressed), who was to be given a job. Simms wasn't friendly to Old Man Child or anybody he sent, and he also had a faint feeling that this smiling, yet soft looking, young man, coming, as he did, from the boss, might prove dangerous to him.

He sent Ralph up on the light railway to the shacks of the camp and telephoned to the logger in charge that Old Man Child had shoved a Nancy looking for a soft job upon them. The logger replied that he felt competent to provide just the sort of job a Nancy needed most.

When Ralph arrived at the dining shack, just about supper time, the chief logger introduced him, per information in the letter to Simms, as a new chum, out from England to make his fortune.

"Our chief nurse, Sulky Jock, is not with us fer a day or two," he said to Ralph. "He is away or absent by, to, or for a vacation, joy time, or jag down at the metropolitan town or capital city of Okanagan. As he cannot take your young mind in hand, I places you in the tender charge of our undernurse, Husky Bill."

"Come off that, Foxy," snarled a scowling and massive man in the corner. "I'll take none o' that from you. An' I'll take no greenhorns, neither; plant him on some one soft."

"All right, Husky," said Foxy, and Ralph noted for future use that his name had been given him for good purpose, for he obviously cringed before the big, scowling brute in the corner; that meant he owed his position to low cunning rather than to his grit. "All right, Husky, but I can't help meself, see. You has the only shack with a spare bunk in it. Must bunk him somewhere. No other place but your shack, see. Can't help meself. . . ."

"Bunk him anywhere you like," snarled the big man with fury. "I don't care if you put him with me or not. Only for God's sake don't make a voodville song and dance out of it."

The rest of the evening before turning in was spent in rather a tense atmosphere. The men were obviously surly and angry. Over the astonishing loggers' supper, which began with clam chowder, a delicious soup made with cream, though it was served in preserved meat cans with the advertisement labels still on them, to the inevitable open "pies" and fruit jelly and dessert of fine Okanagan peaches, apples, pears and plums, the men kept up a continuous growl over their grievances. Ralph gathered that Simms had made an effort to ginger things up, and the fact that Old Man Child wanted them to work hard instead of slack appeared to the men to be an unwarrantable attack on their honor and their rights.

"An' what do you think o' this sort o' adjectival treatment?" an angry man asked Ralph.

"Nothing," said Ralph smiling, and in the pause that followed this apparently inimical remark, "I shan't start thinking about it until I've had some experience and know whether such treatment is deserved or isn't."

His remark was greated with scowls, and for the rest of the evening he was left to himself to read American magazines. Retiring he followed Husky Bill and two other men to the four bunk shack where he was to sleep. The men got ready for bed without speaking until, abruptly, Husky, who had been looking darkly at Ralph all the evening, growled out.

"So ye've come all the way acrost the water ter give us th' benefit o' yer distinguished presence, hey? Goin' to learn us how ter do things in a nice, pretty English way, hey?"

"Not quite," said Ralph cheerfully. "I've come along to do a little learning myself, as well as earning. Though, of course, there are some things you might pick up with benefit."

Big Husky Bill stared at the youngster in a pause of surprise, then he said:

"O, are there . . . such as?"

"Good manners," said Ralph with smiling calm. There was a palpable silence after that. The two other men in the shack turned and stared in pitying wonder at this silly young greenhorn who had "sassed" Husky Bill. Husky Bill, himself, was so taken aback by the suicidal folly of the brainless young Englishman, that for the moment he was struck dumb. In that moment he felt that it would be taking advantage of innocence and childhood to respond in the usual way to such an impertinence. He glowered at the fool, and merely took his pipe out of his mouth, and snarled,

"Th' first thing you gotter learn, anyhow, is to keep that silly mouth shut, see. As you don't know anythin' I just warns yer, the next time you gets English will be painful ter yer."

Ralph continued to smile, a smile that stimulated Husky Bill's wrath, but he said nothing further and climbed into his bunk. In his innocence he, no doubt, thought no more of the matter, until, going to the dining shack for breakfast next morning one of the other men who bunked with him said in a whisper,

"Look here, you're a new chum, take my advice. Don't you get fresh with Husky Bill, he's an ugly feller."

"You mean by nature as well as by face?" said Ralph sweetly.

The other man glanced at him sourly.

"That's th' sort of chin stuff you've gotter drop if you wantter remain healthy," he advised. "Husky Bill is a man-breaker. The man-breaker in this outfit, barring only Sulky Jock."

"I'll make a note of it," said Ralph.

If he did it must have been a note too easily erased from his mind. There was a certain freshness in the air between him and Husky Bill no later than the middle of the forenoon.

Ralph had been put on the donkey engine. The donkey engine stood in the middle of the "slashings"—the branches and splinters of fallen trees that littered the cleared ground of the forest. From the drum of the donkey engine a steel rope passed up and through a pulley lashed to the top of a tall tree, that, cleared of branches, was used as a derrick. From the pulley the steel rope went down into the heart of the forest, where loggers, among them Husky Bill, secured it round the prone trunks the cutters had "fallen."

At the signal from a whistle Ralph started the donkey engine, hauling in the rope, and the great logs, two at a time, came jerking and writhing out of the woods at the end of the cable, the lifting height of the tall tree causing them to leap and bound over obstacles in an uncannily alive fashion. When the logs caught in a bush or a tree stump, or when anything untoward happened, the whistle sounded again, and Ralph stopped the engine until the obstacle, or whatever it was, was dealt with.

Again when the logs had been brought to the foot of the tall tree, a man stationed there whistled, and Ralph, reversing the engine, let the great trunks drop, to be unshackled and hitched to other ropes that hauled them up to another part of the clearing, where they were loaded on the trucks of the light railway.

As work went it was monotonous but simple, and Ralph quickly picked up the few tricks which made his handling of the logs easy. For hours the work went smoothly, but toward the middle of the forenoon, when all were working a little slackly, things began to go wrong. The logs continually caught in obstacles, and they even slipped out of the shackling and fell into awkward positions. These mishaps increased as time went on, to a general fraying of tempers.

Husky Bill, who had started his day in a bad temper, was the man who got most out of control. As he had a likely butt in Ralph, it was this newcomer who received his hearty and bitter blame. It was this raspy greenhorn who was the cause of all the trouble. It was this swab handling his donkey engine so clumsily who was giving them all the work.

He howled his curses out of the woods at Ralph. Why couldn't Ralph watch what he was vermilion well doing? What did Ralph mean by handling his "donkey" like a hoof-handed clerk?

Ralph said nothing at all; he worked his "donkey" and watched the logs and the swing of the logs with concentrated care. Then when, in a howl of profanity which Husky Bill directed exclusively at him, two great logs came down in some way when only half across the clearing, he shut off steam, hopped down from the donkey, and strolled across to the troublesome logs. He arrived there before Husky Bill, beside himself with rage, got to them, and his eyes went over them quickly.

"Thought so," he said to the loggers as they came up. "Who put on that shackling?"

"Who put on that shackling?" mouthed Husky Bill. "Look here, you beat it, you half-baked piece o' dough. I've had just more'n enough o' you."

"O you put it on?" said Ralph, still easy and smiling. "I guessed as much."

"An' if I did?" snarled Husky Bill, drawing toward the young man and looking particularly ugly. "An' if I did, what then?"

"Then you're the man who's been wasting all our time," said Ralph. "You're shackling these logs anyhow—and of course that means trouble."

"Trouble," said Husky. "O, it do mean that, do it? An' you think I ain't doin' my work proper, me little lily-gill greenhorn?"

"Not at all, I know you're not doing it properly," said Ralph with his undiminished smile. "I know that you're both lazy and a slacker and you're spoiling the work of half a dozen men because you haven't the guts to do a good job yourself."

Not merely Husky Bill but all the men round gasped at the smiling—and idiotic—folly of the greenhorn. Husky Bill stared, then put down his logging spike solemnly.

"This must be me morning fer spoiling things," he snarled ironically. With a quick sharp step he was on top of Ralph.

And then he was sitting heavily in the wood litter wondering how accidents came to happen.

He did not quite know what had occurred. Those about did not quite know, in fact. Husky Bill, who had broken up more real men—except Sulky Jock—than anyone else in the camp, had jumped on the soft looking greenhorn, his fists swinging, his intention slaughterous. The two men had come together in a bunch, there had been a movement lightning-swift, then Husky Bill had curved outward and backward and had come down bump on the scattered floor of the clearing.

And the greenhorn had stood there unhurt, still wearing his cheery smile.

Husky Bill rose with a bewildered air. His eyes lighted on the greenhorn and alertness and rage woke in him at once.

"If you think that slipping on a bit of slashings wins a fight—" he began in answer to that calm smile.

"I don't," said Ralph. "I know exactly what happened to you—you apparently don't Why argue, friend Husky? This is the time for action."

Husky Bill jumped again, but this time he was more wary. He mixed his dash with brains, so he thought. He did not merely punch to stun, there was something of a guard in his stance. Ralph slipped under the punch, slipped under the guard. He was in through the big man's defenses with an almost contemptuous casualness. His two arms flicked in and out, short hammer-stroke punches. The right took Husky Bill's ribs where they curved, and with a grunt Husky hinged forward. With delightful precision the left took up the job and rose with the snap of a whip to Husky's chin. Husky once more knew the companionship of the slashings.

The men around were too startled to shout encouragement one way or the other. They were too bewildered to gather what the extraordinary display meant. To them the downfall of Husky had been the result of a lucky trick. Husky had not rid himself of that idea either. He rose to show that happy accidents do not prevent, but merely put off, the slaughter of greenhorns.

He came on a little more elaborately, his attitude showing rugged determination to end this foolery once and for all. He crouched, covering up, and began to swing at Ralph. He swung quite half a dozen guaranteed man-stunning blows. Ralph made but little fuss about them. He moved little—but each of those blows missed. Then, choosing his own opportunity, he stepped, no, strolled, right through Husky's guard, his left arm straightened "flick."

Husky went down with such force that his body gathered an accumulation of slashings about its shoulders as it slid along the ground. And he lay still. There was no help for it. That knockout blow had been accurately and perfectly timed.

He came to consciousness one hundred and two seconds later, but did not feel fit to employ his feet in their legitimate office for at least thirty minutes more. When he did feel stout enough to walk he rose groggily and went across the clearing to the shacks. He had had enough for the day, any other work after that series of punches would be overtime, if not blackleg labor.

But nobody noticed his going, or, rather, everybody noticed his absence. There had come a new steadiness, a new serenity in the work. The man who had warned Ralph not to be fresh, and whose name was Arty, took Husky's place in charge of the shackling, and from that moment it became apparent that the work was being well done. There were no more stoppages through botched work, and what is more the jobs were got through so much more quickly that the output was doubled. Moreover, the men it from falling off his shoulders, he staggered backward, a tree trunk seemed to hit him just under his ear, and his big body seil. Terrified for his position, he rushed at Ralph (who, he thought, must be nearly done), yelling:

THE STORY.

KATE DOUBLEDAY has journeyed to the far west to visit her father.

BARB DOUBLEDAY, who deserted her mother years before and about whom the girl knows little or nothing. This strange father offers her a home at his ranch, and here she quickly adapts herself to her surroundings with the aid and friendship of

BELLE STOCKLEY, a woman of the neighborhood who runs an eating house in Sleepy Cat Junction, the nearby town. Kate finds presently that a bitter war is under way, ostensibly between cattle thieves and the big ranch owners of the country, and that her father is looked upon as leader of one of the factions. His chief lieutenants are

TOM STONE, foreman at the Doubleday ranch, and

HARRY VAN HORN, a dashing cattleman who develops into a persistent suitor for Kate's hand. From these and others Kate hears much talk of one

JIM LARAMIE, whose position in the feuds is, at first, a matter of some doubt. Kate is inclined to be hostile when she meets him, but Laramie falls in love with the girl, and in spite of herself she is interested. Then Doubleday and his men organize a raid on the Falling Wall country, where Laramie lives, and Jim incurs their open enmity and that of Kate as well by protecting an old outlaw against whom their operations are chiefly directed. Several attempts are made to assassinate Laramie, but he escapes, and on two occasions gets the better of Stone, Doubleday's foreman, in encounters at

HARRY TENISON'S hotel in town. One night Kate, lost in a storm, blunders on the retreat where Laramie and his outlaw friend are hidden, and in getting her back to safety Hawk, the outlaw, saves the girl from drowning at the cost of his own life. This brings matters to a head, for Kate attends Hawk's funeral in defiance of her father—a proceeding which so angers Doubleday that he bids Kate pack up and leave his ranch. Meanwhile,

JOHN LEFEVER, the town marshal, Harry Sawdy, and other old timers, Kate has heard enough to make her suspect that Laramie may not be entirely wrong in defying her father and his men. Laramie has been badly wounded in his flight down a canyon on the occasion of the last attempt to kill him, and Kate is in a chilling mood when Jim, seeking supper, finds her at Belle Stockley's eating house. Kate gets the meal for him herself, and proves so enticing in her cook's role that he kisses her. Then, for the first time they talk without restraint, and she tells of her desperate fears for his safety.

FIFTEENTH INSTALLMENT.

Barb Doubleday Sees the Light.

"I'LL tell you, Kate," said Laramie. "You can easy enough hire a fellow to kill a man. But you can't really hire one to hate a man. And if he doesn't really hate him, he won't be as keen on your job as you'd be yourself. These hired men will booze once in while—or go to sleep, maybe. It's work for a clear head and takes patience to hide in these rocks day after day and wait for one certain man to ride by so you can shoot him. If you doze off, your man may pass while you snore. And the kind of man you can hire isn't as keen on getting a man as the man himself is on not getting 'got'—that's where the chance is, sometimes, to pull out better than even."

Because his aim was to reassure, to relieve her anxiety, he did not tell her that all the unfavorable conditions he had named, while never before arrayed against him at one time, were now pretty much all present together. Kate herself, he knew, stood more than ever between him and Van Horn. Stone had been twice publicly disgraced by Laramie at Tenison's—he would never forgive that. He had the patience of the assassin and when hatred swayed him he did not sleep—these were still, Laramie knew in his heart, bridges to be crossed.

But why spoil an hour's happiness with the thought of them now? Laramie drew his hand across his heated forehead as if to clear his eyes and look again down into the face close to his and assure himself he was not really dreaming. "What do I care about them all, Kate?" he would say, "now that I've got you? No, now that you've given yourself to me—that's what I'll say—what do I care what they do?"

But she would look up, sudden with apprehension: "But, don't you think I care? Jim, let's leave this country soon, soon."

Laramie laughed indulgently: "Somebody'll have to leave it pretty soon—that's certain."

A rude knock at the door broke into his words. Kate threw her hands against his breast. She stared at him thunderstruck, and sprang from the sofa like a deer, looking still at him with wide-open eyes and then glancing apprehensively toward the door.

Laramie sat laughing silently at her getaway as he called it, yet he was not undisturbed.

Nothing, in the circumstances, could have been less welcome than any sort of an intrusion. But a knock at the door, almost violent, and coming three times, stirred even Laramie's temper.

The door was not locked. Laramie rose, his fingers resting on the butt of his revolver, and stepping lightly into the dining-room, turned down the lamp. He stood in the shadow and beckoned Kate to him. His face indicated no alarm.

"This may be something, or it may be nothing. You step into the kitchen. I'll go to the door."

She clung to him, really terror-stricken, begging him not to go. As he tried to quiet her fears the heavy knock shook the flimsy door the second time. Kate, declaring she would go, would not be denied. Laramie told her exactly what to do.

She reached the door on tiptoe and stood to the right of it. The key was in the lock. Kate, reaching out one hand, turned the key. With the door thus locked and standing close against the wall she called out to know who was there. Laramie had followed behind her. He stepped to where he could look from behind the window shade out on the porch. He turned to Kate just as an answer came from outside, and signed to her to open. Standing where she was, Kate turned the key swiftly back in the lock and threw the door wide open.

Stooping slightly forward to bring his hat under the opening, and looking carefully about him, her father walked heavily into the room.

Laramie had disappeared. Kate, dumb, stood still. Barb closed the door behind him, walked to the table, put down his hat, and turned to Kate. "Well?" he began, snapping the word in his usual manner, his stupefied daughter struggling with her astonishment. "You don't act terrible glad to see me."

Kate caught her breath. "I was so surprised," she stammered.

"What are you staying in town so long for?" demanded Barb. His voice had lost nothing of its husky heaviness.

She answered with a question: "Where else have I to stay, father? I've been waiting for money to get East with and it hasn't come yet."

"What do you want to go East for?"

"I've nowhere else to go."

"Why don't you come home?"

"Because you told me to leave."

He sat slowly down on a chair near the table and with the care of a burdened man.

"Well," he said, "you mustn't take things too quick from me nowadays." She made no answer. "I've had a good deal of money trouble lately," he went on, "everything going against me." He spoke moodily and his huge frame lost in the bulk of his big storm coat overran almost pathetically the slender chair in which he tried to sit. His spirit seemed broken. "I reckon," he added, taking his hat from the table and fingering it slowly, "you'd better come along back."

She was sorry for him. She told him how much she wished he would give up trying to carry his big load, and she urged him to take a small ranch and keep out of debt. He laid his hat down again. He told her he didn't see how he could let it go, but they would talk it over when she got home.

This was the point of his errand that she dreaded to meet, and putting it as inoffensively as possible she tried to parry: "I think," she ventured, "now that I've got some clothes ready and got started, I'd better go East for awhile anyway."

"No," his ponderous teeth clicked. "You'd better wait till fall. I might go along. Tonight I'll take you out home. Put on your things and we'll get started."

She did not want to refuse. She knew she could not consent. She knew that Laramie in the shadow, as well as her father in the light, was waiting for her answer. "Father," she said at once, "I can't go tonight."

"Why not?" was the husky demand.

"Belle is sick in bed," pleaded Kate.

"Is that the only reason?"

She saw he was bound to wring more from her. "No," she answered, "it isn't, father."

"What else?"

"I'm afraid——" she hesitated, and then spoke out: "I can't come back—not just as I was, anyway."

"Why not?"

"It's too late, father."

"What do you mean?" he asked.

"When I come back from the East,'" she spoke slowly, but collectedly, "I expect to go into a new home."

"Where?"

"In the Falling Wall."

For a moment he did not speak, only looked at her fixedly: "What I've heard's so, then?" he said, after a pause.

"What have you heard?"

"The story is you're going to marry Jim Laramie."

Kate, in turn, stood silently regarding her father, and as if she knew she must face it out.

"Is that so?" he demanded harshly.

She burst into tears, but through her tears the two men heard her answer: "Yes, father."

Barb picked up his hat without wincing: "I guess that ends things 'tween you and me." He started uncertainly for the door.

"Father!" Kate protested, taking a quick step after him as he passed out. "You don't do him justice. You don't know him."

But, slamming the door shut behind him, he cut off her words. If they reached his ears he gave them no heed.

By a happy chance, on the night of Laramie's great hour, Sawdy and Lefever returned from Medicine Bend. It was late when they arrived—into the early morning hours, in fact, and at the Mountain House the bar was not only closed but securely closed—barricaded against just such marauders. Even the night clerk had gone to bed. But this was less of an embarrassment, for the two adventurers, turning on the lights, took his pass keys from the drawer, and, opening the doors of one room after another in the face of a variety of protests, kept on till they found satisfactory quarters that "seemed" unoccupied—quarters in which, at least, the beds were unoccupied.

The hardy scouts slept late. They breakfasted late, in what Sawdy called the hotel "ornery," and while they were reducing the visible supply of ham and eggs, Tenison walked in on them to ask about complaints made at the office by indignant guests whose privacy had been invaded during the night. Rebuffed on this subject, all knowledge being disclaimed, Tenison was called on for the story of events since the two had been away, and of these Laramie's escape from the canyon came first. Tenison reported further, in confidence, Laramie's success with Kate. Had the news provided every man in the Falling Wall with a brand-new wife, it could not have been more to the humor of Sawdy and Lefever.

Sawdy rose and stretched himself from the waist down to make sure his legs touched the floor: "I've got to have a good cigar on that," he declared. "Take away, Mabel." He nodded courteously to the waitress. "Harry, we had the dustiest trip I ever seen in my life," he added, as with his companions he left the table. "The old Ogallala trail wasn't a marker to it. Why, the dust was a mile deep. My tonsils are plumb full of dandruff yet."

Not every one in Sleepy Cat was so quick to credit the news that Kate Doubleday was going to marry Jim Laramie. The cattlemen sympathizers looked grumpy, when approached on the subject. They preferred not to talk, but if taunted would retort with an intimating oath: "That show ain't over yet."

"Jim Laramie acts as if it was, anyway," grumbled Belle, when the butcher told her what they were saying. In fact, all of Laramie's intimates were out of patience with him when he announced he was going to rebuild the cabin on his Falling Wall ranch and live there.

"Wait till this cattle fight is over," they would urge.

"It is over," he would retort. And, heedless of their protests, he spent his time getting his building materials together.

"What do you want me to do?" he demanded, stirred at length by Belle's remonstrances against going back to the Falling Wall. "I've got to live somewhere. Danger? Why, yes, maybe. But I can't keep dying every day on that account. Here in town a man was run over just the other day by a railroad train."

Kate said little either way. She heard all that Belle could urge and held in her heart all the men said. But when Jim asked her what she wanted to do she told him, simply, whatever he wanted to do. Then Belle would call her a ninny, and Laramie would kiss her, and Belle in disgust would disappear.

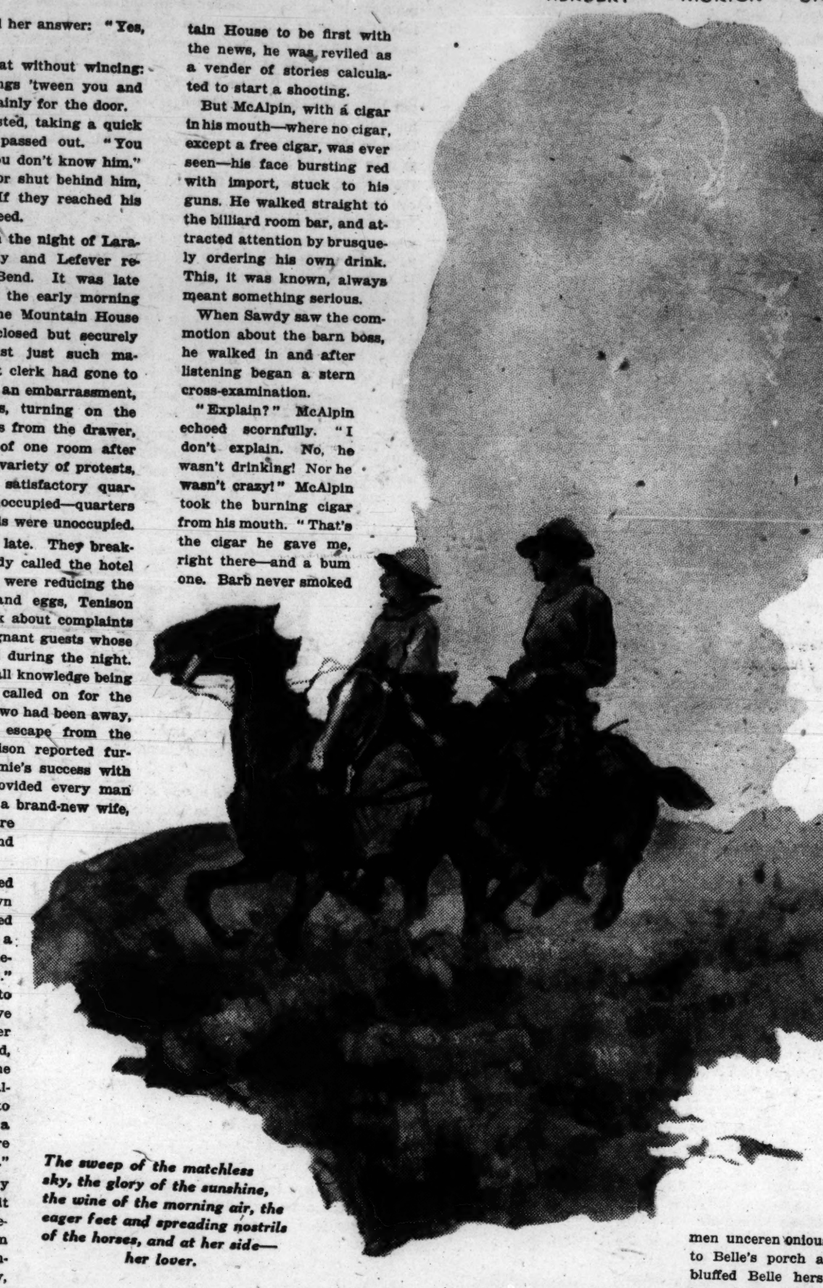
There came one morning the crowning sensation in the suspense of the situation. Barb Doubleday drove into town in the buckboard, headed his team into Kitchen's barn to put up and gave McAlpin a cigar.

An earthquake, where one had never been known, could not have stirred the town more. When McAlpin ran up street to the Mountain House to be first with the news, he was reviled as a vender of stories calculated to start a shooting.

But McAlpin, with a cigar in his mouth—where no cigar, except a free cigar, was ever seen—his face bursting red with import, stuck to his guns. He walked straight to the billiard room bar, and attracted attention by brusquely ordering his own drink. This, it was known, always meant something serious.

When Sawdy saw the commotion about the barn boss, he walked in and after listening began a stern cross-examination.

"Explain?" McAlpin echoed scornfully. "I don't explain. No, he wasn't drinking! Nor he wasn't crazy!" McAlpin took the burning cigar from his mouth. "That's the cigar he gave me, right there—and a bum one. Barb never smoked



The sweep of the matchless sky, the glory of the sunshine, the wine of the morning air, the eager feet and spreading nostrils of the horses, and at her side—her lover.

a good one in his life—you know that, Henry? I don't explain—I drink. Hold on!" he exclaimed, as he emptied his glass with a single gulp. He was looking across the street and pointing. "Who's that over there comin' out of the lumber yard with Barb Doubleday right now—blanked if it ain't! It's Jim Laramie, that's who it is."

Doubleday had, in fact, run into Laramie in the lumber yards. With nothing more than a greeting, he opened his mind: "I want a talk with you, Jim," he said bluntly. "Where's Kate?"

Not even the freedom of the bar fully established could hold McAlpin after he had seen Laramie and Doubleday walk out of the lumber yard and start down Main street together. McAlpin had the reputation of having missed no important shooting in Sleepy Cat for years. He had been witness in more than one inquest and did not mean to imperil his importance by slacking now.

As he hastened out to trail the long-day bitter enemies, he was framing in his mind the preliminary answers for the coroner. He would be compelled to testify, he felt, that the dead man had showed no sign of intoxication or excitement when he drove his team into the barn—for in the circumstances the barn boss already figured Barb as the inevitable victim.

Thus ruminating, he trailed the unsuspecting pair as far as Belle's. At Belle's without sign of heated argument, they knocked and entered the cottage together. This left McAlpin across the street with nobody but the butcher to talk to, while he listened intently for the first shot.

Lefever was bolder. He followed the two men unceremoniously to Belle's porch and bluffed Belle herself into admitting him to the living room. Laramie had gone into the back part of the house to hunt up Kate; Barb, alone, sat in the rocking chair, chewing an unlighted cigar.

Lefever greeted the big cattleman effusively; Barb's response was cold. He looked Lefever over critically: "What 'you doing?" he asked, without warm interest in any possible answer.

"Buying a relinquishment now and again, Barb."

"Railroad man, eh?" muttered Barb, irrelevantly.

"No, no. I've quit that game; I've got a claim up near you. I'm going to try to live the life of a small but dishonest rancher, Barb."

"You ought to do well at that, eh?"

"Why, yes and no. But I'm thinking, if I can't figure out the game, some of my neighbors can help me catch on—what?"

Barb's retort—if he had one—to Lefever's continued laugh, was cut off by Laramie's entrance with Kate. John saw that he was de trop, that it was a family conference, and only extracting from Laramie a promise to see him about nothing whatever, before leaving town, he made what he termed a graceful get-away.

Kate and Laramie faced her father. Belle, too, was for going out. Doubleday stopped her: "No secrets, Belle; stay if you want to."

All sat down. Kate was for a chair, but Laramie domineering, made her sit with him on the sofa. Barb spoke first: "This Falling Wall fight is off," he began briefly. "Anyway, I quit on it. I've got to, Jim. The settlers there are in to stay," declared Barb philosophically. "They've got to be reco'nized." The settlers, in this instance, meant Jim Laramie, since practically every one else had been driven or frightened out. But all understood what was intended; for if the fighting ceased the park would fill up.

"Since yesterday," Doubleday went on, "I've found out something else." He was speaking directly to Laramie. "That man Stone," he exclaimed, "has been robbing me."

The old man paused. No one made any comment. Abe Hawk had long ago told Laramie as much. "He's been misbranding on me—him and that rascally Van Horn have been selling my steers to the railroad camps on the Reservation. I've got the evidence from some Indians that came over yesterday with the hides. Last night," continued the victim, coolly, "I fired Stone. He went right over to Van Horn's. I told him that's where he belongs. I'm through with 'em both."

"Why don't you have 'em arrested?" demanded Belle.

"I might yet," muttered Barb vaguely.

Laramie held his peace; but even Kate realized that would never do. "Jim and me has had our differences," added Barb, "but they're ended. If you two get married——"

"There ain't goin' to be any 'if,' Barb," interposed Laramie, "there's just going to be 'married,' and married right off."

"Well, that's for you and the girl to say; but when you say it, you've got to have a house to live in. I met Jim," added her father, speaking now to Kate, "over in the lumber yard this morning. When you get your house up, turn the bill in to me.

Kate's kisses confused and stopped her father. Belle made ready a good dinner.

The four ate together. Belle was excited, Kate happy, and Laramie content. But for the old man it was somehow hard to fit in. Having had his say, he relapsed into grim silence and taciturn responses. Even his presence would have repressed Belle but for Kate's happy laugh. She looked at her father, talked to him, thought of him, studied him, and, throwing off lingering doubts—for she never felt she quite knew her father—enjoyed him, eating as he was in peace with her husband-to-be.

When Laramie's cigars were lighted after the dinner, Barb seemed to feel more at his ease. He told stories of his old railroad days and laughed when Kate and Belle and Laramie laughed. Later his daughter and his new son-in-law walked up street with him. They went with him on his errands and then to the barn. McAlpin, personally, hitched up the ponies, both in compliment to a new customer and to hear every word that passed in the talk.

"Damme," he muttered to the hostler in the harness room, "y' can't get around old Barb. Look at him. What do I mean? Don't he fight Laramie five years 'n' get licked? Now he turns him into his son-in-law and gets the Falling Wall range anyway—can y' beat it? Coming right along, sir!" he shouted, as Barb in the gangway bellowed for more speed. And with a flutter of activity, real and feigned, McAlpin and his helper fastened the traces.

When ready, the wiry team and the long narrow buckboard looked small for Barb, who cautiously clambered into the seat and gingerly distributed his bulk upon it. Laramie had taken the reins from McAlpin; he passed them to Barb, who, as he squared himself so as not to fall off his slender perch, was huskily demanding when Laramie and Kate would be out. At the last minute, Kate insisted on, and was given, a good-by kiss. She and Jim promised to go out next day. Barb spoke to the horses. They jumped half-way out of the barn. Kate, with Laramie following, hurried forward to see her father drive away.

The broad back, topped by the powerful shoulders and neck, and the big hat bobbing up and down with the spring of the buckboard, the little team plunging at their bits, and her father heedless of their antics—all this was a familiar sight, but never had it been so pleasing.

The setting sun touched with gold the thin cloud of dust that rose from the wheels. It was the close of a beautiful day, and it had been next to the happiest in her life, Kate thought, while she stood, watching and thinking. The ponies reaching a turn in the road dashed ahead and her father disappeared.

In the morning, breakfasting together early, Sawdy and Lefever with Laramie walked in the bright sunshine down to Kitchen's barn to saddle up and ride across the river to look at some horses. Laramie stopped at Belle's to see whether he could get Kate to go over with them; and while Sawdy went on to the barn, Lefever waited at Belle's gate to find out whether Kate was going.

When Laramie came to the door after a few moments to say that Kate would go, Lefever stood outside the gate looking intently into the north.

"Somebody from the Crazy Woman," he observed, as Laramie joined him, "must have an urgent call in town this morning."

He was watching what appeared to be little more than a speck on the northern horizon, but even at that distance it was moving fast. Lefever walked over to Kitchen's to order the fourth horse. Rejoining Laramie he found him still at the gate. And when Kate, fresh as the morning, appeared, the two men, though talking of indifferent things, had their eyes fixed on a horseman galloping at breakneck speed down the long slope of the northern divide. He was now less than a mile away and the dust thrown from his horse's hoofs rose evenly behind him in the stillness of the sunshine. He must pass the barn to reach town. Kate asked a question.

"It may be one of your father's horses," mused Lefever aloud, "and it rides something like old Bill Bradley."

Still pushing his speed to the limit and cutting in reckless fashion the turns of the open road, the rider drew rapidly nearer. They could see he was hatless and coatless and urging his horse. "It's Bradley," declared Lefever decisively. Laramie said nothing. Kate instinctively drew closer to him. The horseman disappeared at that moment behind the railroad icing plant. The next, he whirled with a sharp clatter of hoofs into Main street, and, dashing past Carpy's, pulled his foaming horse to its haunches in front of Kitchen's barn.

McAlpin and Sawdy were leading the four saddle ponies to the stable door. The group at Belle's gate could not hear what Bradley shouted; but they saw McAlpin start. Sawdy, too, spoke quickly, and pointed, with his words, across the way. Bradley jerked his panting horse around and spurred toward Belle's gate.

The old man, his thin hair flying, and his bloodshot eyes bulging, reined up before Laramie with his arm out, to speak. But the ride and the excitement had been too much. His features worked convulsively, but he could not utter a word.

"For God's sake, Bill," cried Lefever, catching his arm and jerking him. "What's up?"

Bradley, his eyes glued on Laramie, got back his voice: "It's Barb, Jim!" he shouted wildly. "Tom Stone shot him this morning!"

Kate's sharp cry rang in Laramie's ears. He caught her in his arm. Belle ran out, only adding to the confusion with her scream. Lefever, joined now by Sawdy and McAlpin, who had hurried over, got Bradley off his horse, into a chair on the porch, refreshed him with water, and steadied his whisky-wrecked nerves with whisky.

Stone and Van Horn came over from Van Horn's early, Bradley told his hearers brokenly. They asked for Barb and he was down at the creek. Barb had sent Bradley about a mile below the house to repair a small break in the irrigation ditch and had ridden down to show him what he wanted done. After giving instructions, he had started back for the house. Before he got far, Stone and Van Horn met him. Bradley heard voices up the creek, but paid no special attention to them, and busied himself with his job. Some minutes later he heard the voices again, loud and angry. As they were close by, Bradley, shovel in hand, walked along the ditch bank to where he could see what was up.

"They'd all got off their horses," continued Bradley, "and was standin' not fur apart. I was close to the willows along the ditch. 'Fore you could say Jack Robinson, Stone and Van Horn snapped out their guns and begun to shoot. The old man was game, boys, but he didn't have no show. He managed to get his gun out, both men a-shootin' at him."

"Both!" echoed Laramie, bitterly. Sawdy swore a withering oath.

"Is my father dead?" cried Kate, in agony.

"Not yet," replied Bradley disconcertingly.

"We must get Carpy up there quick. Hunt him up, will you, John," said Laramie to Lefever.

"Hold on," interposed Bradley. "Carpy's there afore this. I met him drivin' north and he put right out for the ranch."

"Couldn't you do something while they were trying to murder father?" sobbed Kate, wringing her hands as she appealed to Bradley.

"Why, what could I do?" stared Bradley. "I didn't have no gun. Kelly and me got the wagon down and picked Barb up 'n got him to the house. He told me to put out for town and get you and Jim Laramie; he's out of his head, you see."

"Did they see you, Bradley?" interrupted Laramie.

"Never seen me, Jim."

"Did Barb hit either of them?" asked Laramie.

"Taint likely. He only got in one shot. When they seen him wrigglin' on the ground, all doubled up—you know, Jim—they jumped their horses and put across the creek."

For a moment Kate's suppressed sobs broke the silence. Laramie held her in his arm. He promised her he would get her right out to her father as soon as he could take measures for pursuit. When the other men questioned Bradley, Laramie listened. He urged Kate to go inside with Belle, but she begged to stay: "I won't cry, Jim," she pleaded in a whisper. "I must stay. Let me stay."

He placed her in a chair. Belle, schooled in silence during such moments, stood beside her. Laramie, placing himself near Kate, half sat on the edge of the porch floor, one foot resting on the ground and the other curled under. Lefever, facing him, sat on the end of the porch steps, while Sawdy stood with the horses. McAlpin had hurried over to the barn to get Kitchen and telephone Tenison to come down.

"There's two ways they can get out," said Laramie, casting up the situation with his companions. "One is across the Falling Wall and over the Reservation. If they've gone that way they've got a start; but they're easy to trail. The other way would be to strike east or west for the railroad. That's the big gamble—it's the easiest to play and the worst if they lose. They may separate."

"My Godfred, Jim, don't let 'em get away," exclaimed Belle, fearfully.

"And there's one more angle," remarked Laramie. "They may show up right here and try to bluff it out."

Sawdy shook his head against that idea. Lefever supported him. Laramie did not urge the view. "Van Horn plays cards different from everybody else," was all he said. Kitchen drove up and Tenison was in the buggy with him.

What help might be had from the sheriff's office was put in Tenison's hands to manage. The railroad men were warned across the division. Outgoing train crews were notified and enginemen told what to do, if stopped. Sawdy and Lefever were directed to strike for the Falling Wall and watch the Reservation trails, while Laramie, with Kate, was to ride straight to the ranch and pick up the trail across the creek.

The news of the shooting of Barb Doubleday filled the corners of Main street with little knots of men eager to hear all that was known and to be first to catch what might come. Women sometimes stopped to listen and men making ready to ride the northern trails supplied clattering in the streets for every moment and added to the tense scene. The chances for the escape of Van Horn and Stone were canvassed among critics and listeners, and with almost as much insight as they had been cast up in the war council at Belle's. The men that might be expected to give battle if they encountered the fugitives were watched for, and every time they rode past, the maneuvering and fighting abilities of each were speculated on with surprising accuracy; records were recalled and inferences drawn as to the possibilities now ahead.

The picture of the busy street, constantly renewed and dissolved, changed fast. Lefever and Sawdy, together, were the first to clear for their long ride. Kitchen, strapping on for the first time in years a well-cared for Colt's revolver, got fresh ammunition, and, throwing himself on a good horse, rode for where he had sworn he would never ap-

Fashions Beauty Contests

FOR VACATION MORNING, NOON, AND NIGHT

by CORINNE LOWE

NEW YORK—[Special Correspondence.]—There are a great many women in this world who dress like "What Nots." You remember, of course, that obsolete piece of furniture on which you put everything from the dog's new collar to the hand painted sea shell? Consequently they may spend hundreds of dollars a year on their clothes and yet never be well dressed. For they lack absolutely the sense of what goes with that.

My own pathway is strewn with such tragic failures in the dress world. I have an acquaintance who wore all through the winter an expensive sports hat of purple with a wreath of wool flowers. It was intended for nothing more formal than a sweater and shirt; yet she practiced it even with a charming little restaurant frock of black crepe de chine.

She is to be compared only to another acquaintance of mine who started off to a roof garden the other night in a charming black satin frock completed by a mannish sailor of rough straw, with a band of jade georgette. And both of them find their only parallel in the man who would attempt tan shoes with an evening suit.

Of course, the people who guess wrong like that always have some ready retort. For example, my friend who combined the purple sports hat with the black restaurant frock came back at once with this: "But I spent $25 on that hat, and I couldn't afford to get another." What you could not persuade her was that if she had had real dress common sense she wouldn't have invested all her millinery allowance in a single hat of such restricted purpose. If she had been able to buy only one bonnet a winter then she should have seen to it that this single bonnet would conform to several occasions. I shall admit that these versatile hats require you to be handy with the lasso and trigger, but you can bring down a specimen if you work long enough.

In summer the "what goes with" instinct is particularly essential. Now is the time to concentrate on the accessories, and let the necessities take care of themselves. It is, indeed, far better to select only three frocks for your vacation days, and have those frocks accompanied by the right kind of hat, shoes, stockings, and gloves, than to command a whole fleet of frocks unmanned by the "little things" of a wardrobe.

First of all, there are hats. One bonnet does not make a summer any more than one swallow does. During the hot weather months I refuse to believe that any woman can live on a millinery card restricting her diet to a single model. First of all, she must possess a little tailored hat to wear with suit or street frock. Second, she must have a sports hat—no matter how inexpensive it is, this item is a sine qua non. Third, the afternoon frock of the formal function requires a dressy concoction of some kind—trimmed with lace or with glycerined ostrich or paradise; this same will coincide with the one which we don for the summer dinner at city hotel or country club. And, fourth, to carry out the summery vision of organdies and handkerchief linens, there should be a wide brimmed creation of Leghorn, of organdy, or horse hair, or of georgette.

I am showing at the right of this page two different kinds of sports hats, both representing a well defined taste in such accessories. The farthest one is a white crepe de chine hat with the rolled and cuffed brim, noted so often nowadays not only in the sports hat but in the model for street wear. In fact, this same shape carried out in black crepe de chine and trimmed with the same fluted rosette of ribbon would be perfectly correct with the crepe de chine frock or suit in which we make our trips to town from the nearby resort. The crepe de chine hat is, in fact, worn for both street and sports, and often it is trimmed only by beads or by ribbons, or perhaps just by some dashing veil.

This hat accompanies a smart white serge suit adapted from one of beige gabardine, designed by Renee. The significant ornamentation consists of the rosettes of ribbon which have characterized so many of the French designer's creations of this year. These motifs band the coat and the sleeves, and a twisted cord of white silk supplies the girdle.

To say that millinery is more felt than seen this summer is to yield to a punning temptation that is almost inevitable. The world is just full of little felt hats, so plain that they are hardly to be noticed. Many of these bonnets are used exclusively for sports wear. Of this exclusive type the hat second from the right is a good example. It is a broad brimmed one of white, trimmed with black and white feathers, and it is echoed in dozens of felt hats of various shapes that elect pheasant or other plumage for trimming. Again, some of these felt sports hats are embroidered or trimmed with ribbon. And a third variation has no ornamentation of any kind. It depends solely upon line for its chic.

But the felt hat is not confined to sports wear. There are numerous ones designed for street or even more formal wear. For example, a charming gray one that I saw recently allowed a cluster of pansies to appear at the right side of its upturned brim. This hat was destined to travel with a traveling costume of gray wool jersey trimmed with lavender.

But to go back to the page. The sports hat of white felt shown is accompanied by one of the smart flannel combinations now so much in vogue. Lately there has been an outburst of these costumes in black and white. One finds, for example, the black flannel coat accompanying a white flannel skirt, taking its vow of allegiance to the latter by narrow bindings of white flannel.

THEY say a love of a costume makes a love game, but the risk seems worth taking to the lady second from the right. Here a black flannel coat trimmed with white flannel abets a plaited skirt of striped black and white flannel, and is completed by a white felt sports hat. At the right a white serge suit is trimmed with ribbon motifs repeated again on the white felt hat. In the center one of the self-starting crepe de chines is elected for the dance frock—here carried out in cherry color. Next, a mauve organdy is banded with moire ribbon of deeper tone. Last, a blue and white checked gingham trimmed with frilled white linen fastens smartly at the side with one white crochet button.

And this brings us, by the way, to another summer vagary. Among the smart imported suits nothing is more stunning than the black tailormade from Jenny, with its bindings of white to electrify a simple hip length, notch collar jacket, with but one button to disturb the vista of white piquet waistcoat worn with the costume. This suit, a feature of the Longchamps races, has been duplicated many times on this side. It is recalled to memory, too, by a suit from Charlotte—a navy blue model, the coat of which is bound narrowly in vivid red.

The sports costume illustrated here provides its long coat with revers of white flannel and trims the cuffs of its three-quarter sleeves with the black and white striped material of the plaited skirt. With this the proper shirtwaist selection is the simple plaited one of white china silk, with its boyish collar relieved by narrow string tie of black. The shoes shown are the white buckskins trimmed with black, which represent a type always correct for sports wear.

Among the numerous dance frocks of the summer nothing is more universally appealing than the crepe de chine one, trimmed mostly with crepe de chine. That we are all more or less in bondage to Vionnet is proved by the center model—a dance frock of cherry color crepe de chine, with a long waisted bodice, the draped sash of which is interpolated by field flowers—absolutely the only interruption to this long crepe de chine burst of eloquence. The diversification of the popular Florentine neckline by a picoted band tied on the left shoulder is interesting and softens what too often proves a trying line. As for the panels plaited at the top and turned under to form loops, these are significant of one of the deepest moods of this summer. On all types of frocks—cottons and silks and linens—one is likely to find these sections. Sometimes, by the way, they start at irregular intervals on the corsage, and are extended to the hem of the skirt, where they fold under.

Organdy is become the chief wall motto of any summer. No matter what else you omit, don't omit one frock of this fabric. We show today a simple model of mauve organdy trimmed with a deeper tone of moire ribbon.

With this model on the page is worn a garden party hat of lavender georgette banded in black satin, to which are attached small silver balls, and trimmed with a cluster of silver apples decked with black leaves.

The last costume on the page is the morning frock—this of blue and white checked gingham, in a style echoing the coat dress. Collar and cuffs are of frilled white linen, and the frock fastens at the side with one white crocheted button. Two rows of white piping appear at the left side.

1024—Woman's dress. Sizes 36 to 46 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4¼ yards of 36 inch material and 2 yards of binding.

1020—Girl's dress. Sizes 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. Size 8 requires 2⅞ yards of 36 inch material and 8 yards of ruffling.

1095—Woman's porch dress. Sizes 16 years and 36 to 42 bust measure. Size 36 requires 2¾ yards of 36 or 40 inch material for overdress and 1¾ yards of 36 inch material and 2 yards ruffling for guimpe.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

THIS house dress, No. 1024, will make up beautifully in a good quality of percale or Indian head cotton. The dress opens in the front and the hems should be laid the entire length. They can then be lapped their width and stitched together to within eleven inches of the waist line, or they can be left open and buttoned the entire length. This last is preferable, for the ironing will be so much easier and better done. Use shank pearl buttons, working eyelets down the left front for the buttons, and the buttonholes on the right side. Remove the buttons when the dress is to be laundered.

The box plaits must be laid so the under side is smooth, and stitched together from the top to the hip line. The dress is set on to a yoke, front and back. This could be of a plain color, and the dress of a figured or dotted material, the plain color matching the dot or figure.

Ric rac is a pretty finish for this sort of a dress. Set it under the edge of the yoke and use it as a finish for the cuffs, pocket tops, and collar.

No. 1020 has a tunic similar to a grown woman's dress—the children's styles closely resembling those of their elders in many respects. This tunic is set on over a one piece, gathered skirt. If a thin material is used for the dress it will be pretty to cut slashes in the bottom of the tunic and finishing them with tiny ruffling.

The waist fastens down the back and can be finished with or without the collar. For a dressy dress organdie or taffeta would be appropriate; gingham or chambray would be ideal for ordinary afternoon wear.

Either shrink any wash material, setting the color at the same time, or allow hems and seams wide enough to be let out if necessary after laundering, for wash materials do shrink, no matter what is said to the contrary.

No. 1095 is a jumper or porch dress, and is one of the most popular models just now. It doesn't take much cloth and is not difficult to make. Any preferred material, from gingham to the more expensive silks, will be appropriate.

One desirable feature of this dress is that it is worn with separate guimpes or blouses, which will not make it necessary to have the dress laundered so frequently; and one can have any number of lovely guimpes, which will make it seem as though one is wearing different dresses.

In putting the dress together, make French seams, and then around the armholes and neck use a narrow piping, covering the seam with fitted facing. This facing should be hemmed on the lower edge before basting it over the piping. It is stitched to the dress in the same seam with the piping, then the facing is turned down over the seam and caught to the dress at the seams, so it will not show any sewing down from the right side.

HER BROTHER'S BUDDY.

DURING the war in 1918, when the American lads were over there settling the big fuss, I happened to be living in Canada, and I received an unexpected letter from one of my brother's buddies in camp. As I had never met the fellow, I hesitated to answer, but considering how much letters from this side of the continent were appreciated at that time, I answered and many more followed.

The tone of his letters gave me the impression that he was of a fastidious nature, but later I changed my mind when he illustrated his imagination of me and sent it with his compliments, because it was anything but flattering. Just the same, I kept it—as a joke. Soon afterwards he was seriously wounded, and, as his letters stopped coming, I thought he was dead.

In 1920 I moved to Chicago and found employment in one of the offices at the stockyards and was given a letter one day to the head bookkeeper, whose name sounded quite familiar to me. On investigating I found him to be the same soldier I had been writing to in France, but because of self-pride I hated to approach him. I got up enough courage finally to send him the comic picture he drew of me, and asked him if he had seen any one in the office that resembled his masterpiece. There must have been a slight resemblance, because within the next two hours he was standing over my desk asking for a date that night, and two weeks later we were standing before the minister in the "little church around the corner," perhaps the starting of a bigger fuss than the one the Yanks settled over there. The Secret of Beauty

A wonderful new astringent skin treatment for removing wrinkles and skin blemishes was recently discovered in the private laboratories of Gervaise Graham, the world famous beauty specialist. This entirely new treatment—which was named the Graham Beauty Secret—tightens the loose outer skin, removes wrinkles quickly, lifts the sagging muscles back into place, removes blackheads, reduces coarse, enlarged pores, nourishes the inner skin tissues and makes the skin firm, smooth and fine texture.

Freckles – Sunburn and Tan

by Antoinette Donnelly

They're Hard to Lose; Prevent Them by Creaming Skin Before Going Out.

THERE are two kinds of freckles, summer freckles and winter freckles. The summer freckles are caused by exposure to the sun and heat of summertime and are therefore akin to tan or sunburn. The others are a permanent pigmentation of the skin. These latter are stimulated and exaggerated by exposure to sunlight.

Neither kind is particularly welcome on any fair face. Although the "old folks" used to jolly their distressed daughters along with the assurance that every freckle was worth a dollar, the information didn't please the daughters any more then than it would today.

This is an age of clear skins that must be made clearer with every precaution and remedy possible. So, when the sun shines mercilessly down upon a fair, upturned face it means there's going to be work and worry in the offing.

First Remedy Is Prevention.

Many of these light, summer freckles may be removed by the same remedies as are recommended for sunburn, while the other freckles require more active agents.

The first remedy is to prevent them as far as you can. But there are skins so fair, it must be admitted, that prevention will not entirely protect from sun and wind and subsequent freckles and burn. The prevention? Don't go unbonneted and unveiled! That is one remedy, but who wants to be bonneted and veiled in warm weather?

So the next prevention would seem better. That is to rub a little cream into the skin and then dust with powder before letting the sun's rays beam down upon it.

Lemon Juice Is Effective.

For the light summer freckles lemon juice—a fresh slice rubbed over the face at night, the juice allowed to dry on, is found sufficient in mild cases. Or equal parts of glycerin and lemon juice is an old and tried remedy. The following formula, too, is recommended for these summer freckles: Lactic acid, four ounces; glycerin, two ounces; and rosewater, one ounce.

Treat the stubborn freckles with Nunet's paste, made as follows: Oxychloride of bismuth, one dram; carbonel, one-sixth grain; peroxide of hydrogen, one dram; lanolin and vaseline, four ounces each.

If the skin is kept moist it is not apt to sunburn, though it will tan. Markedly tanned skin is not liable to burn. Therefore, to prevent sunburn where exposure is inevitable, the skin should be gradually tanned, or it should be kept moist.

For Painful Sunburn.

For the treatment of bad sunburn grease with glycerin and water or with any grease. Equal parts of lime water and linseed oil will take the sting out of burn and heal quickly. A bottle of this should be included in vacation packing. This may be rubbed into the skin as a preventive before going in swimming or starting on a motor trip.

To avoid a painful burn, don't come out of the water and sit on the beach in the sun without a shade umbrella or a robe over you.

A friend who used to suffer badly from sunburn on the links found oxide of zinc ointment rubbed on the skin was an excellent preventive.

Indiscreet Use of Bleaches.

Removing tan is a slow and tedious operation, one usually having to trust to time to restore the original whiteness, although some skins are restored with lemon juice applications. Sponging with a peroxide solution after washing the skin with an alkaline soap and warm water will cause some bleaching of the skin. Some of the preparations used contain strong solutions of corrosive sublimate, which is effective, but extremely dangerous poison and should be used only under a physician's direction.

There is no little indiscretion among women in the use of bleaches. Never use on your face a bleach in which lead or mercury is an element. Both are poisonous. The following preparation has no harmful ingredients in it and it does effective work:

Sulphocarbolate of soda, 50 grains; glycerin, 2 ounces; rosewater, 1 ounce; alcohol, 1 ounce. Apply lightly with soft sponge or cloth before retiring.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

MATRON: FAT ACCUMULATES on the muscles that are least disturbed by muscular action, which is the reason hips and waistline advertise their miserable product first. So, before the middle aged spread envelops you, lay aside the corset you depend upon for your present fair showing, and get busy with waist and hip reducing exercises, which I shall be glad to mail you for a. s. a. e.

REDUCE: REDUCING ANKLES is a far easier job than putting flesh on them. If you are a good kicker here's your chance. Kicking at an object (better be a cushion) suspended in the doorway gradually raising its height and kicking until you feel the muscles pull good and taut is good. Bicycle pedal movements are good, too. You better send the s. a. e. and I will send you printed and illustrated phamphlet with the material you need.

MARIE: NOTHING SHORT OF AN operation will change the shape of the nose perceptibly. Unless it is quite disfiguring to your beauty it is better to be content with what one has then take a chance on something which may not resemble a nose at all afterward. After all, few people can go round bragging about the possession of a perfect nose.

MARY: I WAS READING ABOUT a business girl in Honolulu who found swimming the one thing that kept her in condition to work in the tropical clime. Her early morning dip supplied her with enough energy for the day. If a girl could keep going on that exercise there—why couldn't you fight that lassitude the same way?

WORRIER: DIVERSION IS THE remedy for worry that I have found the easiest. Concentrating the attention upon some wholesome subject is a means of combating worry, worth a trial. Constant occupation of some sort—something you have to do with a definite time limit in which to do it. You can't sit down and say, "I won't worry," but if you get busy you won't have time to stop and think or talk about what is worrying you.

A. B.: FIVE FEET TWO, 20 YEARS and a girl call for about 118 pounds. Pretty nearly O. K., aren't you?

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $5 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to retain possession of.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

LAUGHTER THROUGH TEARS.

DEAR ALEEN: Do you know, dear, that I have been perfectly obsessed with thoughts of you today?

It is evening in this wonderful country and I'm here diligently writing you. What say? You don't like my way of writing diligently—sounds as if I didn't care? Oh, say, now, little sweetheart, do you know what I'd do if you were here? I'd use my big, brawny arms and hold you tight to me, and make absolutely sure you were all mine—it seems too good to be true. I simply ache to touch you. It's been quite a while since my arms have been in such use, eh, sweetheart?

"An' faith av th' Lor-rd—my Aleen is for th' laughing at me!"

Are you laughing? I'll bet its through tears, darling.

I'll be with you inside of a month, forever!

Do you remember that little homey bungalow on that hill—the one you said you'd like to have if you were ever engaged to be married? Do you, dear? And when I suddenly bent and——

Well, dear, you're going to have it, for I've got the house papers next my heart. But what's a house, anyway, if a chap didn't have you? Here's Tim O'Lean asking me about those goshfangled notes of his—so I'll close now; and, sweetheart, it's silly, of course, but you just keep on kissin' my photograph, just as you said—and you sure will get yours in return. BOB.

Bright Sayings of Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Margaret had a sister a year older who was to sing a song at an entertainment given by the Sunday school.

When the time arrived the sister was sick and could not go, so Margaret said: "I will sing the song for sister," and she did.

When she finished it the applause was great. Some one near the stage said: "You will have to sing it again."

She looked around and said: "No, I won't sing it again. I did it right the first time." E. W. H.

Emery had the whooping cough, and it had hung on for a long time. In the worst of it he had contracted a bad cold that added to his discomfort. When he had finally recovered from the effects of that, he was once more allowed to play out of doors.

One morning, as he was starting out, he commenced to sneeze, and his mother exclaimed in despair, "O, Emery, you have taken another cold," but did not keep him in the house.

He was swinging on the front gate as one of the neighbors went by, who hailed him with "Hello, Emery. How are you this morning—pretty well?"

Emery answered, "No, sir, I've got two colds and the whooping cough." K. E. M.

Mildred was playing with her baby cousin. She combed the baby's hair and exclaimed to her mother: "Look, mamma; I combed baby's hair with the seam in the middle." F. S. B.

Gertrude was busily entertaining the caller. "Now I'll read you a story," she said, taking a book.

Caller, in astonishment, "Why, can she read?"

Ruth (just learning to read): "No, she just reports what I say." C. F.

Jimmy is fond of motoring. One day we passed a dog limping along on three feet. "O, mamma," cried Jimmy, "look at that dog! He's just hitting on three cylinders." P. G.

Charles is a dear, sociable little fellow. One day he came over and stayed quite a while on the porch with me and when I became restless and tried to escape into the house he said that he could go in, too. I was far from being cordial and after he had removed his wraps, he said: "Do you know, Mary, sometimes I do go places where I'm not invited?" I have never been rude to him since. E. S.

The TRIBUNE Cook Book

By Jane Eddington.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

BRAISING AND GLAZING.

At least one fine recipe, that for glazed onions, also one not well known, and as far as I know not in print anywhere—I have looked for long for such—is given below. But the main idea of this writing is to show how to cook a nice hot dinner, and not heat up the smallest kitchen to any great extent. And yet more specifically an attempt is made to tell how to cook it without the modern helps in the way of the valuable fireless cooker and the unique pressure cooker. In our modern small kitchens, with next to no storage space often, the problem is how to find room for these modern aids to comfortable cooking when they are not at work.

Braising is roasting with the least fire. A brazier is simply a heater and may be as simple as a pan of coals or as elaborate as those wonderful things of copper and brass which come out of Russia, things that look more as though designed for gallons of milk than for heating a room, also things now sought by household decorators as a part of the ornamental fireplace equipment. It is worth noting that household utensils designed for the simplest services sometimes get into fine company, and deserve to.

The Kettle to Use.

The iron kettle with the heavy cover, or the aluminum kettle if it have a heavy cover, called a Dutch oven, may be the brazier and also the glazer for our modern simple service. In other words, it is the pot roasting kettle. We can use the same kettle for a stew or for baking beans—perhaps in a hole in the ground—but for summer cooking which will neither heat the kitchen nor ourselves, as will an oven with a full head of heat, this is the supremely valuable piece of equipment.

See what we can do! We can pot roast a chicken in it, whole or in pieces. We may cook in it a shoulder of lamb, boned and rolled, cooked on a bed of vegetables, furnishing us with an excellent meat for summer dinner, if prepared and cooked with care. A square of brisket bacon cooked with similar vegetables furnishes us with a fat that makes the most palatable of sandwich fillings, especially for dark breads.

The Meatless Dinner.

But turning to the vegetables. Tomatoes baked in the pot roasting kettle in a little fat are quite delicious—of course, they must not be burned and this means the least of fires under the kettle. We can have Franconia potatoes without any meat; these keep hot as well, and are so meatlike in flavor that with some green vegetables they may make a fine meatless dinner for a hot day.

But what I am specializing on here is glazed onions. Not since I had glazed onions in Italy have I discovered a way so simple, or one which will so nearly reproduce those I saw to be so popular in Milan, as those described below.

We have not the tiny flat onions that make the best showing, pretty enough for a picture, when glazed, but if we choose the smallest of the Texas Bermudas we can get attractive results.

Glazed Onions.

Choose onions of uniform size, allowing two or three per person. Peel and drop these into boiling water for five minutes and then rinse in cold water. Have in the pot one scant tablespoon of fat for enough onions to cover the entire bottom. Cook in this fat, gently, a little chopped sweet pepper and a little lemon peel, fresh or dried. Some fresh celery—a tablespoon or so—can be used, but here is a place to use dried celery tops which should be saved when celery is in season and not so expensive by a great deal, and rare, as in summer.

Add a teaspoon or two of sugar or sugar to taste, to help in the browning. This may be dispensed with, as onions contain a substance which will caramalize. Put into the hot fat the blanched onions, stir them around so that they will be covered with the seasoned fat, then cover kettle and turn fire to low point—never run any risk of burning the vegetables, but watch to see that cooking is going on—and after fifteen minutes stir the onions, turning them so that they will brown on what has been the top side.

When the onions are nearly soft sprinkle lightly with salt and stir. Onions may be dried to paper on the outside with too much fire. The blanching makes them wetter than just peeled onions would be and helps to prevent the drying out. The fat over the wet onions also helps. Almost any fat can be used, but tried out suet is perhaps best. Butter browns or burns at too low a temperature. Salt pork fat is good, especially with plenty of seasonings.

Browned Potatoes.

Choose small new potatoes, blanch them in the same way as the onions are blanched, and cook in the same way as the onions, but no seasonings need be added to the fat, nor any sugar. Some potatoes are delicious so prepared, without the preliminary blanching, but for sure success this is needed. They will cook in a shorter time if first blanched, and are likely to take the seasonings of salt better.

If they should dry up too much, and be hard inside so as to seem uncooked, turn off the fire and let them stand in the covered pot for ten or fifteen minutes. They will keep hot a long time even at the table, perhaps longer than potatoes cooked in any other fashion whatsoever. But they can be ruined by too early browning of the outside.

They need to be stirred and turned several times while cooking to prevent the formation of a stiff brown surface on any side. Stirring them in the fat is equal to basting them.

Summer Cooking Fats.

A veteran camper tells how, on his first camping trip, he forgot the cooking fats, a grave mistake with fish to fry and other frying pan cooking to be done. That same camper's list calls for potatoes and onions—the only vegetables to take along outside of cans.

The two recipes described above are excellent for the camper, since the frying pan can serve instead of the pot for the work, but is not so good because it rarely has so close a cover. It is also necessary in using it to cover the bottom of the pan completely, while this is not so necessary in the case of the pot.

Cooking at home during the summer can easily be quite satisfactory if done more or less on the camping basis, and a little and the best of cooking fats are quite vital to this type of cookery. With right management nothing need be fat soaked. Fat makes an extra hot medium in which to cook anything, even though no more than a thimbleful is used.

To Try Out Suet.

Note that all fats weather rapidly in summer, unless sterilized in some way. Clean or prepare the suet with this in mind, paring off any doubtful surfaces, and also remove veins. Put through food chopper—the suet should be well chilled before this—and then put into top of double boiler, and cook over gently boiling water.

If at the end of a reasonable time, say, two hours of gentle cooking, with the same amount of water almost in the bottom of the boiler as at the start, the fat has only partly dissolved, cook directly over the fire for a few minutes, stirring gently most of the time.

Strain and put in little pots, which can be closely covered. If kept in a dry cool place this is so thoroughly sterile that it will not mold in weeks, if ever. It is excellent for potting meat and fish, which is another story.

To Try out Lard.

Leaf lard needs to have the parchment like skin removed from its surface and any blood spots cut out. Then cut up with knife, not the chopper, and cook in exactly the same way as the suet was cooked, over boiling water. Since the cracklings, or what remains, are so excellent a shortening for gingerbread, corn bread, and so forth, and may be used in cooking onions and other vegetables, it is almost necessary to cook them over the fire when about all the fat that will cook out has come out over hot water.

But we want a beautifully white lard, so it is best to strain off what we can from these unfinished cracklings, and then cook them separately in the free fat that clings to them. They should be stirred constantly, and may be lightly browned if they do not come crisp readily.

Crisp cracklings, well drained of fat, are eaten by some people just as Saratoga chips are eaten. They are as dry and ungreasy as the best chips. For camping purposes the lard may be put into little aluminum utensils, with close covers such as are found in the cooking outfits for the child's playhouse.

This Simplest Cookery.

As writing cooks plot and plan how to bring home the doctrine of simple and perfect cookery of its kind, it seems to me that they are bound to come in time to an exploiting of the pot and pan as primal and primary cooking utensils. Cooking in pot and pan has, to be sure, often been deplorably bad, while being well-nigh universal in certain unsophisticated communities. With sophistication, I believe, it may be wholesome and elegant. By sophistication I mean with high and well thought out intelligent procedure.

PRACTICAL AND FANCY NEEDLEWORK : : BY CLOTILDE

CROCHETED HANDBAG.

WOMEN who love to crochet will like to make one of these hand bags, I am sure. It may be in white or any desired color. It is an unusually attractive design, and one familiar with crocheting doubtless will do it quickly. It should, of course, have a lining.

This bag, measuring nine inches each way, requires six balls of crochet cotton, size 10 ecru, and a No. 9 needle.

Directions for making are as follows:

Wind cotton ten times round the finger and into this ring put 36 sc and join ring.

2d Row: Ch 4 for a trc, trc in first st, 2 trc in next; work 3 trebles all around, putting two into every 3d st (48 in all). This will be called the circle.

3d Row: (Ch 5, sc in 5th from needle) 10 times, making 10 picots in a row, ch 10 (ch 5 make a p, sl st in lower edge of nearest p), 10 times 2 sc on circle. This forms the first ray; repeat from beginning of row 14 times (15 rays), joining each 3d p from the circle to the 3d of the previous ray with an sc, the 6th to the 6th with a dc, the 9th to the 9th with a trc; one sc on circle after last ray. Fasten off invisibly.

4th Row: Working on the last made ray, dc into the p farthest from circle (Ch 5, miss one p, dc in next) 4 times, ch 5, miss 3 of circle 12 sc on circle (ch 5, dc in 2d p) 5 times (18 dc into the loop at end of ray) 15 times, sc into the dc at the beginning of row.

5th Row: (Sc into each of 5 ch, sc in dc, ch 4 for a knot, take out needle, insert it in the last-made sc and draw through) 5 times the last knot being over the last sc of circle, 10 sc on circle sc and knot on last sc (5 sc in 5 ch, sc and knot into dc), 4 times 5 sc into 5 ch, and turn work.

6th Row: Work back with sc into both top threads, putting one into each sc, including those below the knots, but omitting one after the 5th and one before the 6th knot. (168 sc in this row.) Now put a dc into the 3d dc of the 18 to make a little loop that will be wanted later; draw the ball through loop on needle and leave this thread uncut for the present.

7th Row: This and the next 3 are short rows worked across to raise the middle to the level of the ends. Each begins with a new thread and these cut ends must be carried along invisibly under the sc of the following row. Keeping right side towards you, join with a sl st behind the 4th knot—that is the 2nd before the circle—5 sc, miss 1, 8 sc, miss 1, 6 sc, cut thread.

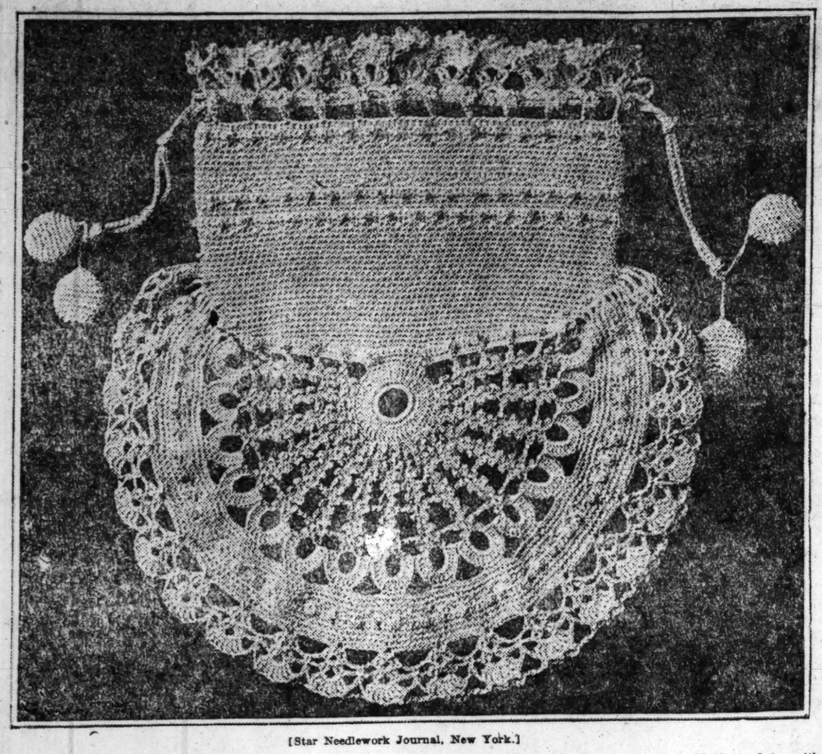
8th Row: Join on behind 3rd knot and work to the 8th knot. (31 sc.)

9th Row: Join on at 2d knot and work across to 9th. (41 sc.)

10th Row: Join on at 1st knot and work to 10th. (52 sc.)

11th Row: With the thread left at end of ray, 60 sc, ch 3, sc into 3d dc of the 18, ch 5 (4 sc into the 4 middle stitches of the 18, ch 7) 14 times, 4 sc into middle 4 of last group, ch 5.

12th Row: Sc into the loop formed of a ch 5, sc round bottom, without widening, dc in 6th row, sc and knot over 1st sc, sc across top, with knot on last sc into 1st of 3 ch; (62 in all) ch 5, sc into 5th of 5 ch of last row. Now work sc into each st right round the bottom, finishing with one into the 1st of the 5 ch; ch 5.



[Star Needlework Journal, New York.]

13th Row: Sc into the last of 5 ch below; work round like last row but without knots.

14th Row: Like last. There will be 66 sc across the top. At end ch 5.

15th Row: Like the last but with knots over 2d sc, and over the last but one of the top, and over each 4th st round the bottom. (40.)

16th Row: Turn, work: sc back; missing the 1st and last stitches.

17th Row: Turn, work like last, then ch 5, 18th Row: Sc across top widening (68) ch 5, sc round bottom, without widening.

19th Row: Sc across top widening, (70,) ch 5, sc round bottom, missing 1st and last. (162.)

20th Row: Sc in each stitch without widening, ch 5, sc in 1st sc of lower part, (ch 3, 8 sc) 20 times, ch 3, 1 sc, ch 5.

21st Row: Sc across top, widening and working a knot on the first and last sc, (ch 5, 2 dc into little loop of 3 ch, ch 2, 2 dc in same place, ch 5) 20 times, (2 dc, 2 ch, 2 dc) in last loop, ch 5.

22d Row: Sc across top, without widening, ch 6, (2 dc, ch 3, 2 dc all into loop of 3 ch of last row, ch 3, sc into 3d of 5, ch 3) 20 times, (2 dc, ch 3, 2 dc) in last hole, ch 6.

23rd Row: Sc across top without widening, ch 6, 8 trc into loop of 3 ch putting a picot of 5 ch after the 2nd, 4th, and 6th, ch 3, miss 3, sc in sc, ch 3, 20 times, 8 trc with picots in last loop, ch 6.

24th Row: Sc across top without widening. Fasten off. Make a second piece the same way, joining the picots of the last row to those of the first piece.

25th Row: Sc right round. There should be 144. Add or omit one or two to make this number.

26th-30th Row Inclusive: Plain sc all round.

31st Row: Sc with knots at each 4th st.

Three rows plain sc; next row like 31st.

Ten rows plain sc; next row like 31st.

One row of dc (144) finishes the solid part.

Beading 1st Row: (Ch 12, sc in 6th) 24 times.

2nd Row: Into each loop, 4 sc, a triple picot—that is (ch 3, sl 1st in 3rd from needles) 3 times, 14 more sc. Cut thread.

3rd Row: (Trc in 4th st past the triple picot, trc in next st, ch 3, trc in each of next 2 stitches, ch 2), 24 times, join round.

4th Row: Sl st over 2 trc, ch 4 for a trc, (8 trc with 4 picots into loop of 3 ch in last row, ch 3, sc in loop of 2 ch, ch 3), 24 times. Fasten off.

Strings: Make 2 chains of 275 st each, putting a sl st into each st. Pass them through the loops and tie together about 2 inches from the bag.

Drops: Ch 2, 9 sc in 1st ch. Working round put 2 sc in each of the 9. Work sc round 6 or 7 times according to size of button, put in the mould, narrow 2 or 3 times in next row, continue round narrowing often enough to close neatly, work a few chain stitches and attach to end of string. Knot the strings to cover the joins.

Answers to Sewing Queries.

MRS. G. S.: In the issues of April 3 and 10 there were articles about a baby's layette. You can probably get copies by sending to the circulation department, inclosing 10 cents for each paper.

MRS. F. S.: There are no patterns of the Fashion's Blue Book pictures, but any kimono waist pattern and little plaited skirt pattern should make it possible for you to get the idea shown in the Corinne Lowe picture you sent me. If you care for the picture and will send me a stamped, addressed envelope I shall be glad to return it to you.

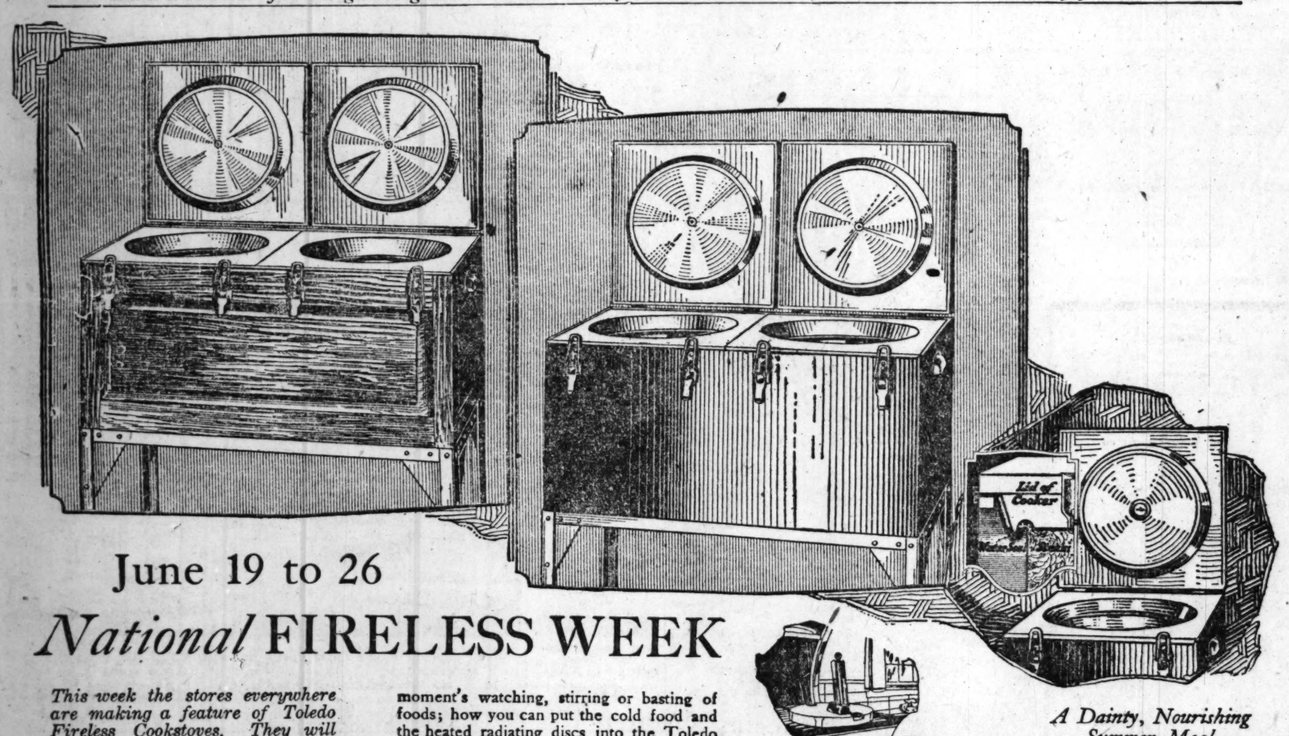
Bake and roast from beginning to end in the Toledo Fireless Cookstove, without a minute's use of your oven



June 19 to 26

National FIRELESS WEEK

This week the stores everywhere are making a feature of Toledo Fireless Cookstoves. They will have special displays and remarkable demonstrations of wonderful fireless cooking results.

Be sure to attend one of these special demonstrations. You will learn why Toledo Fireless Cookstoves have made such a name for themselves;

why they cook without having to start food on stove;

why they do such perfect browning;

why they do such quick baking of bread, cake and pie;

why they roast meat and fowl so perfectly; all without a minute's use of your oven.

The demonstration will show you how you can cook your meals without one moment's watching, stirring or basting of foods; how you can put the cold food and the heated radiating discs into the Toledo Fireless Cookstoves and then go away for hours while the food cooks.

Ask your dealer to tell you why nothing can burn or be undercooked—because you cook by temperature with thermometer-regulated heat. Ask him to show you how the Toledo Fireless Cookstove saves as much as 3 hours of your time, as high as 80% of fuel and 25% of nutritive food values. Some good dealer in nearly every town will demonstrate the Toledo Fireless Cookstoves.

Learn About the Famous "Water-Seal" Top

Get your dealer also to tell you about the special features of the Toledo Fireless Cookstove—the patented "Water-Seal" top, which conserves heat so effectively and makes possible such remarkable cooking results; the scientific insulation, the extra-heavy, seamless aluminum lining, the patented automatic steam valve. See a demonstration without fail this week.

Place discs on range to heat.

Prepare food and put into utensils.

Put hot discs and cold food into your Toledo.

Just close your Toledo. No more watching, stirring, basting and working over a hot range.

A Dainty, Nourishing Summer Meal

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

PRIMROSE YELLOW FAVORITE.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Primrose yellow chiffon—I like to say it! And I have plenty of opportunity for the moment to exercise my fancy. It is the new shade that is cropping out for trimmings everywhere. People are getting tired of black, and are trimming it with colors, the favorite being primrose yellow and in something "très légere" or very thin.

The first model shows pictorially what I am trying to say. The dress is by Jenny, and the principal thing about it are the cuffs. They are of primrose yellow chiffon, and they could serve with equal facility as muff or train. They are awfully pretty and softening to dress and hands.

I always remember something my aunt in a small town in Indiana said when I was a little girl. She remarked that she always liked to have something in her hands when she went to a party because she felt awkward if she didn't. This trimming ought to put one more at ease than a fan, because it melts into graceful, waying lines that soften one's self-conscious stiffness.

But the point to the trimming is that we are getting away from black in all of its deadness. The foundation of everything, however, is still black profound. This dress, like most others of the time, is a crêpe morocain. The wide, round neck, the low peinture, the trimming down the side of the skirt, and the back of the blouse are of the same material—a narrow band of jet. The hat is of black straw trimmed in three tiny bunches of white orange blossoms and a lace edge.

Here is an example of the seaweed trimming, described last week. All other conversation failing, the artist and I discuss whether it is like the real thing, I maintaining the negative stand. He says that he is going to show me some of the original from which the trimming is modeled, and then I shall at least doubtless see how far superior is this made out of silk ribbon in Paris. This town wouldn't like it if it was too natural.

The dress and the cape show the severe shoulder line of the day, and the cape flows into the circular effect that I keep proclaiming as the line of the future, not realizing perhaps, that we have already caught up with that future and it is in reality the line of the present. The feature of the dress is the four panels that bound the four sides of the skirt and fly as the wearer walks.

The costume is of black taffeta, and these panels are softened with the billowy seaweed garnishment. There is a softly rolled sash round the waist, which is maintained at approximately the normal latitude for waistlines. The hat is of black straw, and has a decoration in straw which is in the same manner as the seaweed trimming.

The third costume could not have been grown outside the city of Paris. The gates of the city enclose the soil and the climate necessary for its creation. But I think it would look as smart on the streets of New York or Chicago, and an American figure would carry it well.

But among the features that mark it as belonging to Paris alone is its stark simplicity that carries with it a sense of elaboration. With what has that impression of dressiness been produced? A few yards of crêpe georgette in that least dressey of colors, dark blue, and some white ruching. There is a cocarde at the belt, a split sleeve, outlined in a white ruching, which also runs along the V of the almost surplus neck.

There is a hat built high. It is of black straw, trimmed in a bow of satin cire. A pearl hatpin, large and round, rests in the middle of the crown over the forehead, and an edge of lace falls from the close brim. The woman wears gray shoes and stockings and she carries a navy blue and white sunshade.

The next frock demonstrates the original proposition that we are getting away from black. By way of nothing whatever the dress is accompanied by a sash of mauve chiffon and a bright red bag. The dress itself is of black and white chiffon, striped in a manner commonly supposed to make one look the reverse of slender. But the French never care how wide they are. This model follows the line of the day for being slender round the body and wider and somewhat full in the skirt. The white stripes are hemstitched into the black foundation. The dress is accompanied by a black felt hat, decorated in a white water lily high on the crown.

Do you remember my telling about the straw parasols, trimmed in a band of ostrich feathers? It is awfully smart now as hair ornamentation to have combs of tortoise shell with inlays of embroidery and sometimes of tiny birds' feathers and the little, short curl at the end of an ostrich feather. Wide, flat combs of ivory and white celluloid are fashionable. And bright green nightgowns.

Something Different Outside and Plenty of Beauty Within

BEAUTY WITHIN AND WITHOUT

AN old time writer declares that "every great beauty hath in it something of strangeness." There is a great deal in the saying. Certainly, anything unusual piques the interest and helps one to see beauties that might have remained unnoticed if in more conventional form.

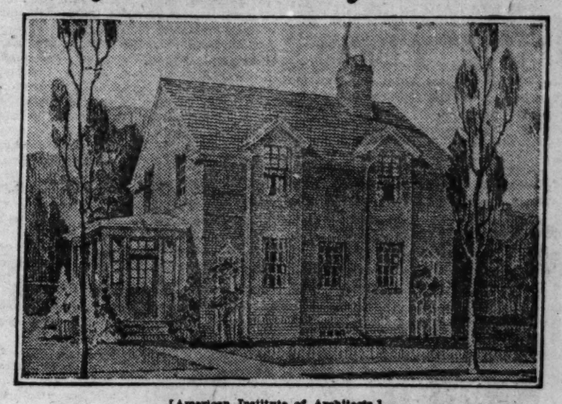
This house illustrates that truth nicely. The front windows are in a pair of buttresses, which project slightly from the wall surface, and are carried up through the roof, being covered by dormers. This arrangement is unexpected and at the same time beautiful. One looks instinctively for two chimneys, but there is only one, which, nevertheless, does not seem at all lonesome or mislaid. At the opposite end of the house from this chimney is a glassed in porch, which somehow is another unusual feature.

Evidently, one cannot tell about this house by taking a glance at it from the road. He must go in and study it.

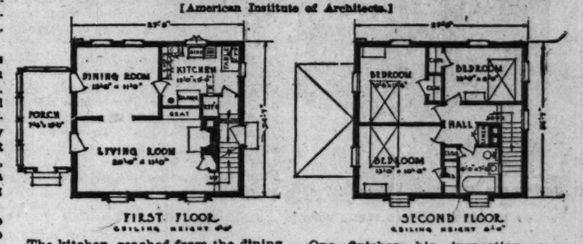
The entrance is by way of the glassed in porch, seven and a half feet by fifteen. This arrangement is a money saver, because it eliminates the cost of another portico; at the same time, this outdoor sitting room is assured a reasonable amount of privacy by being set back from the street.

Turning to the right, one enters the living room, twenty feet by eleven. The size is satisfactory, but the arrangement makes the room seem larger than it really is. The big fireplace is at the opposite end from the porch. To have a grate on the narrow wall of a room always is more nooky than to put it in the broad wall, but the arrangement is not an easy one to make. At one side is a coat closet and the stairway; at the other, a built-in seat with a hinged cover, leaving a box beneath for firewood.

The outer long wall of the room has three spacious windows, one in each buttress and one between. A glazed door gives light from the entrance porch. A wide opening opposite one buttress window leads into the dining room, thirteen feet six inches by eleven feet. This room, likewise, has a French door to the porch and two windows opening on the rear yard.



[American Institute of Architects.]



FIRST FLOOR SECOND FLOOR

The kitchen, reached from the dining room, is twelve feet by nine, with windows in two walls. This is as good a place as any to say that every room in the house has cross ventilation, a rather unusual achievement.

There is no pantry in this house, but cabinets make one unnecessary. The range is so located as to use a flue in the main chimney. The service entrance is at the side, at grade level, the stairs turning down in one direction to the basement and up the other way to the kitchen. The icebox is in an alcove of this entry way.

The sleeping quarters are ample for the average modern family. There are three bedrooms, all of good size and all with corner locations. All have closets. The bathroom is larger than usual in a small house, and has a big towel closet, while another linen closet opens from the upper hall.

One finishes his inspection convinced that the house is as comfortable within as it is beautiful without. There is a full share of beauty inside, too; and the construction is sound. The walls are of solid brick, furred and gypsum plastered inside, and the roof may have asphalt, asbestos, metal, or clay tile shingles.

The basement, if there were space to show it, is quite as well designed as the rest of the house; with a big laundry, tubs under a double window, and a good sized vegetable and fruit closet as far as possible from the heating plant.

In conclusion, note that this house is built without projections save the entrance and living porch and the decorative buttresses. Even the service entry is entirely within the wall line. This means a saving well worthy of consideration.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

By Loretta King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Loretta King, The Tribune, Chicago.

IN AN EMERGENCY.

IT'S been lonesome without Ann. She's been gone only three days, but we've missed her sadly. Dorothy especially seems to be at a loss without her, but Marion and I, by our combined efforts, have at last succeeded in bringing her back to her normal cheerful and chatty state. The first day of Ann's absence she was chill and added little to our conversation. The second day she displayed a healthier interest in her food, and showed an occasional flash of her really irrepressible good humor. Yesterday she was more like her old self, eager to talk about and get our opinion on an office incident that interested her.

It seems that one of the girls in the office where Dorothy works—Miss Downs is the girl's name—has taken a determined stand lately on what she terms are her rights, and has also been trying to incite the other girls into petty rebellion. Dorothy hadn't quite made up her mind whether the girl was to be admired for her display of spirit or censured because of her unwise tactics in the game of success.

"It's been going on for some time," Dorothy explained to us, "but nobody except the girls in the office knows that she has laid out a regular campaign, as she says, toward establishing her rights. She's pretty bright, and certainly good, in a mechanical way, about her work. So far she has merely impressed the men in charge of the office as being the most unaccommodating girl on the staff.

"The other day," Dorothy went on, "one of the men had to leave town on only a few hours' notice. He had a good deal of correspondence and other work that had to be taken care of before he left, and as Miss Downs is the stenographer regularly assigned to him the bulk of that day's work naturally fell to her. One of the other girls offered to help her with part of the work, and between them they got things pretty well cleaned up.

"Just before train time, which was also about closing time, too, this man discovered that one of his reports, which had to be forwarded to a branch house that night, hadn't yet been made out. He'd almost forgotten it in his rush to get away on time.

"He made the report out in long hand," continued Dorothy, "and then, with his hat and coat on and his bag in his hand, he came in and asked Miss Downs if she would kindly copy it for him and see that it was put in the mail that night.

"It was within a few minutes of closing time, but it would have taken her no more than fifteen minutes to copy the thing. She refused, however, saying simply that it was necessary for her to get home on time that night.

"He was frightfully annoyed, of course, but he didn't say anything to her. His expression was rather baneful, though, as he turned away to ask one of the other girls to do it for him.

"Two or three of the girls congratulated Miss Downs—seriously. One laughingly called out to her, 'That's right, Em. Don't let the creatures make a slave of you. If you don't stick up for your own rights no one else'll do it for you.'

"She may be right." Dorothy's tone expressed doubt. "But it isn't often that we're asked to do anything that requires staying overtime, even for a few minutes, so I think we might go out of our way occasionally to be accommodating, don't you?"

Marion and I both said we thought they might. Marion added, "You know me well enough, Dorothy, to know that I never let anybody take an unfair advantage of me. But you also know that I work pretty hard and sometimes have to sit down to a cold or warmed over dinner. Do you think that if I had grumbled about every bit of extra work that I was given to do, and that if I had ever refused to stay for a few minutes after closing time, in an emergency, that I'd have the job I have today? I'd still be doing the sort of routine work Miss Downs is doing, and which she's likely to go on doing for some time, too.

"Girls like Miss Downs, Dorothy," said Marion, as we were preparing to leave the table, "are usually so intent on saving themselves from any single extra effort that they pass by unnoticed the opportunities that lie in their way."

"My whole dental outfit is here, packed in our basement. I, too, want to be the medium through which the friend in deed and the friend in need may be brought together.

"I am a woman 69 years old and a cripple. I have not walked for six years from rheumatism. I am sadly in need of a pair of crutches which would help me to exercise a little. I try to save, but no matter how hard I try I can't get enough together to buy a pair; so if you know of any one who would be willing to loan me a pair I would be grateful. L. B. M."

Has any reader some old clothes or shoes no longer needed—shoes size 12½ or 13 for my little brother, 4 or 4½ for my sister, 7 or 7½ for mother, 4½ or 5 for me; clothes size 38 or 40, 42 or 44, and any kind of clothes for an 8 year old boy? Am handy and can make over. H. K."

Embarrassing Moments

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life." Address Embarrassing Moments, The Tribune, Chicago. Please write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

A Cold Obstacle.

When I was a child I was extremely self-conscious. At the age of 14 I was returning one day from the postoffice of the small town in which I lived. A long looked for letter had arrived, and I read it as I walked along. I was so engrosed in its contents that I did not realize where I was going. I was suddenly brought to a stop. Looking up from my letter I found I was astride a piece of ice which had been deposited in front of a grocery. There was a titter from onlookers, and I went hurriedly down the street. A. S. J.

Curious.

I think my most embarrassing moment occurred while I was stenographer in a large office. Another girl and I had always wanted to see the big boss' office, but as we were just stenographers we were never invited into that sanctum. One noon we hurried back to work before any one else was there and walked into the private office. We were standing there admiring the pictures and furniture when we heard some one coming down the hall. We looked at each other in dismay and just then I saw that one of the desks was pulled out from the wall and to that refuge we scurried, never giving a thought as to how we would get out. You can imagine our embarrassment when the manager walked in and seated himself at his desk. There was nothing to do but crawl out and try to explain, but the explanation was rather incoherently given, and we left the office much quicker than we had entered, flushed and perturbed. Somehow our escapade leaked out, and for days we were the object of much teasing. A. R.

Taking It All In.

I take delight in primping. One day in my room I had forgotten to close the door, and began to pose before the mirror. I fluffed my hair, powdered my nose, tilted my head in different positions to see the best angle and to practice my sweetest smiles. I heard a chuckle from the room opposite. The landlady had been taking it all in from my mirror, which is so placed that she could see me although I could not see her. L. M.

Never Saw It Before.

Having lost something like forty-seven parasols in my young life I am in a constant state of nervousness when I have an umbrella in my charge.

On a rainy day quite recently I borrowed an umbrella, returning it a little later. Several hours afterward I went into a store to do some shopping. There was an umbrella standing near me as I sat looking at silks and I can only explain my actions by saying that I was still saying in my subconscious mind "Don't forget the umbrella." I grabbed the umbrella, tucked it under my arm, and proceeded from one department to another.

Having my mind on my shopping and my umbrella I failed to notice that a woman shopper and one of the sales girls were following me. I was seated at the silk counter when they approached me. It then sort of floated through my mind that those two had been following me.

The salesgirl said, "This lady has lost her umbrella."

And when I looked at my umbrella. Heavenly day! I'd never seen it before.

I picked it up and said, "Is this your umbrella?"

"Yes, it is," she said and it didn't sound like music either.

She grabbed the umbrella and out she went.

And let it rain as it will. I never did care much about carrying an umbrella anyway. R. D.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair of which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Sunday Tribune. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Mother Manages Best.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 16 and am liked by a good many fellows, but I do not seem to get along at home with my people. I am the only one in the family who ever turns in any salary. Shall I run away or stay and suffer in agony and misery? Please advise me what to do.

"LONESOME."

Just because you are turning in your salary at home, dear, you must not think you are sat upon and abused. You have a good home, your board, and undoubtedly your clothes, and your mother probably manages much more for you on your weekly stipend than you could do yourself. If you ran away you would find, to your great sorrow, your salary at 16 would allow little else for you than board and room.

Where You Erred.

"Dear Miss Blake: I like a certain boy. I have asked him to go several places with me. He went always, and was nice, but he has never returned it. He treats me nice, and I admire him. What shall I do? U. C."

You better not invite him again, U. C. As a matter of fact, I think that is where you made your mistake, anyway. A girl should not extend invitations to boys until at least the boy has shown by invitations to her that her company is most desirable, don't you think?

Plead Other Engagements.

"Dear Miss Blake: There is a certain boy whom I dislike. He has asked me to go several places with him, but I don't know what to say, as his parents are friends of my parents. What should I do? O. G."

You could plead another engagement, couldn't you, O. G.? If you don't like the boy why should you bother going out with him?

Advice May Be Good.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 14, and I go with three girls, who are 15½. They are always trying to tell me what to do and how to do things. What shall I do? ROSIE."

If the advice is good, Rosie, why not absorb it? Just what do they tell you?

Restless Nights

due to indigestion and dyspepsia, whether in children, adults or very old people are often made quiet and peaceful by just one or two before bed time. They are pleasant to the taste, sweeten the stomach, aid digestion and prevent gassiness, heartburn and coated tongue.

They are sold in all drug stores at 60 cents a box and have been recommended by many physicians.

The Day of Corns

is over for the folks who know

They stop the pain, then end the corn completely.

Their method is Blue-jay, either liquid or plaster.

They apply it by a touch. The corn is then forgotten until it loosens and comes out.

The inventor was a chemist who studied corns for many years. The maker is a surgical dressing house of world-wide repute.

Blue-jay makes harsh methods unnecessary. It is gentle, yet nothing could be more efficient. It makes paring ridiculous, for paring is dangerous, and it never could end a corn.

Watch the effect on one corn. It will change all your ideas. It will win you as it has won millions, to this newer, better method. Do this for your own sake.

The best time is tonight.

DRY CLEANING AT HOME
by Alma Harding

ALPHABETICAL TABLE OF SPOT REMOVERS.

This is the eighth article of a series giving instructions in dry cleaning, fine laundry work, bleaching, and dyeing.

FANS.—In cleaning fans be careful not to get benzine near mother of pearl. It is better to wet-clean this type of fan. In feather fans, without tortoise shell, dip repeatedly in benzine as explained under feathers. But if the sticks are of tortoise, first discover how the feathers are stuck on. If with glue, clean with benzine; but if with a compound that would dissolve in benzine, wash in a warm castile suds. If the color fades, add coloring matter to the last rinse, or oil paints to the benzine.

Feathers.

To dry clean feathers, brush them on a slab with a soft brush continually dipped in a mild benzine soap solution. Brush from the stem to the edge of the feather. Continue until it is clean, and then rinse in two benzine rinsings. If possible to get feather starch, get that; otherwise use farina starch or talc in the last rinsing, and, as the feather is nearly dry, sprinkle again. The powder must be beaten out of the feather when it is dry, and the more it is beaten the fluffier the feather becomes.

The first thing to decide about wet or dry cleaning feathers is how they are stuck on. If the medium is soluble in benzine it is useless to try it.

If wet cleaning is decided on they may be soaked in a soap bath to which milk, alkalis, ammonia, or sodium carbonate may be added at a temperature of 100 degrees to 120 degrees. If they turn out to be cream white, a pure white will result from bluing them with methyl violet. If bleaching is desired, use peroxide of hydrogen. Agitate the feathers gently in the soap bath, rinse in warm water and steep in a solution of bisulphite of soda. Pass through a cold crude starch bath, and shake until dry. If the feathers are matted, to open up the flues, they should be passed through a cold bath of starch or farina, and when dry well shaken.

To dye feathers make a solution of oil paints soluble in alcohol or benzine.

Fly Paper Stains.

Sometimes carbon tetrachloride will remove them. Or a good paint remover will do so when all else fails. If you get at them when they are first made, they usually yield to plain water.

Fly Specks.

Moisten and scrape with the back of a knife. Use the edge of a quarter for specks on glass.

Fruit Stains.

Fruit stains on white cotton or linen are comparatively easy to remove, for, if they do not yield to boiling water poured from a height, they can be soaked in a solution of eau de Javelle, one tablespoonful to a quart of boiling water. Leave five minutes and then rinse thoroughly; if you add a little ammonia to the last water you will neutralize the effect of any eau de Javelle left in the material.

When the stains appear in woolen or silk, treat with weak acetic acid. Touch with the acid, and follow with a bleach of sulphurous acid or peroxide, if the colors are fast to these bleaches. If times on colored linens and cottons not, try methyl alcohol or ether. Somewhere the color is so delicate that you know boiling water or any bleach would affect it, you can use ice to remove the stain and preserve the color at the same time.

For fruit stains on the hands wet them and hold over burning sulphur. The same thing applies to white goods.

Furs.

To clean white furs, straight benzine is sufficient if the furs have not yellowed. If yellow after rinsing, rub in a paste of benzine and French chalk, and let dry. Then brush and shake. For colored furs, put a bran in the oven and let it get thoroughly heated. Rub this in the fur and continue until the fur is quite clean, then brush and comb. If you are going to dry clean colored furs, you will find that the benzine takes out the natural oil and leaves them with a dead look. If you mix an ounce of alcohol and a little white vaseline with your benzine solution it will give a gloss.

If you come in with wet furs, shake out all the moisture you can, then lay them on the table and cover with boric acid crystals, and leave overnight. The next morning the crystals will have absorbed all the moisture and dust. Shake and brush the way of the fur.

Furniture.

Upholstery may be dry cleaned by brushing with a benzine soap solution and then sponging in clear benzine. This is better than using ammonia water, as so many housekeepers do, for in time the material is attacked.

Fusel Oil.

A powerful and efficient solvent for varnishes, oil colors, and rosins.

Gelatine.

Sponge with tepid soap water.

Georgette.

Wash in lukewarm water with a small amount of soap. If the water is too hot, or too much soap is used, light colors become yellowed. After washing rinse in a weak acetic acid solution to brighten the colors.

Gilt Frames.

To clean and brighten picture frames and mirrors take two parts water to one part alcohol, and apply with a camel's hair brush, touching a little at a time and drying immediately with a soft cloth, preferably flannel.

Glass Decanters.

Pour in two tablespoonfuls of vinegar and one tablespoonful of salt, shake well and rinse in clear water.

Varied Activities of Women

Queen Elizabeth of Belgium is probably the first queen to vote in a municipal election, she having had the honor of doing so in the recent elections at which women voted for the first time in that country.

Mrs. Sally James Farnham, sculptress of the Bolivar statue, recently unveiled in New York City, never went to an art school, having taught herself after discovering her gift for modeling.

Low caste Japanese women have incredible strength. They draw heavy wagons, work in the deep mud of the rice fields, row heavy boats, and coal ships, always with the inevitable baby strapped to their backs.

Norwegian women have a daily newspaper all of their own and which no man can have anything to do with issuing of the sheet. The money to start the paper was left for that purpose by a wealthy woman.

Miss Anna Dobek, living in Chocholow, Poland, and who recently celebrated her 123d birthday, claims to be the oldest spinster in central Europe.

WITH ornaments, ribbons, flowers, jewels, etc., the bride lore goes merrily on.

If the first flower a bride sees on her wedding morn is white, she will lead a happy life, but if red she will know both sorrow and care.

If a bride has a bunch of pink roses given her, it is lucky.

For any one else but the bride herself to pluck the flowers worn at her wedding was considered in Greece an ill omen.

A bride will not be happy if a thorn in her bouquet scratches her hand.

The usher or best man who gets the groom's boutonniere will marry next.

The girl who finds a flower dropped from the bride's bouquet will soon be married.

If the bridemaids go into a dark room and toss up the bride's bouquet the first to pick it up will be the first to marry.

A rose from the bridal wreath of one you love betokens happiness.

In Scotland a thistle sprig or an ornament in the way of a thistle is considered lucky to include in the wedding outfit.

If a girl wears a gown with rosebuds on it, she will not be a bride until it is worn out.

The Scotch bride is promised a life filled with happiness if she adds white heather to her bouquet.

It was formerly the custom for newly engaged pairs to wear flowers as an external sign of their engagement.

If a bride wears tuberoses, it is a sign of early mourning she will be forced to wear.

If a bride mixes a few daisies and daffodils in her bridal bouquet, her life will never be gloomy.

If the bride separates the flowers in her bouquet, and throws them, the one who catches the largest number will be married first.

If, at your wedding, red roses are given you by your father, it will bring good luck.

It is considered lucky to take a flower away from the church after the wedding.

If a bride leaves her bouquet in church and turns back to get it, she will have an unfortunate wedded life.

If the bride loses a flower from her bouquet before the wedding, she will have many little troubles in her married life.

In France, it is said no wedding decoration is complete without the mignonette—which will keep the bride first in her husband's thoughts.

The bride who wears jasmine is rich enough to make the fortune of a poor husband.

Only a bride should wear orange blossoms.

It is considered bad luck to use red roses at a bridal, because on the ejection of Eve from Paradise, all the roses which were white blushed red at our great mother's fall. It is also said that red roses worn by a bride will cause her to blush in after years when her wedding is mentioned.

It is not considered lucky to wear only flowers in the hair:

If the bonny bride do wear
Naught but flowers on her hair,
The day will quickly dawn
When she's regret her wedding morn.

Lose jewelry at a wedding and you lose a friend.

Pearls and opals are not lucky stones for a bride to wear.

It is good luck for a bride to wear a bracelet.

Whoever puts a bridal wreath or veil on for play will never marry.

The orange blossom wreath for the bride comes from an old practice of the Saracens, by whom the orange blossom was regarded as a symbol of prosperous marriage.

It is good luck for the bride to wear at the altar some love gift given by the groom before they were engaged to be married.

It will bring good luck to the bride to have some one secrete some heirloom of her family in the trunk she takes away with her.

In some parts of England the groom gives a ribbon to each of the young men as they come from the church, and these run a race to the house, the first one getting there being allowed to kiss the bride.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

JUNE 19, 1921.

Theaters, 1, 2. Music, 1, 2. Movies, 3. Automobiles, 6, 7. Aviation, 8.

The Theaters

SUMMER, if you believe the almanacs, is still forty-eight hours away, but the season has outrun itself in the theaters. The amusement craft is in the doldrums; more than half the downtown playhouses show bleak, inhospitable fronts, and the men who smilingly assure you they haven't a thing down in front are off to whatever cool elysiums beckon these overlords of the ticket racks.

With the departure last evening of Miss Marjorie Rambeau from the Woods and "Robin Hood" from the Illinois, the number of untenanted theaters in the loop district reaches ten. The La Salle is in the hands of the movie men, and only six establishments—Powers', the Garrick, the Apollo, the Olympic, the Cort, and the Princess—remain to offer entertainment other than vaudeville or pictures. One of these will be closed at the end of this week.

What becomes of the playgoer in summer? It is a problem only partly explicable by the weather and the counter attractions of the season. Folks take vacations, to be sure, or spend their evenings motoring or in the parks, but this does not tell the whole story. The weather is not always hot, and even when it is there are no cooler spots in town than the dim interiors of the two or three downtown playhouses that have artificially refrigerated air.

Perhaps it is mob psychology. Or perhaps the minor irritations of planning an evening at the theater seem greater when the world and his wife are taking their ease. "Seventeenth row" is never a pleasant thing to hear when you ask for two in the fourth and know you can get them if you search sufficiently far and wide among the agencies. And it's harder to be philosophical about it in June than in January.

But why argue? It's the law of supply and demand that counts. If we want more plays when another summer comes, probably we shall have them.

The decorators, it is told, will be in possession of the Woods during its period of inactivity, and, according to the announcement, "a complete rehabilitation of the interior will be revealed on its reopening." The latter event will take place in August with a belated showing of "The Queen of Sheba," a spectacular film which was revealed in New York some weeks ago.

Miss Doris Keane leaves the Garrick two weeks hence—never again, she says, to act in "Romance"—but the theater will not be closed. The Keane engagement will be followed, on July 3, by a summer experiment with "Up in the Clouds," a new musical comedy by Will J. Johnstone and Tom Johnstone, with Skeet Gallagher, Florence Hedges, Hal Van Rensselaer, Arthur Cunningham, and numerous others in the cast.

The doors at Powers' will remain open only one week longer. Then Miss Laurette Taylor will depart to prepare for another season, which contemplates her appearance in three new plays—something about fairies by her husband, J. Hartley Manners; an adaptation of Fanny Hurst's story, "Humoresque," and a satirical comedy by Miss Elizabeth Asquith, which Miss Taylor has read and for which she has great hopes. "Peg o' My Heart," which now has been acted some 13,000 times in various parts of the world, probably will be definitely dropped from Miss Taylor's repertory, unless she should yield to the temptation to "do" it for the movies.

"Peg" is due for an interesting revival by another player of note, however. Word from Paris has it that Miss Elsie Janis will play the comedy there in French at the Theater de Vaudeville during Septembe rand October. "I shall not try to use an Irish-French accent," says Miss Janis, "because that would not mean anything in Paris. I am going to give the play in French as it is pronounced at the Comedie Francaise."

The Playhouse has no plans for the immediate present and will defer its reopening until Aug. 22, when Leo Carrillo is scheduled to arrive in "The Love Chef," a comedy written for him by Edgar Selwyn. Other promises of the always uncertain future are "The Gold Diggers" at Powers' on or about Sept. 5 and Francis Wilson and De Wolf Hopper with their revival of "Erminie" at the Illinois on Sept. 18.

ALICE GENTLE

FRANCES PERALTA

The song birds of Ravinia will be arriving in the city this week, all ready to produce their most melodious carols for the opera season which begins on Saturday night. Miss Fitziu and Miss Peralta are newcomers to the Ravinia organization. Miss Gentle is well known for artistic achievements of a high order in previous seasons.

ANNA FITZIU

Messrs. Wagenhals and Kemper, impresarios of "The Bat," visited Chicago last week to gloat a bit over the persistent popularity of the mystery play at the Princess, which shows no signs of wearing out its welcome. In NewYork the Rinehart-Hopwood thriller celebrated its three hundred and fiftieth performance on Wednesday and is still going strong.

"Lightnin'," with Frank Bacon, which we were to have seen last autumn, is farther away from Chicago than ever. The play has passed its twelve hundredth performance on Broadway, an almost unbelievable record, and the announcement is made that it will keep right on and begin its fourth year in the east on Aug. 26.

Miss Ethel Barrymore, through with "Clair de Lune," is in vaudeville again for a while, appearing in her old standby Sir J. M. Barrie's one act play, "The Twelve Pound Look." It is an effective bit, and Miss Barrymore always makes the most of it. Her associates in the venture are Harry Plimmer as Sir Harry Sims, Miss Ena Shannon as Lady Sims, and James Kearney as Tombes.

Use of the new Apollo theater has been given by Mr. Woods for the benefit performance to be staged Tuesday afternoon, June 28, for the Illinois General Hospital and Cancer Research Foundation. The players who are in town that week will volunteer their services in making up the program, and the affair will be in charge of Mrs. George Baas, president of the board of trustees of the hospital; Sidney Loeb, chairman of the theatrical division; Mrs. Doris Chapman, chairman of the benefit; and Mrs. John J. Garrity, vice chairman.

With Miss Ina Claire on her way to Europe, William Harris Jr. has been compelled to find a substitute star for the tryout of "Blue Beard's Eighth Wife," the play in which she is to appear next season. Miss Mary Servoss has agreed to serve as proxy, act in the first performances, and make way cheerfully when Miss Claire comes back—which seems, to say the least, a good-natured thing to do.

George M. Cohan continues to give evidence of having meant what he said anent being through with the stage as a producer. He announces that "The Tavern," in which he has been playing the Vagabond, will close in New

Everything Is Ready at Ravinia for the Influx of Operatic Guests

By Edward Moore.

THE lovely Ravinia has had its foliage trimmed, its walks refurbished, and its buildings reopened for occupancy. The golden and silver throated servants of song are beginning to arrive, and the park is ready to receive the visitors of its opera season.

The reception will begin next Saturday night.

Mr. Eckstein has prepared an exceptionally pleasant greeting for the 1921 inaugural. Rossini's tuneful and jolly comic opera, "The Barber of Seville," will lead off the list. It will be sung by an array of skilled specialists, including Florence Macbeth, Charles Hackett, Riccardo Stracciari, Vittorio Trevisan, and Leon Rothier.

An added attraction will appear on the conductor's stand. Fulgenzio Guerrieri, remembered as a brilliant director in the days of the Boston Opera company, will be a member of the Ravinia staff for the first part of the season, and will conduct the opening performance.

The next night will introduce other eminent stars. There will be a double bill of Massenet, "La Navarraise" and "Thais." Alice Gentle, Morgan Kingston, Rothier, and the rest of the cast that gave such a good performance last season will be in the first. Anna Fitziu will make her first bow to a Ravinia audience in the name part of the second work, with Stracciari appearing as Athanael. Louis Hasselmans, well remembered in Chicago and soon to go to the Metropolitan, will conduct.

Ravinia will be close at the door of Chicago this summer as far as transportation is concerned. The Chicago and Northwestern railway announces a "Ravinia park opera special" train, leaving the Madison street terminal station at 7:32 o'clock each evening, Chicago time—the railway time is announced an hour earlier. It will reach Ravinia just before the performance begins.

It will leave the park shortly after the performance and reach Chicago at 11:40 o'clock, again Chicago time. Both going and returning it will stop at numerous suburban stations along the north shore. In addition there will be an efficient service for the benefit of those desirous of going early and dining at the park, also for those who wish to attend the afternoon concerts and return at their end.

The Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee electric railway tells of a limited train leaving the Adams street station at 7 o'clock, reaching Ravinia at 8:02; also of an express train leaving at 7:20 and arriving at 8:24. This is on Chicago time.

Returning there will be special trains at the park gate, leaving immediately after the performance. Besides these, express trains to Evanston will leave twenty-six minutes after the hour and other trains to Chicago at fifty-six minutes after the hour. Finally, for the benefit of critics and such others as are obliged to leave early, a limited train will stop at the park at 9:34 to pick up Chicago passengers. It will reach the loop at 10:31.

There are indications of an exceptional season. At this distance the list of artists looks to be the most efficient in Ravinia's history. With Miss Fitziu, Miss Macbeth, Miss Gentle, Frances Peralta, Marie Sundelius, Hackett, Kingston, Mario Chamlee, Stracciari, Millo Picco, Rothier, Trevisan, and Paolo Ananian as its leading lights; with Guerrieri, Hasselmans, Papi, and Spadoni as conductors; with the stage in charge of Armando Agnini, the public has responded with heavier subscriptions than ever before. This in itself is much out of the ordinary, since the theatrical business in general is unusually quiet.

Thursday afternoon concerts especially devoted to children's programs will be continued. They were great successes last summer. In the first one a children's chorus of 100 directed by Osbourne McConathy will sing the same program of songs recently heard at the children's concert of the Chicago

Everything Ready at Ravinia

North Shore Music festival in Evanston, Millo Picco, baritone, will be the soloist, and the Chicago Symphony orchestra will play. On the next Thursday the lecture recitals by Mr. and Mrs. Marx E. Oberndorfer will be resumed in connection with special musical programs.

Other items from the park hold that there will be considerable new scenic equipment, among others settings for "Tosca" and "La Bohème" designed and painted by the expert artist, Peter J. Donigan. Also—this on the word of Mr. Hasselmans—one of the Ravinia visitors during the first week will be Geraldine Farrar. On her way to California she will stop off for some personal observations on the Ravinia manner.

Wherefore, and taking one consideration with another, the auspices for a pleasant summer are favorable.

In Search of Opera Guarantors.

The valiant band of workers for guarantors of the Chicago Opera association has been since Monday in full cry seeking the juxtaposition of names and the dotted line. An extra degree of speed became necessary for several reasons. For one, the lease of the Auditorium will expire in April of next year. Consequently it became highly advisable, not to say imperative, that the management of the company should be able to give a definite answer whether or not the great theater should be under its control for a further period.

It would seem unthinkable that it should not be. Chicago can hardly afford to be shamed by admitting that it is not able to support its own opera company. Quite apart from a matter of dollars and cents—and there are statisticians able to prove that the company brings far more money into Chicago than it takes out—it puts Chicago on the map fully as much as any one single activity and considerably more than most.

When the company finished its tour from New York to California last spring the newspaper notices that it received in the various cities were pasted together. They made a strip three feet wide and 300 feet long. Any other organization capable of giving the name of Chicago 900 square feet of free newspaper publicity in a period of eight weeks is invited to step up and present its claims.

That is one element. Another is that the company has a considerable quantity of assets on its own behalf. The new organization, as well as being a going concern and having a large figure of good will, will possess a scenic and stage equipment valued at over $2,000,000. It could not be duplicated now for twice that amount. This is the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Harold McCormick, who, having paid for it as it accumulated in the decade of the company's existence, now proposed to turn it over to the company free from all debt.

Prospective guarantors feel with some justice that they are assuming a burden. They are. But others have assumed burdens as well, not the least of them the general director of the company, Mary Garden. She took her post under the condition that she should take no salary for it. By the end of next season that will amount to $40,000 which would have been paid any other general director. And this is not all. Miss Garden today is at least $25,000 poorer than she would have been had she not consented to act as general director. She was urged to go on a concert tour just after the opera tour. It would have netted her that sum. Instead, and without a moment's hesitation, she gave it up and plunged into her managerial duties.

Miss Garden is not only a flaming artist but the most gallant supporter that the Chicago Opera association has. By the side of what she has already done the action of signing a guaranty seems a small matter.

Chicago will undoubtedly follow the example she has set. It should have done so weeks ago.

A Federation Prize Winner.

George Grammar Smith of Evanston and Chicago decided to study architecture, and did for a while at the University of Illinois. Then along came the bugle sound that sent him scuttling overseas as one of the first volunteers. He has a baritone voice which had not been pressed into service much until the boys in the hospital where he was convalescing discovered he could while away a dull hour with a tune. They kept him at it, and on his return he went in for serious voice study. On June 9 he won first prize in the national contest given by the National Federation of Music Clubs, which carries a prize of $150 and a guarantee of fifty concert engagements next season. Mr. Smith lives in Evanston.

With the Melody Makers.

The Braille Musical club has elected as officers for the coming year Mrs. C. Todd Hood, president; Mrs. A. J. Ochsner, first vice president; Mrs. J. G. Davis, second vice president; Mr. William Peterson, third vice president; Miss K. Miller, fourth vice president; Mrs. G. W. Stift, recording secretary; Miss Anna A. Dotzel, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Thomas Bouchier, treasurer; Mr. Edward E. Dement, librarian.

This is the season of commencements. The American conservatory announces its concert and exercises at the Auditorium Tuesday night; the Illinois College of Music on the same night at the Presbyterian church, Warren avenue and Sacramento boulevard; the Chicago Musical college at the Auditorium Wednesday night; the Columbia School of Music at the gold room of the Congress hotel Friday night.

A scholarship drive dinner and conference will be held at Olivet Institute Tuesday night, preceding the annual concert by pupils of the school. Mrs. A. J. Ochsner, chairman of the advisory council, will preside.

A musical will be held at the Skokie Country club this afternoon. The program will be given by Carol Robinson, pianist, and Robert Imandt, violinist.

An orchestra of twenty pieces conducted by William J. Morrison will give a concert this afternoon at the soldiers' hospital, 47th street and Drexel boulevard.

Geraldine Farrar will go a-touring in the opera company headed by Antonio Scotti next autumn, the first time that the eminent baritone has attached to his organization any one approaching himself in popularity. She will appear in the name parts of "Tosca," "Mme. Butterfly," and "Carmen."

The list of good violin players around here will be lessened by one more during the coming season. Albert Spalding has sailed for Europe to be gone over a year. He will play in the orchestral concerts conducted by Eugene Ysaye in Brussels, and will then go on a tour of Holland, Belgium, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Finland, Italy, France, Spain, England, and Egypt.

Guy Maier, the pianist, was stricken with a sudden attack of illness the other day on the eve of his marriage, but it took more than this to postpone the matrimonial event. Instead of being married in church the ceremony was performed in a hospital. He will spend the summer in Maine instead of Europe, as at first planned.

Tito Schipa, one of the best tenorial assets of the Chicago Opera association, is in Cuba with the Bracale Opera company. They are saying pleasant things about his singing there.

Carmen Pascova, who sang mezzo-soprano with rôles with the Chicago Opera association last season, is now on a concert tour that will take her to some fifty cities during the summer.

A voice from the south:

Farris L. Johnston, American nightingale of the south, is coming to Chicago to accept an opera engagement. Miss Johnston is also a talented dancer with a wonderful personality. So says the announcement—unsigned. It also calls her "the goddess voice singer."

The London Telegraph conveys the information that bands of former soldiers are now making music on the streets of the city. It adds that they play upon beautiful instruments and they play well, incomparably better than any German band played in prewar days. Another musical occupation for ex-service men is the making of violins. A factory has been started in Islington, and, according to the report, excellent results are being obtained.

Paul Konchanski, Polish violinist, will be one of the soloists with the Chicago Symphony orchestra during the coming season. He is not to be confused with Waclaw Kochanski, who played here last spring. The latter also hails from Poland, but he is a pianist.

"Piccolo Marat," Mascagni's new opera, produced in Rome last month, would seem to have something more to it than the fostered excitement that attends the first performance of a novelty. They say that it has quite a touch of the Mascagni of "Cavalleria" in its score, and already there is some gossip about the possibility of adding it to the repertoire of the Chicago company next season. It deals with the days of terrorism in the French revolution.

York at the end of this week. The retirement of the play at the height of its popularity leaves only one Cohan offering to continue—"The O'Brien Girl," which is being presented in Boston. All of his other productions have been closed, in spite of the fact that several of them were booked as far ahead as August.

Announcements of the new plays in London are topped by news of one from Barrie, called "Shall We Join the Ladies?" and another from John Galsworthy, "A Family Man."

Without definitely naming either the time or place, the sociological department of the Medical Review of Reviews announces that it is about to produce a play, called "Goat Alley," by Alice Wade Mulhern, dealing with sex problems of Negro life, and that the company will be composed of Negro actors. It was these same reformers within the Medical Review of Reviews who were responsible for "Damaged Goods" and kindred plays which attempted to use the stage as a forum for social reforms.

The Stage in New York.

NEW YORK, June 18.—[Special.]—Mr. Kaufman's column in the Times tomorrow will say:

One of the particular regrets of a majority of successful playwrights is concerned with the large amount of money made by the producers of their wares—three or four times the amount received by the playwright, as a rule.

For the coming season, two groups of playwrights are joining forces as producers, and if their plans are successful the regular managers probably will be required to break in a new crop of dramatists. The first and largest of these groups will be headed by Max Marcin, Avery Hopwood, Guy Bolton and Aaron Hoffman. These four will produce plays of other writers as well as those of their own.

The second group now being formed is headed by Edward Childs Carpenter and Owen Davis—the latter a particularly prolific playwright, and for many years accustomed to sell three or four plays a year to the managers.

Some years ago the late Paul Armstrong had the idea of forming practically all the well known playwrights in the country into a producing body, thereby freezing out the managers entirely. Mr. Armstrong got as far as producing one or two plays of his own, but they were not successful and the scheme languished. A few years ago Eugene Walter, Max Marcin, and others came within a hair's breadth of launching such an organization with the Famous Players as their backers, but at the last moment the plan fell through.

The theatrical producers seem to be reconciling themselves to a bad summer and the immediate outlook for productions is not promising. After this week there will be but one summer show still to come—unless some one still unheard from should be suddenly fired with ambition. George White bids fair to have the late June and July field practically to himself; his "Scandals of 1921" is due either the week of June 27 or that of July 4. After that there probably will be nothing until July 20 or 27, when Mr. Woods will fire the first gun of the new season with the presentation of "Gertie's Garter," which he has already revealed in Chicago. Frank Fay was to have come along with a summer revue, but it succumbed to internal explosions during the rehearsal period. "The Greenwich Village Follies" will hardly be along before August.

It is reported H. B. Warner, who has been in the films for several seasons, is about to return to the stage.

Miss Charlotte Greenwood will have her third musical comedy of the "Letty" series next season: "Poor Letty" will be the name of it.

"Good Morning, Dearie," will be the title of a musical comedy by Anne Caldwell and Jerome Kern, to be produced by Mr. Dillingham next season. Harland Dixon, Louise Groody, and William Kent will head the cast.

Sidney Blackmer has been engaged for Zoe Akin's "Varying Shores," which Sam H. Harris will produce. Mr. Harris has been negotiating with Elsie Ferguson for the star rôle.

Nothing has been said in recent months concerning the return of Miss Maude Adams to the stage next season, but the Messrs. Erlanger and Dillingham, who announced her return, went so far as to ask Mr. Tarkington for a play, and Mr. Tarkington came east to discuss it with Miss Adams. In the interim, however, Miss Adams has interested herself in the technical side of motion pictures, so there can be no assurances one way or the other. John Barrymore will be among us with a new play, but none knows for certain the name of it.

"THE LOST ROMANCE."

Produced by Paramount. Directed by William De Mille. Presented at outlying theaters

THE CAST.

Elizabeth Erskine.....Fontaine La Rue
Mark Sheridan.....Jack Holt
Allen Erskine.....Conrad Nagel
Sylvia Hayes.....Lois Wilson
Allen Jr.....Mickey Moore

By Mae Tinée.

THIS is an adorable picture! Real people with real problems for six reels or so live their lives naturally for you before honest-to-goodness backgrounds such as we are all familiar with. The story, by Edward Knoblock, is a thoughtful and human one. Olga Printziau molded it beautifully into screen form, and William De Mille, the director—who I think has his brother Cecil on the run—does the rest. Yes, "The Lost Romance" is lovely!

It is a story of domestic life founded on the situation of a girl who is loved by two men, and marries the one she loves.

"Isn't it wonderful," she whispers to the latter, a young doctor, after they have exchanged their vows in the moonlight, "that, out of all the world, we should have found each other?"

He agrees fervently, and they decide that life with them shall be one long romance. Neither can see why married people should ever become settled or discontented. They will travel down the sunbeams until the golden light merges in the warm and infinitely more tender glow of sunset. Evening shadows will find them calmly happy, still surrounded by THE ROMANCE.

Sounds beautiful, doesn't it? It is beautiful—while it lasts!

Time goes on, as it has a habit of doing. The man who loved but wasn't loved goes away to forget his heartache. Dr. and Mrs. Erskine set up a menage. A little son comes to them.

When Allen Jr. is about 5, father and mother realize that five years have made a difference. The doctor is a busy man. The doctor's wife is a busy woman. She does her hair up in a hurry, and has lots of stockings to darn and a darn lot of talking to do over the telephone. Their romance—? Romance? O, yes, they once had believed in that, hadn't they? But now—the doctor's wife bursts into tears. It is gone.

Gentle and beautiful Aunt Betty, who knows life and its values, comes into the room. She smiles sadly and whimsically, and gathers the dragging reins into her slender and capable hands.

MISS ESTELLE DAVIS with BAILEY AND COWAN STATE-LAKE © PHOTO BY STEGER-PETERS

A wonderful character, Aunt Betty, as portrayed by Fontaine La Rue. I don't know when I have had any one get to me as she did. Her touch is exquisite, just as she is an exquisite thing to look at. She gives to the rôle the illusion of extreme physical frailty and great mental power. There is something hypnotic about her. To me she dominates the picture.

But she has splendid coöperation. Everybody in the east is excellent.

How does it all come out? Plees, lady, you mustn't ask me! Such a fine picture, you should see for it the surprise yourselz. It is nize. (She speaks Eyetalian and everyTHING.)

Foolishness aside—see "The Lost Romance." It is charming!

MISS HELEN FORD in "THE SWEETHEART SHOP" OLYMPIC — PHOTO BY MOFFETT

Ask Me! Ask Me! Ask Me!

MABEL R.: If I gave you an opinion, it would be my honest one, but I'm not giving opinions away on that subject. To begin with, it wouldn't be fair. To end with, I don't know that I have any.

SCRIBE: Yes, glad to! But you must send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Can't guarantee acceptance of your scenario, but CAN send you a list of firms that COULD accept if they wanted to. And you never know when a notion's going to hit somebody, do you?

DONALD: Scotch, mon? If so, you will probably not understand me when I advise you to tell it to Sweeney. Nor would Sweeney understand if you told him. So why not leave it on the fire till you get in a better humor? You ARE cross, aren't you?

BENNIEC: Why, yes, I thought the picture was clever. It may have been just the opposite though. One person's opinion is just that—one person's opinion—and if you think you're going to get in an argument with me on that score, you're wrong, me darlint!

E. O. G.: Mr. and Mrs. Fairbanks were in California the last I heard. Can't prove it by me, but they do say Mr. Fairbanks vigorously enters denial. Nope, Mary Miles Minter is abroad. Mary MacLaren? In Los Angeles. Yes, sister to Katherine MacDonald. (Why all the interest in the Marys?)

BUSINESS MAN: For one who doesn't like pictures, seems to me you see a lot of them. On your own admission you go three times a week. Come across—you know you're crazy about them! Sure, they have faults. But so dost thoust, dustntst?

LEE: Whatever do you mean? I'm all excited! What pictures? What pictures?

CLOSEUPS

Larry Semon, comedian, and one time cartoonist for the New York newspapers, has just completed "The Hick." This, Vitagraph firmly asserts, is one of his funniest if not THE funniest! It is said to be the story of a truly rural love that stops at nothing, not even a town cabaret.

Ah, a hand for Ralph Stewart! Listen to this: "Personally, my only desire in the screen characterizations I depict is to present a wholesome, lovable type of man who carries gladness to the hearts of the thousands who see my screen performances."

The first Aesops' Fables release will be put out by Pathé, and will be the story of "The Goose that Laid the Golden Egg." The screen versions will be cartoon comedies drawn by Paul Terry and sponsored by Fables Pictures, Inc.

"The Girl of the Golden West" will be Ethel Clayton's next production. It will be the first time since she has been with Lasky that she has had a chance to be an out of doors girl, and she's looking forward with delight to the change from her usual type of rôle.

Rumor has it that Tom Santschi's making a lot of money in oil.

There is a rumor that Selznick, Associated Producers, and Robertson-Cole may combine forces.

Speaking of rumors, one persists that Charlie Chaplin and May Collins will be married in September.

Word comes from the press agent of Educational Films that William S. Campbell, who directs the delightful Snooky comedies—those monkey ones, you know—ran away from home to join a circus. For a long time he was a director of pictures and nobody paid much attention to him. It was his genius for getting animals to do human things in an unbelievable way that has brought his name to the attention of picture fans.

Carmel Myers tells this story of a neighbor's child:

"The other evening little Helen climbed up in her mother's lap and asked anxiously:

"'Don't you love me, Mumsie?'

"'Why, of course, I do,' her mother exclaimed.

"'Then why doesn't your chest go up and down like the mamma in the movies?'"

Sheldon Lewis, who has "villained" in a lot of the screen serials, has been chosen by D. W. Griffith for the part of Jacques in the screen version of "The Two Orphans." Mr. Lewis and his wife, Virginia Pearson, have been appearing in vaudeville for the last season.

The WELL-DRESSED MAN

Looking Fit May Better the Stroke

By Alfred Stephen Bryan

NEW YORK.—Anglo-Saxons have coined an expressive name, which never loses its fine flavor. That name is gentleman-sportsman. It denotes one who plays the game whatever it be, with the dress and deportment of a gentleman and with the fairness of a sportsman. The gentleman-sportsman, being first of all a gentleman, turns himself out in seemly, well cut clothes. He does not share that jingrowing vanity of small natures, which study to be shabby in the misbelief that thereby they show a rarefied brand of culture or a high and mighty contempt for things others hold in esteem. The gentleman-sportsman knows that the consciousness of looking fit to his finger tips buoys the spirit and betters the stroke. It is all simple, and elemental, and quite the way of humans.

However, neither does the gentleman-sportsman go in for ornately patterned or oversmart clothes under the impression that these are dashing or picturesque. They are not. On the contrary, they are as out of place as a Fiji Islander in a ballroom, bringing to outdoors the attitudinizing and artificiality of indoors. Sport is fun, not a function. A man's mind should be off himself and upon the game. If he is highly exercised about the knot of his tie or the drape of his knickers, he cannot exercise sufficient care and skill to send his score up.

Sporting, country, and knockabout jackets are worn both with same pattern and different pattern trousers or knickers. Tweed, homespun, corduroy, gabardine, twillette, wool crash—these are only a corporal's guard from a regiment of suitable stuffs. The jacket portrayed shows the belted back surmounted with clustered plaits, the deep expanding vent at the bottom and the full-swing drapery at the sides. A jacket like this has no end of uses besides games and should be in every well ordered kit.

Colored silk ribbons on straw hats are favorites of youngsters as well as young oldsters, who have an unsmotherable craving to express the I and My of personality. These ribbons come in club, university, regimental, and fraternity stripes ofvarious color combinations, one of which is illustrated. The straw hat has a crown rather high and a band rather narrow. The bias-striped four-in-hand scarf is patterned in colors to tally with the hat ribbon.

High, flexible boots of kangaroo for tennis greatly resemble skating boots. As pictured, they are often cut Blucher style. If your foot is prone to twist in low cut shoes, this glove soft boot lends just the needful support toankle and instep. Silk hosiery should, of course, not be worn at any sport, as it is not absorbent, but keeps the foot wet and slippery. Light wood or cashmere hose is the choice of the seasoned players.

Summer shirts having sleeves detachable at the elbow, reproduced in the last sketch, are designed not alone for sportsmen, but also for office workers on a scorching day. Somehow, one's cuff invariably and impishly makes a bee-line for the ink. Presto!—remove the cuff and you remove the cause.

Besides white and cream colored flannel trousers for confessedly country wear, there are the less colorful, though more useful, gray flannels, an English notion now revived, because impeccable white smudges too easily if you sprawl upon a bench or the grass.

Hats of white flannel or white duck are smart and appropriate for the seaside on the mountains. They are, moreover, a grateful change off from the rather stodgy straws of which one tires now and then. The round crown middy shape, having the underbrim faced with green cotton to lessen sunblink, is an especial favorite among young men who have seen service afloat.

Silk shirts are always said to be declining in fashion, yet perversely they decline to decline. You can buy silk shirts for a song, but you can also buy them at the cost of a song by Caruso or Melba. The finest brocaded silks have the appearance of being embossed, so sumptuous are they.

If you insist upon wearing a waistcoat all summer, though the sun grill you like a chop upon the spit, they are made of feathery silk pongee.

FOUR GOSSIPS — 55%

Slams of Life
By J. P. McEVOY

THE SECOND QUARTER—JUNE 15TH.

Whenever I garner a dollar or two,
That I manage to hide from the ravening crew,
Who sock me for lodging, for raiment, and eats,
I feel I've perfected the neatest of feats,
And I plan with elation the fun I'll provide,
With the scanty masuma I'm laying aside—
"Come, let us be merry," I sing to my soul,
But the answer I get is of dolor and dole,
For I find I've forgotten that saddest of facts,
The quarterly bill for the INCOME TAX.

On deep economics, I'm shy to confess,
I don't really know, but I hazard the guess,
That the war with its fixings at 10 per cent plus
Resulted in quite a large outlay for us.
It must have been large, for the taxes I've paid
On shirts, ties, and collars and pink lemonade,
On cars, pipes, and onions—and many things more
Would pay all the cost of an average war—
Without that benumbing assault with an ax:
The quarterly bill for the INCOME TAX.

How happy was I! And how blithe, and how gay,
Before those sad tidings were slipped me today,
For deep in my being I harbored the thought,
That I'd finally paid for the war I had bought,
And now when a poor lonely penny was saved,
I could squander it gaily for something I craved!
But vain was the thought that my course was now free,
The war bill ain't paid, so it's still up to me,
And the rest of my life I can add to my stacks
Of quarterly bills for the INCOME

MISS GRETE KEMBLE COOPER IN "PEG O' MY HEART" - POWERS - MOFFETT PHOTO

Miss Cooper is of distinguished theatrical lineage, for she can trace her family line back to that of Roger Kemble, actor, who married Sarah Ward, daughter of his manager and herself an actress. Their son, John Philip Kemble, was a famous player of his time, and their daughter, Sarah, became the renowned Mrs. Siddons. It is from Stephen, the second son of Roger Kemble, that Miss Cooper is descended.

RAY

The Kind of a Battery Guarantee YOU Would Write

If you knew it to be a fact that the life of the average storage battery is less than one year, and you would try to conceive of a guarantee which would be your ideal, the result could be no stronger than the Ray unconditional guarantee.

The Ray Battery has always been guaranteed unconditionally for two years. In but one instance did we adhere to a provision in the guarantees of other makers—that was in placing a limit of 30 days on accessories such as boxes and rubber parts. Now (after June 10) the Ray Battery Co. guarantees these parts as well for period of two years.

Previously the strongest guarantee ever written, the new Ray unconditional guarantee, still broader, becomes the kind of a fair and sensible insurance policy against battery expense which you yourself would compose as your highest ideal.

Fix in your mind what this guarantee means to you—no battery expense possible for a period of two years except an occasional recharge. The new guarantee becomes invalid whenever a Ray Battery is opened or taken apart.

The Ray Battery Co. recognizes no competition.

Rice and Newton:
"I thought you said the new car would work all right."
"The horn works."
"And you said the top was in good condition."
"It's all right if it doesn't rain."
"Can you sing tenor?"
"Yes, ten or eleven or twelve—."
"I'll give you an imitation of a chicken—'I'm hungry.'"
"Are you coming to the house tonight? Remember my father turns off the lights at ten."
"I'll be there at ten sharp."
"That was good soup, best I ever heard, and good tea, too."
"Yes, I noticed you drank about a dozen saucers full; why saucers?"
"Good tea, but it was too weak to run out of a cup."

Stella Tracy and Carl McBride:
"What did you do with the Liberty bonds?"
"The what?"
"The divorce papers."
"Didn't I give you some bird's eye maple furniture?"
"Yes, a bird's eye full."
"And an easy rocking chair?"
"The only easy part about that chair was the first payment."
"Don't give such dirty looks."
"You have a dirty look but I didn't give it to you."

Stan Stanley:
"What did you do for a living before you went on the stage?"
"I was a chemist."
"Can you do chemistry now?"
"Yes."
"Well, dissolve."
"Monkeys can talk."
"Yes, I can understand you quite well."
"What is your name?"
"John Pullman Jones."
"Why the Pullman?"
"I'm the sleeper of our family."
"Why are you whistling?"
"For my dog."
"There's no dog."
"Well, then, why do you answer?"
"Where do you live?"
"Over a vacant lot."
"Who ever heard of a room over a vacant lot?"
"Why, there is lots of room over a vacant lot."
"You're not bashful, are you?"
"No, only careful."
"My father puts all the money he makes on my back."
"He evidently is not making much."
"I have such a cold I can hardly do myself justice."
"Why don't you see a doctor?"
"I did."
"What did he say?"
"No."

Jack Norworth and Janet Adair:
"You have the most wonderful hair, such beautiful blue eyes, such a lovely complexion, and so on."
"And so on?"
"Yes, sew on buttons."
"I'll take you hundreds and hundreds of miles on our honeymoon."
"Where?"
"My uncle has a merry-go-round, and you can ride and ride."
"Didn't I stop and get you six pork chops?"
"Yes, but what of that?"
"Nothing, only that it was discovered, and now the president of the bank is having an expert accountant go over my account."

McVICKERS.

Bayle and Patsy:
"I saw a wonderful operation today; the surgeon took a lung out of a man."
"That's nothing; I know a wife that put her husband, and she took the heart out of him."
"Did you hear about the two colored baseball clubs playing an exciting game?"
"Nope; I did not."
"There was as many razors in the air as there was flies; it was impossible for the umpire to decide the game."
"Why, on account of the fight?"
"No, no, not on account of the fight."
"Why couldn't the umpire decide the game?"
"He had to call the game on account of darkness."
"A man in Detroit said his prayers last New Year and ever since, to save time, he jumps into bed and says ditto."
"I was at a party the other night and kissed a girl; she had me arrested and sued me for damages. She didn't get any damages out of me though, for I proved to the court she had no sign up 'look out for paint.'"

Judge your theatre by its pictures

Where the Paramount Pictures are —there's the best theatre in town!

BY this time you are a good judge of motion pictures.

You know what you like. In the last few years you have seen enough motion pictures to give you a shrewd idea what is quality and what isn't.

All right: it's you and your like that are making finer photoplays possible and justifying Paramount's immense investment in time, talent and money, to produce steadily the great Paramount Pictures that are delighting the whole civilized world.

Too many ordinary pictures!

You have seen many an ordinary motion picture that you did not like very much—admit it. And it's your own fault! It's because you had not approached the matter of buying entertainment as sensibly as you had any other article of merchandise. You were careless, that's all.

Hit or miss won't do—it must be Paramount standard, and there is always a way to know before you go.

The more intelligent appraisal that there is of motion pictures, the better for all of us who are out for finer films.

But does your theatre realize its responsibility to you: its duty to let you enroll as a full time Paramount patron?

Are you given the chance to see all the Paramount Pictures?

Miss a single one and you miss a splendid entertainment.

Masters of Drama and Literature write for Paramount

Consider for a moment the names on the Paramount payroll. They read like a literary and dramatic Who's Who of Europe and America!

To ensure best results in the Paramount filming of his greatest work Sir James M. Barrie, for example, turned scenario-writer and has just completed the scenario for "Peter Pan." He will take an active part in the making of the picture, working hand in glove with the director.

Arnold Bennett is at work for Paramount, too. E. Phillips Oppenheim, Joseph Conrad and Robert Hichens are part of the great schedule. The same with Sir Gilbert Parker Elinor Glyn, Edward Knoblock, Somerset Maugham and Thompson Buchanan, and Avery Hopwood, Henry Arthur Jones, Cosmo Hamilton, Edward Sheldon, Samuel Merwin and Harvey J. O'Higgins.

All masters of drama and literature, immensely successful men, working with Paramount for your greater delight in your theatre.

All star casts in Paramount Pictures

To get an idea of the way Paramount casts the personnel of a photoplay glance over the all-star cast of "The Affairs of Anatol," the latest of the Cecil B. DeMille productions: Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson, Elliott Dexter, Bebe Daniels, Monte Blue, Wanda Hawley, Theodore Roberts, Agnes Ayres, Theodore Kosloff, Polly Moran, Raymond Hatton and Julia Faye. Not one star but a dozen!

The basis of Paramount's supremacy will steadily continue to be one of immense organization both in production and distribution of motion pictures, and unlimited resources of talent, money, physical equipment and imagination.

Paramount has enough studios and producing plants to equip the screen industry. The chief of these are in California, New York and London. The whole world-wide producing organization of Paramount Pictures proceeds on a basis of assured success for the photoplays produced. That is, more than 11,200 theatres in U. S. A. make Paramount Pictures the main part of their programmes, while there are also thousands of theatres in foreign countries whose patrons are always eager to see these masterpieces.

It is only possible in these announcements to give you a dim idea of Paramount's full activities.

You would have to take several months and visit three continents even to see the various Paramount studios.

Making your theatre seat worth renting

Perfect organization on a great scale is the only thing you can rely on to make your plush seat regularly worth renting.

Plush seats are not so comfortable when the entertainment is second rate!

Get into the habit of looking at the advertising of your theatre in the newspaper.

Look at the posters in the lobby of your theatre.

Look at the billboard announcements.

Find the words "It's a Paramount Picture."

That's the high sign that your theatre feels its responsibility to you,

—the high sign of the best show in town.

Illinois Bankers Strike at Small's Highway Fiasco

One County Shows Annual Bad Roads Loss of $2,000,000

BY J. L. JENKINS.

FINANCIAL interests of Illinois have allied themselves with the 500,000 automobile owners, the industrial leaders and business men who are coöperating in a statewide drive against further political interference with the state's highway building program.

The latest blow aimed at Gov. Small's persistent delay in contract letting has been struck by the Illinois Bankers' association in an official resolution demanding that the gaps in the state's 800 mile federal aid system be contracted for at once and the system thrown open to traffic this year. The bankers, recognized as the most conservative element concerned in the expenditure of public funds, publicly condemned this year's policy of delay at their recent Chicago meeting in the following terse and direct statement:

"Resolved, That we urge upon Gov. Small and the state highway authorities that every effort be made to finish the five federal aid road projects now under construction in Illinois and that this work be completed this year if possible."

Some forty miles of gaps still exist in the great transportation system which, late last fall, was considered the most important enterprise the state had ever undertaken. These gaps remain as practically impassable barriers to through traffic over the concrete loop which runs from Chicago to St. Louis, from St. Louis to Marshall and from Marshall through Danville to Chicago. The governor refused to place them under contract early in the spring because, he declared, the price per mile was too great, and has refused to award contracts covering them since that time.

Further refutation of the Small "high price propaganda" came from Freeport last week in a chamber of commerce report.

"Last year a committee from the chamber of commerce of Freeport was appointed to make investigation of the cost of bad roads of our county to farmers and business men," the report reads in part. "After carefully going into the matter by securing figures from the government on the increased valuation of acreage caused by good roads, by consulting grain men, implement dealers, garage owners, farmers, bankers, county officials and others, the committee reported that our county was losing annually not less than $2,000,000 as a result of unimproved highways. An annual loss of $2,000,000 in our small county of only 3,000 farms and 40,000 inhabitants, must indicate that the annual loss to the entire state on account of poor roads is tremendous.

"If we could only get the people of the state to begin figuring on the loss and waste they are sustaining on account of the present condition of our public highways, the road problem of Illinois would be greatly simplified. But now, when we are told by the chief executive of the state that it takes too many bushels of corn to build a mile of concrete road, we can only reflect sadly on the loss we know we are sustaining on account of his rejection of the hard road construction bids."

The report adds that, of course, corn has nothing to do with road building in Illinois; that automobile owners pay for every inch of the state system through increased license fees, and that the money has been ready ever since it was voted in 1918.

While Illinois people are laboring under the same old bad road embargo, new estimates show that Michigan's awards for highway work this year total $15,000,000. An act of the recent Michigan legislature enabled the state highway department to award contracts amounting to $5,500,000. About two-fifths of the money went to federal aid and three-fifths to state aid projects. About 715 miles of construction was carried over from 1920, a large part of which will be completed this year.

Little Journeys Hereabouts by Jenks

SINGING SANDS.

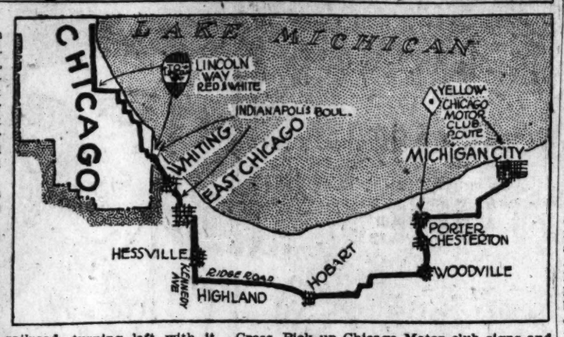
MICHIGAN CITY is almost worth the battle required to reach it. But, just the same, it's a long, rough battle, featured by broken springs and profanity. We spent a fortnight of adventuring the other day in trying to find the season's best route around the lake, wrecked our newly repaired roadster again, and limped home, hot and weary, but well enough pleased with the final log.

As usual, the old shore route through Gary, Miller, and Porter is about as bad as it can possibly be and survive. No one has satisfactorily explained the reason for this road. It is, both theoretically and by actual count, the most important industrial artery through the steel country, railroads included. Yet every year Indianapolis boulevard forms the same old extra hazard for the thousands of tons of highway traffic that bump their way out of South Chicago into Hoosierdom. This year much of this discomfort can be avoided by following Ewing avenue straight through 106th street and turning to the left to pick up the "boulevard" near the Indiana line.

To Gary the old short route is fair, with the exception of a few unimproved stretches. Industrious tinkers have scattered the elusive crushed rock over the road leading east from Miller, and it will be good for a few weeks to come, but the last leg of the shore trip is over the same old rutted, shell marked, and impossible stone and macadam surfacing.

If you're called that way try this one. It is longer, but by far the best: South in Michigan avenue to Garfield boulevard. Turn left, following "Lincoln way" signs through Washington park, across the Midway, and through Jackson park to the end of South Shore drive in South Chicago. Turn left, joining trolley one block ahead. Follow trolley as it turns south across town and turn left with it after crossing railroad. Leave trolley as it turns south and continue straight ahead to end of road at steel mill. Turn right to 92d street bridge. Bear left across bridge and follow Ewing avenue to 106th street. Turn left to end of street and bear right into Indianapolis boulevard. Follow Indianapolis boulevard straight ahead through five corners and Whiting. It later becomes Forsyth avenue and leads through the oil district into East Chicago.

Forsyth avenue and Chicago avenue in East Chicago. Turn left and follow Chicago avenue to mileage 22.7 in Calumet. Bank on left, turn right into Kennedy avenue. Follow it straight through, bearing left over tracks into Hessville [26.7]. Straight through, still in Kennedy avenue, to Highland [30.7]. Highland; four corners, garage on right. Straight ahead one block and turn left into Ridge road. Follow Ridge road through South Gary [37.4] and over stone surfacing into Hobart where concrete begins. Follow concrete across bridge, bearing right with it into main business center. Prominent four corners. Banks on left and right. Turn left and follow concrete across railroad, turning left with it. Cross tracks. Pass railroad station on right. End of street. Turn right one block, still on concrete. Turn left to end of concrete. Turn right in stone road and follow it for 4.8 miles. Pass between red barns, red brick farmhouse on left, to diagonal four corners. Turn left and follow winding stone road, marked with Chesterton signs to Woodville. End of road at trolley. Turn left through Chestertown [66.8] to Porter [67.8]. Pick up Chicago Motor club signs and main travel into Michigan City [83.4].



At the outskirts of Michigan City it is pleasant to turn from the beaten path and use Washington street to the business center, then turn right one block to Franklin street and follow it across the railroad and over the bridge spanning famous old Trail creek into the park and along the "singing sands" through pretty Long Beach summer resort.

Ottawa Opens New Camp Grounds for Motor Tourists

FOR the convenience of auto tourists the city park commission and the Chamber of Commerce of Ottawa have opened a convenient free tourists' camping ground on the south side of the Illinois river, near the center of the city. In addition, Ottawa has found that five hotels are not sufficient at all times to care for the increasing flow of traffic to and from Starved Rock park, and has arranged to furnish quarters in a large number of homes, where the hotels will direct tourists during the busy season. A steamboat line is in operation from Ottawa to the state park. Ottawa is renowned for many historical events. In Washington park will be found a large bowlder marking the place where the Lincoln-Douglas debate was held. On the south bank of the Illinois early explorers found the first soft coal in the United States. The old Bloomington coal road can still be identified. The Illinois and Michigan canal adds to the Venetian atmosphere and helps to surround the city with water.

NEW TRIBUNE MAPS.

Motordom will appreciate the latest Tribune highway service. It includes a new combination map showing in minute detail the marked trails and best automobile roads both in the immediate vicinity of Chicago and in three neighboring states, Indiana, Michigan, and Wisconsin. The maps, copyrighted by Rand, McNally & Co., and held in Tribune folders for road use, show the latest highway development, and will prove of real value to drivers in the four states. They may be had, free of charge, by addressing the Automobile Touring Bureau, Chicago Tribune, and inclosing 2 cents in stamps for return postage.

Club Undertakes to Chart Entire Highway System

A NATION-WIDE charting trip is to be undertaken by a crew representing the Automobile Club of Southern California. Leaving Los Angeles, this crew will secure data throughout America for strip maps indicating practically every road in the country.

This is the first time that any single motoring organization has undertaken to individually map the roads of an entire nation. Leaving the southern part of California, the crew will travel eastward through the southern states to Florida, proceeding from there throughout the "old south" and through New England to the Canadian border.

From the northeasternmost corner of Maine the club crew will work westward along the Canadian border as far as Winnipeg at one point and as far as Lake Louise at another. The return trip down the coast will include the state of Oregon and Washington.

Automobile Price or Value?

We believe that the buyer of an automobile is concerned far more with the value represented by his car than he is with the figure at which it sells.

The R&V Knight motor car has been honestly built. Its price has been determined by the actual value it represents.

An Honest Car—An Honest Value

R&V Knight values are not qualities of a moment, for the engine actually improves with use. Consequently satisfaction continues, and resale or second-hand value that may be deducted from first cost remains high for many years. Our cars are economical in operation and maintenance, another factor of real importance in determining values. The R&V Knight is by far the "better buy."

Out of oil again:—

Why ordinary oil is so rapidly consumed

HAVE you had this tough old motoring experience? Have you run out of oil miles from help, when you thought you started with supply enough for the hardest trip?

Whenever your engine consumes oil too fast, it is proof that you are using ordinary oil. Under the intense heat of the engine—200° to 1000° F.—inferior oil forms great quantities of black sediment. The thin oil remaining evaporates rapidly.

You can avoid this trouble. You can stop using up oil at such an expensive rate. Sediment is reduced 86% when you use Veedol, the lubricant that resists heat. (See the two bottles above). Veedol lasts for twice as many miles as ordinary oils.

Have your engine flushed out. Fill up with Veedol. Leading dealers have Veedol in stock. Ask for a supply to-day.

State Officials Get Behind New Federal Aid Bill

Popular Measure to Give Illinois $4,500,000 Annually

THE American Association of State Highway Officials, an organization composed of the state highway officials of the forty-eight states, charged with the highway construction in the several states, believes that the Dowell bill, now before congress, puts the matter of federal coöperation with the states in highway building on a clear, definite and permanent basis.

It adopts a permanent program and mkes requirements that will conserve the public funds. It provides coöperation between the federal authorities and state authorities. It establishes a system of roads of a scope sufficiently large to secure permanent construction requiring the least expenditure for maintenance. It takes care of the immediate needs of the largest number of rural communities, recognizing the fact that fully half of the wealth of this country is rural and the modern means of transportation, the automobile and truck, are half in the possession of the farmer, according to the builders.

This bill will include an authorization for the appropriation of $100,000,000 per annum—for a period of years to be determined in committee. An appropriation of this amount will give to the state of Illinois an allotment of aproximately $4,500,000 per annum.

"Taking into consideration the marketing of raw products, the transportation of merchandise, the social life of communities, and the federal functioning in mail delivery, as well as public safety and defense, it is natural that many varied interests should be involved and that there should be wide differences of opinion as to what roads are of the most immediate concern," says a bulletin issued by the association.

"There are those who would confine federal coöperation to certain types of construction and the funds to be expended on a very limited system, while others want the federal funds spread over so much territory each year that a connected system coördinating market service with federal demands would not get a real beginning.

"With the idea of combining these extreme views into a plan which will, as rapidly as possible, develop both intercounty and interstate roads, the people who are responsible for the road construction in each state have evolved a plan which is incorporated in section 7 of the Dowell bill.

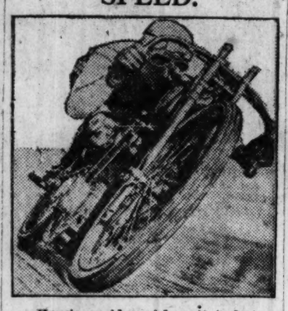
"It proposes that roads, to be given immediate consideration, shall be divided into two classes, primary or interstate roads, and secondary or intercounty roads.

"It is the purpose of this bill that the system of roads to first receive federal aid shall be chosen by the states through the various state highway departments in coöperation with the secretary of agriculture. It is believed that this plan meets the demand of the president when he stated that: 'Congress ought to prescribe conditions to federal appropriations which will necessitate a consistent program of uniformity which will justify the federal outlay.'"

"Maintenance of roads, once constructed," the statement adds, "has for years been the source of more trouble and contention than any other item of highway construction. Roads built by federal aid have been so recent that they have not had any appreciable chance to deteriorate if made of hard surfaced material; in fact, there are not over 300 miles of federal aid roads in the United States over 3 years old. But roads long since built with state and county funds have in many cases been allowed to take care of themselves, while the weight and speed of traffic have been increasingly augmented.

"To meet this very important situation this bill proposes, first, that the secretary of agriculture shall no approve any projects for the maintenance of federal aid roads, and by law shall place the maintenance work under the direct control of the state highway department; and, second, the rural post roads constructed under the provisions of the act shall be the duty of the states."

SPEED.



Here's an idea of how it feels to go 112 miles an hour. The remarkable speed picture, as unusual in its way as the speed feat itself, was taken at the new Beverly Hills speedway in Los Angeles recently when Fred Ludlow broke all "disappearing" records.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

CLOSING stages of the declining price movement which, during the last two months, has set the automobile market on a firm and stable basis for the future, were marked last week by announcement of substantial reductions made by four prominent manufacturers. The announcements include: Cuts of $760 on open models and $960 on closed models of the National car, effective July 2; cuts ranging from $100 to $900 on trucks manufactured by the International Harvester company; cuts ranging from $200 to $600 on all Lexington models, effective tomorrow, and a reduction of from $1,300 to $1,850 on models made by the Stanley Steamer Car company.

Veterans of the industry agree that prices generally have dropped as far as they are going to drop. In most instances the values represent those of pre-war days and have already served to stimulate buying to a remarkable extent.

H. P. Carter, general manager of the Buick Chicago branch, showed motordom something entirely new last week when he directed the movements of the 500 car motorcade of new cars from the Buick factory in Flint, Mich., to Chicago by wireless telephones. The big drive-away began Wednesday with 500 dealers of the Chicago territory in line. A wireless outfit was installed on every hundredth car to maintain a perfect line of communication through out the trip.

On Thursday evening a train of forty-five freight cars loaded with Essex touring cars left Detroit, bound for the Hudson Motor company of Illinois in Chicago, in response to an urgent demand for new stock.

B. H. Anibal, chief engineer of the Cadillac Motor Car company has resigned to associate himself with R. H. Collins. The latter recently withdrew from the Cadillac presidency to manufacture cars bearing his own name.

New Touring Bureau.

The Yellowstone Trail association has opened a new loop touring bureau at 215 West Washington street with A. L. Slade in charge. Maps and road reports covering not only the popular northwest trail, but national highways generally are available, free of charge, in the new bureau, which has already established complete lines of communication for highway work.

All entrances to Yellowatone park have been open for travel for some time, according to Washington advices and the park will be thrown open officially tomorrow.

Invaders.

Bagdad, in Mesopotamia, held its first agricultural tractor competition for fifteen consecutive days during the month of January last, with Austin, Fiat, Fordson, and Saunderson machines as the principal performers. The trials were followed with great interest by the Arab farmers, who were very quickly converted to the advantages of mechanical traction, and who placed orders for these machines without waiting for the final and technical results of the competition. The sight was picturesque in the extreme.

After New Members.

A membership drive of unusual proportions has been undertaken by the Chicago Motor club. The campaign started June 13th, it ends July 3d. Members are carrying windshield stickers on their cars. Booths have been erected in various parts of town and it is believed that thousands of motorists will flock into the club, which is the second largest in America.

It is of interest to know that the Chicago Motor club has more than doubled its record for new members during the first five months of this year over the same period of last year.

AVIATION

Rumors Hint the Stopping of Air Mail Sub-Routes

New York-Washington Line Has Been Closed

BY MORROW KRUM.

OUT on the Maywood air mail field, where the good weather is permitting the postal pilots to fly every day, rumors are chasing in and out of the hangars, the shops, and the headquarters office with the velocity of a De Haviland.

It is said that the Chicago-St. Louis division will soon be discontinued. Another report asserts that the ships will cease flying between Chicago and the Twin Cities before many more days. It is also rumored that army service cadets will take up the flying of the mail between Chicago and St. Louis.

An interview with C. A. Parker, present superintendent of the Cleveland-Omaha division of the postal air service, failed to bring a definite answer to any of the above questions.

"I cannot say for sure, although I have heard the rumors time and again," said Mr. Parker. "I do know that the service between New York and Washington has been discontinued. I also know that congress in making the new appropriation made no provision for the side routes. The appropriation specifically stated that the money was to be used to develop the New York and San Francisco service.

"So it does seem probable that the side lines running out of Chicago will be discontinud. However, I have received no official information on the subject."

The rumor regarding the dilvery of mail by cadet aviators could neither be confirmed nor refuted. There are no cadet aviators at Chanute field, Rantoul, though there are approximately 700 men attending the air service mechanics school. It is possible that cadets may be moved to that field from March field, California, or the Florida instruction fields for the summer months. If this could be done, it would afford the student aviators excellent cross-country training, Mr. Parker believes.

John Bull Gives Channel Flyers Financial Succor

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, June 16.—A new plan for government subsidy of civil aviation was published in London today. The government has set aside £600,000 (normally about $3,000,000) with which for a period of five years it will give assistance to aerial transportation firms, approved by the government, running a cross channel service.

The government will pay an amount equal to 25 per cent of their gross earnings to these firms, and it will also hire out to the companies airplanes of new approved types, built in government workshops. This will not hinder private building and experiments, which will also be encouraged. Special attention will be paid to the lines operating from London to Paris, Brussels, and Amsterdam.

All approved companies must be British owned, have British directors and managers, and employ British pilots and mechanics. The aircraft and engines must be of British manufacture. To qualify for the subsidy a firm must complete forty-five journeys each way, monthly, for a period of three months. The government also provides meteorological information by wireless free of charge and affords terminal and emergency aerodromes, lighting, and landing facilities at fixed charges.

No Sunday Flying.

Aircraft must not fly over Tampa, Fla., during hours of worship on Sundays, according to an order issued today by the city commissioners, as a result of complaints that airplanes soaring low over churches last Sunday so disturbed the congregations that many members were deprived of the benefit of spiritual advice from the pulpits.

NIMMO BLACK

Have you seen the snappy blue airplane hovering over the north shore recently, floating along, passing through the clouds, and looping now and then? That ship is piloted by Nimmo Black, whose picture is shown above. It is a Laird Swallow.

Plan Night Flying.

Cheyenne, Wyo., June 17.—Probable establishment of night flying in the air mail service between Cheyenne and Chicago and Cheyenne and Omaha July 1 was predicted here when Maj. E. C. Zoll, general superintendent of the air mail, who was making an inspection tour of the landing fields between the two coasts, visited Cheyenne. At present mail that arrives at either terminal at nightfall is carried by rail during the hours of darkness and picked up again by plane the following day. Maj. Zoll said he expected the new arrangement would result in the saving of twenty-four hours in time in the cross country flights.

Big Tires.

Goodyear has developed new tires to take the shock of landing huge planes of approximately six tons' weight. Several of the new 44x10 cord aeroplane tires have been made and approved by the Glenn L. Martin company for use on the big Martin bombers that will be placed in the service of the government. Goodyear has received an order for seventy-six of these new type tires.

Two McCool Pilots Touch 34,150 Ft. Ceiling in Le Pere

Believe They've Made World Altitude Record

WHAT is believed to be a new world's altitude record for pilot and passenger was made on May 6 by Lieut. J. A. Macready with Roy S. Langham as observer, when he reached a corrected indicated altitude of 34,150 feet above sea level in a Lepere biplane equipped with a Moss supercharger. This airplane is the same one in which Maj. Schroeder made his world's altitude record, both for pilot alone and for pilot and passenger. The preliminary calibrations of the instrument and the computations were performed by the flight test branch at McCook field.

The instrument and data gathered on the flight will be forwarded to the bureau of standards for final checking before a world record is claimed. It will be remembered that on the occasion of Maj. Schroeder's altitude flight the bureau of standards' computation of the results gave a figure more than a thousand feet higher than the preliminary computation performed at McCook field. In view of this it is considered very probable that Lieut. Macready has set a new record.

No difficulty was experienced by the pilot except the discomfort caused by the extreme cold at this high altitude and by the frosting of his goggles. Upon removing his glove in order to attempt to wipe ice from his goggles his left hand became so stiff from cold that he lost the use of it until the warm air at low altitude restored the circulation. The engine and supercharger functioned very satisfactorily.

For purposes of comparison it will be remembered that Maj. Schroeder's corrected indicated altitude for the one man record was 38,180 feet by the bureau of standards computation, and for the two men record was 35,350 feet, computed by the flight test branch at McCook field.

NOW AUSTRIANS CLAIM SUCCESS WITH HELICOPTER

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 16.—A helicopter that in tests has already risen more than 150 feet vertically from the ground has been developed in Austria, according to reports from a European correspondent of the national advisory board for aeronautics. In view of the experiments now being conducted by aviators in many countries, particularly the United States, France, and Great Britain, in an effort to design and construct a successful helicopter, the news is considered of great importance by flying men here.

According to the reports, the Austrian helicopter consists of a three armed frame built of steel tubes, equipped with three built in gasoline motors of the Le Rhone type, each developing 120 horsepower. The motors drive two propellor shafts revolving in opposite directions and the shafts in turn drive two propellors arranged one above the other on a central shaft, each nearly twenty feet in diameter. The propellors are attached to the upper plane of the helicopter and revolve in opposite directions at about 600 revolutions a minute. In the center or "hub" of the device above the propellors is the operating compartment, which is also fitted with a machine gun and a place for the gunner.

The device is equipped with a parachute so arranged as to open automatically in the event of an abrupt descent, the reports say.

Enjoy for Your Vacation this

Cool Refreshing Lake Superior Trip

There is wonderful attractiveness in a cruise on the Great Lakes when every comfort is at your command. Think of the enjoyment of spending an entire week upon the clear blue water, watching the changing scenery and sights of interest at the different ports of call. Then there are the wonderful moonlit evenings upon the broad and roomy decks, dancing and music in the ballroom and other sources of joy and entertainment. Think of the restfulness of such a trip—the energy and strength it will give you—how well you will eat and how well you will sleep.

Chicago to Duluth and Return Via Lake Michigan, Mackinac Island, Locks at The "Soo," Beautiful St. Mary's River, Portage Canal, Lake Superior, Lake Huron and Georgian Bay (30,000 Islands)

The Big New Steamship "North American" comparable only to the finest ocean liner leaves Chicago every Monday at 1:30 P. M. (Central Time) traveling through Lake Michigan directly to Mackinac Island, where ample time is allowed to drive around the island and visit the many historical points of interest. Leaving Mackinac Island, she enters the beautiful St. Mary's River, noted for its 50 miles of wonderful scenic features, and stops at Sault Ste. Marie. Here you pass through the big canal and see the immense ships raised and lowered through the locks, next to the largest in the world.

Leaving the "Soo", you enter Lake Superior and head via Portage Canal for Houghton (Hancock), home of the famous copper mines; then on to Duluth where you will find a panoramic scene of wondrous beauty. There is the boulevard drive along the crest of her mighty hill, seven miles of driveway, four hundred feet above the lake. After spending several hours in that city of beautiful parks and homes, the return is made, again through Sault Ste. Marie and into Lake Huron, then into Georgian Bay passing close to many of the 30,000 Islands and stopping at Parry Sound. From there directly to Mackinac Island and Chicago, arriving home Monday morning—a week's vacation that brings you back rested and feeling fine.

Away from the City —but near it

THERE is no more ideal choice for your summer home than the delightful Chicago Beach Hotel. On the shore of Lake Michigan and adjacent to a beautiful park, it is isolated from the noise and rush of the city and yet is only 12 minutes ride from the principal stores and best theaters.

Here you can have every convenience and luxury that you look for in the most luxurious hotel—tasty furnishing, tempting meals in perfectly appointed dining rooms and cafes and prompt and courteous service. Then from verandas and windows you enjoy wonderful views of the lake in all its moods. You get the refreshing breezes which temper the heat of Summer days—you take your plunge at an exclusive bathing beach and have ready access to every form of outdoor recreation—tennis, boating, motoring, horseback riding, golf—and, indoors, there are cards, dancing and music.

Best of all, you will like the friendliness and the lack of formality you will find here. The spirit of the place gives you the feeling of comfort which you have always associated with home. You can have an active life or a quiet one, just as you choose. The two modern buildings, containing 1,000 rooms, give you the choice of single rooms or suites at a wide range of moderate rates.

IT WAS Paul Adam who so eloquently said "Fashion is the art of bringing before the mind's eye, on the body of a graceful woman, all the wealth of our planet—the precious stones of its mines, the wool of its flocks, the skins of its wild beasts, its silks, flax and cotton, the plumage of its birds and the pearls from its seas. A beautifully dressed woman is therefore an epitome of the earth."

Garment Center Capitol, the manufacturing and business home of three score makers of woman's wear, is the greatest evidence of the importance of the garment trades in the history of the world.

But what is of more significance, the tenants of Garment Center Capitol will adhere to a code of practice which places the welfare of the merchant and his patron above all personal considerations.

The architectural glories of Garment Center Capitol; its palatial facilities for education, entertainment and recreation and its economies of manufacturing and distribution will directly and by example so influence the Needle Trades, as to benefit every woman in our land.

THE POTTERS

by J. P. McEvoy

They Also Serve Who Serve Themselves.

PROLOGUE.

CHO. (recites): When Solomon allowed as how there were no sub-solar novelties, Solomon spoke winged words . . . they will tell you in California between remarks on the climate that the cafeteria style of eating is original with them . . . is it? . . . about as original with them as the climate . . . we are merely devoluting to the manners and customs of our shaggy eared ancestors . . . when old Oswald Flintax wanted bear meat did he sit in his cave and wait for somebody to serve it to him? . . . he went out and got it: Self Service! . . . when we are hungry do we sit in our apartments and wait? . . . we go to a cafeteria: Self Service! . . . which shows that Oswald Flintax in his apartmentlike cave was just as modern as Peter E. Potter in his cavelike apartment.

Scene: The Fill Inn Cafeteria.

The Potters—Pa, Ma, Mamie, Bill, and the Baby—have come in for the evening meal. Ma has gone ahead to reserve the table and mind the baby while the rest of them tote the trays. The Lord helps those who help themselves in a cafeteria.

MAMIE: Why do they make the trays so hot?
On a summer's day
I love a tray
That's nice and warm to carry . . . not!

BILL: C'mon, speed up; you're delaying the game—
You don't have to park at the salad, Mame!
If you want some lettuce pick it and grab it . . .
You and your lettuce . . . you eat like a rabbit.

PA: You'd think you were home the way you crab;
Make up your mind what you want and grab.

MAMIE (to girl):
I don't see a thing I want . . . O, dear!
Have you anything else besides what's here?

GIRL: Here's a nice beef stew . . . here's nice boiled rice . . .
Here's nice pot roast . . . the fish is nice . . .

BILL: If the fish is nice you shouldn't mind;
I do hate fish that's unrefined.

PA: What makes you two so blooming slow?
C'mon, let's go . . . c'mon, let's go.

MAMIE (takes ripe olives and moves on up to the dessert counter):
(muses) Shall I eat pie or shall I not?
(aloud) Will you tell me, please, what pie you've got?

(Note: It's all laid out there in front of her . . . but she always asks just the same . . . so do you.)

GIRL: applepeachrasbluberrypineapplecustard lemoncreamwurzwurzwurzwurzwurz.

MAMIE: I don't think I want any pie, anyway . . .
Have you got any New York cream today?

GIRL: N'Yorkchoc'latev'nillystrawb'rypeachchoc'latev'nilly.

MAMIE: New York ice cream is very nice,
But I think I'll take a pineapple ice.

BILL (who has some of everything in the place on his tray and who has just caught up):
Are you here yet? For the love of Mike!
Why don't you glom your food and hike?

MAMIE (looking Bill's tray over):
Speaking of glomming food, old kid,
You glommed a few . . . I'll say you did.

BILL (indignantly):
Gwan and nibble your lettuce and ice.
A man wants to eat when he's got the price.

MAMIE: It calls itself a man . . . har! har!
It's a little pig, that's what it are.

PA: There's other people here, you know;
Grab your food . . . c'mon, let's go.

(So Mamie gets some root beer and moves on up to the lightning calculator, who looks at her tray once and gives her the sad tidings. Bill staggers up next. His imagination is bigger than his appetite . . . it always is in a cafeteria . . . but nothing staggers the blonde calculator with the tanglefoot memory and the mouse trap mind . . . one glance and she has it all figured out to the third decimal . . . how do they get that way? . . . Einstein, ho! ho! . . . how long would be last figuring up the trays at the cafeteria toll gate? . . . Pa is last but not forgotten . . . Bill and Mamie have thoughtfully left their checks behind for him to gather up.)

MAMIE: What has happened to Ma, y'spose?

BILL: How should I know? Ask dad, he knows!

(Ma, with that unerring feminine instinct for making it more difficult for the male, has climbed up into the balcony and reserved a table in the farthest corner. To this Pa, Bill, and Mamie are now steering their hazardous way. Of course Bill's coffee and Pa's is lapping gently all over the tray by this time.)

MA (to Pa):
See if they've got a high chair here,
Then get two glasses of water, dear . . .
Then get our food . . . here, take your tray;
I'll watch the child while you're away . . .

"When do I eat, I'd like to know?"

PA: Where can I find a high chair, eh?
Just hold the kid in your lap, I'd say . . .
(picks up tray)
Another trip! My poor old feet!
Wattle I bring you two to eat?

MA: You needn't bring me an awful lot . . .
Let's see . . . let's see, now . . . what have they got?

PA: What have they got? What haven't they got!
If you think I'll recite the list, I'll not.

MA (meditatively):
Well, let's see, now . . . for the baby . . . rice pudding—have they got nice rice pudding? Is it well cooked? Be sure it's well cooked . . . rice should always be well cooked . . . and let me see—yes, mashed potatoes with gravy on them . . . be sure the potatoes are well cooked . . . potatoes should always be well cooked . . . and milk, if it's pasteurized . . . but of course it's pasteurized . . . you might ask them . . . now, don't forget . . . some nice rice pudding and some nice mashed potatoes with gravy on them.

PA: You mean with nice gravy on them, don't you?

MA (ignoring the interruption):
. . . and a nice bottle of milk . . . and you can bring me . . . O, let me see . . . just bring me anything that you think I'd like, but don't bring me anything too heavy, just something light and nice . . . well, you know.

(Yes, he does! But he goes anyway . . . experience has taught him he wouldn't get any more definite instructions in an hour.)

PA (exit grumbling with tray):
She picks the balcony every time;
She certainly loves to see me climb . . .
. . . (bluh!-bluh!-bluh!-bluh! . . . goes downstairs talking to himself.)

BILL (to Mamie):
I'm not crowding you, am I? Why don't you move your tray?

MAMIE: You've got all the food in the place now. Do you want all the room, too?

BILL: Just for that I've got a good mind not to give you the ripe olives I brought along for you.

MAMIE (slightly touched by Bill's unexpected thoughtfulness):
You remembered I liked ripe olives? Well, that was sweet of you

BILL: Aw, don't get mushy.

MA (looking at Mamie's tray):
What have got there? Ripe olives, a silly little ice . . . and root beer? Why don't you eat something? It's a wonder you're not dead.

MAMIE: Bill eats enough for both of us.

MA (to Baby):
Here, take that napkin out of your mouth . . . It's a wonder your father wouldn't hurry up . . . the poor child is starving.

BILL: Give him some of your root beer, Mamie.

Nothing staggers the blonde calculator.

PA (staggers in with tray):
Well, here you are; I hope this'll do . . .
Here, Ma, I brought you some nice beef stew.

MA: What else could one expect from you?
You know I just can't stand beef stew . . .

PA (ignoring interruption):
And here's potatoes and milk and rice . . .
I hope for the love of Mike they're nice.
(to Mamie)
I saw something there you like to eat,
So I brought 'em along to give you a treat.
(One guess . . . that's right . . . ripe olives!)

MA: Of course you bring ripe olives, too;
That's just what I'd expect from you . . .
Here, clear this off . . . take away the tray;
Get us some water right away . . .
Hurry up, Pa, don't be so slow . . .

PA: When do I eat, I'd like to know? . . .
I didn't come here to be chased to death—
Let me sit down and catch my breath.

(But he doesn't get to sit down . . . he takes the tray and starts downstairs for the water, not realizing there's a fountain right around the post on the balcony.)

Another climb! My poor old feet . . .
When do I get a chance to eat?

(Everything comes to an end some time, even a cafeteria meal. Ma, with the assistance of Pa, Bill, and Mamie, gets the baby's wraps on, and they all file down past the cashier's desk. Pa, as befits the head of the house, brings up the tail end of the procession.)

CASHIER: Hurry up, please; hurry up, please . . . sixty-three out of two dollars . . . forty-six out of a dollar . . . hurry up, please . . . yes, it's a nice day . . . don't brag about it; you had nothing to do with it . . . they're a penny apiece . . . yes, two of them would be two cents . . . hurry up, please . . . (to Pa) How do you do, Mister Potter . . . yes, two twenty-three out of five . . . where have you been keeping yourself? . . . I'm glad to see you again . . . well, g'bye . . . hurry up, please . . . hurry up.

MA (on street to Pa):
She seems to know you pretty well;
What's her name, or won't you tell?

PA: She used to work where I used to eat . . .
(wearily) Gosh, I'm tired . . . O, my feet!

MA: Funny you can't remember her name . . .
She seems to know you just the same . . .
Here, carry the child across the street.

PA: Gosh, I'm tired . . . O, my feet!
(And that's that.)

Exactly the Right Car, that will give you the most for your money, cannot be found by chance—its selection requires a careful analysis of values.

The car you want will probably be an eight—for among the better class cars more eights are produced and sold than all other types combined.

Therefore, compare eights for power, pick-up, workmanship, comfort, appearance—and then for price.

You will wonder why, for actual superiority in essentials, Peerless prices are lowest.

The answer is—Peerless prices are based upon former low costs of buildings and machinery, and upon present costs of labor and materials.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Woman Scientist Chicago's Chief Guest of Week

By Mme. X.

LOOK out over the world today, across seas and continents. Do you see anywhere so distinguished, so really great a woman as the frail, elderly Polish woman who was Chicago's chief guest last week? When the names of the famous politicians, the noted society leaders, the powerful financiers of the times have perished in the dust of coming ages, Mme. Curie's will still be remembered, and placed with those of Galileo, Newton, Franklin, Darwin, Roentgen, and their ilk.

But what a droll world it is we live in! How limited the vision of most of us! How prevailing is darkness! A French grande dame, who occupies a prominent position in her own country and is visiting this country, was asked recently if she knew Mme. Curie.

"Mon Dieu, no!" was her answer. "I know no one of the scientific world. I know only people of the social world."

The inflection was unmistakable. There was no regret, no humility in it. As with a flash of lightning, she illumined the social world of an old order of things, an order in which there was no place for people of science, or art, or literature, unless they had also the requirements of society, such as manners, family, leisure, money, general culture.

English society is larger, more generous in its interests. The great world of London asks only of the people it receives, "What have you accomplished? Who are you? What can you contribute to our widely ranging, alert conversation?" It recognizes and welcomes genius as no other social center does. That is why it is the most interesting society to be found today.

Killed with Kindness.

Even in the land of her adoption, where she made her famous discovery, radium, as she worked beside her husband in their laboratory, Mme. Curie never received the universal recognition she has had here. It is, perhaps, just as well, as it might have ended her career long ago. To be killed with kindness is an honorable but an incurable death, and I only hope she escapes it in this country.

Her countrywomen, the Polish women of Chicago, did their best to make her return ticket useless in their reception of her last Monday at the Dearborn street station. They swarmed past all barriers and upset all the nicely laid plans of the local American committee to give her a staid and dignified reception.

If it were not that her stay here is short, this column would suggest that Mme. Curie use as a protection from the too ardent enthusiasm which everywhere threatens to overwhelm her the little tube of radium which the nation has presented to her. This, held out, with a warning not to get burned by it, might keep off the swarms of overenthusiastic mobs that beset her path whenever she goes abroad.

But what a tremendous experience it must be for the quiet, shy, retiring scientist! She returns to France not only with the precious $100,000 bit of radium she has so long coveted but with enough money subscribed by Americans to support her for life and another sum to enable her to go on with her experiments.

It is only to be hoped that the hurly-burly of her trip through this country has not disturbed the tranquillity and poise necessary for continued scientific investigation. She goes with the good wishes of all America, and leaves behind her the memory of a remarkable and really great personality, qualities which shine out of her serene countenance.

Women in Philanthropy.

There is an irresistible force in the community, a power more undeniable than that of the great dam at Keokuk, and that is woman in philanthropy. Those tricky Chinese almost upset this tremendous current when they suddenly ceased being famine stricken. Just how they accomplished this we have not yet discovered. It was a masterly, if somewhat dastardly, surprise. It threw out of gear the proposed fête at the Casino which was set for next Wednesday evening.

It almost ditched the theatrical benefit of Friday afternoon. Fortunately the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society, a most excellent enterprise, bobbed up in the nick of time as a needy and worthy cause, and a delightful afternoon was the result, with, we hope, a generous return, financially speaking, for those needy youngsters.

The next thing the woman in philanthropy has to offer the hurrying world is something which will be placed strategically right in the path of one of the biggest currents of rushing humanity—that is, in the Patten gymnasium on Sheridan road in Evanston. Beginning next Thursday and continuing for three days will be the Evanston county fair, designed, organized, and carried out entirely by women—by 500 of them.

It is to be both spectacular and domestic. To the former division belongs the baby show. Also the children's contests wherein the prizes will be a puppy, a fountain pen (fancy the joy in the family of the recipient), a tennis racket, etc. To the latter belongs the exhibition of many domestic utilities ranging from milk bottle openers to central heating plants. Awards will be made for the best jams, jellies, cakes, preserves, and pickles. Doesn't it sound as if grandma had returned?

Adorned with a Question Mark.

Mrs. Laurence De Golyer and Mrs. Sewall Avery will be in charge of the Chinese tearoom with Evanston belles in Chinese costumes assisting in serving (you see, those Chinese persist in their appeal to our imaginations).

If you see attractive young women wearing hats whose turned up brims are adorned with a question mark you will know that they are the official guides and purveyors of information. They will be under the direction of Mrs. H. M. Gridley. Mrs. Robert H. Gault has charge of the checkroom, and her young assistants will have checker caps made of checked gingham.

Music and amusements will be in the hands of a committee headed by Mrs. E. K. Hardy and Mrs. Dudley Figgis. Mrs. Thomas Eddy is chairman of demonstrations, Mrs. Wilbur D. Nesbit of publicity, Mrs. G. Patterson Fuller and Mrs. Wallace Patterson of coupon books and tickets, Mrs. Walter Steele of transportation, and Mrs. A. B. Phipps of small wares. Mrs. Walter Dill Scott, Mrs. George B. Dryden, and Mrs. Arthur Rogers will act as hostesses.

The three chief managers are Mrs. Charles G. Little, representing the King's Daughters; Mrs. John Towne, representing the Northwestern University settlement, and Mrs. Edward P. Welles, representing the guild of St. Mark's Episcopal church, which three enterprises are to benefit from the fair. If thousands don't pour in from the great automobile highway they will miss a good show which only costs 25 cents.

Pointing a Moral.

"Boston is a dead city."

This remark was made by some one who had recently returned from there. The traveler went on to analyze this condition. It could be traced partly to the belief that Boston had not returned to social normalcy since the war, but the principal emphasis was laid on the fact that Boston had never recovered from the loss of the excellent grand opera which was a feature of that city some years ago.

This institution was chiefly financed by a prominent merchant of "the Hub." When, in the course of time, he withdrew his support Boston made no endeavor to keep her opera.

It toured the country, and well does Chicago remember the excellent impression made by this troupe. The tour ended, the company dissolved into thin air, and Boston, after losing her opera, slowly settled down into being one of the provincial cities of the east.

This is a condition on which we would not dwell if it were not to point a moral and adorn a tale. If Chicago loses her superlative grand opera company she, too, will sink back into a similar position of provincialism, without Boston's saving grace of an inherited tradition of culture which at least "saves her face." Lacking that we shall be considered by many to merit the reputation the world has sometimes given us of being material, sold to sense, and lacking in aspirations for the higher life.

Programs and Literature.

So let the community put its shoulder to the wheel—and don't forget, you are the community—and out of, not our surplus, but what we have, set aside for the most necessary expenses, let us produce the required guarantee fund to make the opera possible.

"There is no reason apparent why opera in Chicago should not be practically self-supporting—it is so in New York," say the present promoters of our opera.

A rather captivating feature of the proposition is that the name of each guarantor will be appear on every program from New York to San Francisco. There will stand for all the world to read the names of Chicago's most public spirited citizens.

It is a roster which is sure to be studied by men and women from the Atlantic to the Pacific. You know how often the program in a theater is idly perused in the entre-acts when the only reading is advertisements of corsets or hair nets. If in addition to these interesting statements one can read the names of the foremost folk of an important metropolis, the program becomes literature.

Inspecting Apple River.

Do you know where Apple river is? If not, you must ask some member of that lively and peripatetic body, The Friends of Our Native Landscape. They know, because about forty of them explored the banks and braes of Apple river (What is a brae?) a week ago. Under the leadership of Jens Jensen, president of the Friends of O. N. L., and with the assistance of Prof. Pepoon of the Warren High school, the enterprising forty forded and reforded this rustic stream.

They first took a train to Warren, an ancient village in Joe Daviess county. From there they started out and made a six mile hike to a certain spot on the river where the miniature canyon, for which the district is famous, widened out so that the company could establish itself on one side while the performers, who provide the dramatic entertainments at these hikes, could stage on the other side of the stream a presentation of Kenneth Sawyer Goodman's "Masque," a ceremony which takes place every year. There was also much made of lighting the huge bonfire which is a feature of these occasions.

The especial object of this hike was to inspect the Apple River canyon with a view to recommending that it be made a state park. The Friends of O. N. L. have been helpful in promoting the forest park preserves in various localities. They are old habitués and lovers of the Dunes, and have at one time and another tramped over many of Illinois' picturesque districts.

Hikers from the Wicked City.

One of the most ardent of the members of this association is Eames MacVeagh, who is its treasurer. Especial guests of his on this expedition were Mrs. Jacob Baur, Miss Dorothy Keeley, and Graham Aldis.

Mrs. Baur proved herself to be not only a hiker who would not be daunted by anything, but also one who interested herself in the native population. The latter clustered about the city trampers in numbers, and tried to understand why this large contingent of cosmopolites should willingly leave their comfortable asphalt pavements and high power motors to foot it back and forth across their little burbling stream. They listened eagerly, if not entirely with understanding, to Mrs. Baur's explanation.

Hereafter many a denizen of that unenlightened and faraway corner of the world will gaze with perplexity at Apple river and at its steep banks, and wonder what it was all about. They may even suspect some dark and dire conspiracy on the part of the lively company from the great and wicked city.

Are you a bridgite? If so, feed the hunger the true devotee feels for a good game by taking a table at the big tournament the Chicago branch of the Alliance Française is giving next Saturday afternoon at the Drake hotel.

The alliance is one of the most useful of our social and educational institutions; also one of the most varied in the many lines of work it furthers among both our American and our French population. It is a strong force to promote a good understanding between ourselves and the French. It is carried under the auspices of the French government, which sees in it a good medium for friendly feeling. Henry J. Patten is honorary president and Mrs. Milan Hurlbert is active president of the Chicago branch.

Off for Distant Lands.

An adventurous spirit always has animated Chicago travelers. Miss Mary Waller, for instance, who is the favorite secretary for all the energetic women who organise our great charity benefits, is leaving us today to join friends in New York and make the tour of South America. The party plans to go down the east coast and return by way of the west coast. They will cross the Andes after leaving Buenos Aires. Miss Waller will not be at home before October.

Many clouds on our political horizon would disperse or grow lighter were more of our pleasure travel diverted to the interesting and picturesque countries which lie on our side of the globe and to the south of the equator. Also business relations between the two Americas would improve.

Another Chicago party which is planning to explore distant lands is the trio consisting of Mr. and Mrs. C. Barney Goodspeed and Mrs. William J. Calhoun. They set forth in August, and their first destination, after a trip through Japan, is China. There Mrs. Calhoun will make quite a long sojourn, while the Goodspeeds will continue on a trip around the world.

Mrs. Calhoun is returning to a well known and well beloved city, Peking. There she and her husband, the late William J. Calhoun, spent several years when he made such a fine record as American minister to China. While it is probable that she will note many changes there, it is safe to prophesy that in that ancient country it is easier to find old haunts undisturbed, old friends ditto, than in younger, less permanent communities.

Charmed with Peking.

So delighted was Mrs. Arthur Ryerson with Peking and conditions of life there that she postponed her return to this country, which was planned for June, and took a house in Peking, a house with a lovely Chinese garden. There she and Miss "Dodo" Winterbotham and Mrs. Ryerson's son-in-law, George W. Patterson, have been spending the spring and early summer.

Mrs. Ryerson and Miss Winterbotham are sailing from Yokohama on July 2. After spending a few days in the Canadian Rockies, which means at Banff and Lake Louise, Mrs. Ryerson will go to her country place on Otsego Lake, N. Y., while Miss Winterbotham will join her family in the east. Mr. Patterson remains for another two years in China.

Have you heard about the party at Farmer Carry's on Green Bay road, Lake Forest, set for next Friday evening? There'll be a jazz band, ice cream, hot dogs, peanuts, cider, lollypops, popcorn, and fudge; a sliderious for the venturesome, and a palmist for the curious, and last, but not least, there'll be dancing in the barn! It is a country party gotten up by the junior auxiliary of the Children's Memorial hospital. Miss Harriet McLaughlin of Lake Forest has charge of the tickets.

Introducing to Chicago the

Gainaday
Washer Ironer

The L. Klein Store Is Chicago Headquarters for the Gainaday Washer and Ironer

NEVER satisfied with the mediocre, we set out on a search for an electric washing machine that would give unfailing satisfaction and service, that would be so good and reliable that we could guarantee it unreservedly.

Our search was at an end when we found the Gainaday electric washer and ironer. Here we discovered two modern home appliances worthy of a place in every home, where homekeeping is conducted on the basis of least effort, least time, least expense.

We went through the factory, watched the making of the Gainaday washer and ironer from raw materials to the finished product, and came away convinced that these two machines are the last word in scientific construction, strength, durability and economy in operation.

The manufacturers enjoy so excellent a reputation that we were glad to connect with them, thus doubling the guarantee that goes with every washer and ironer, as it means the manufacturer's guarantee and our own.

Demonstration gladly arranged in your home or at the store, incurring no obligation whatsoever.

SUBSTANTIAL REDUCTIONS HAVE BEEN MADE ON ALL MODELS of GAINADAY WASHERS and IRONERS

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

Life of the Child Subject of Report for Club League

THE following report of the sub-educational committee of the League of Cook County Women's clubs, which is given in part, was made by the chairman, Mrs. T. Vernette Morse. It is of inestimable value to those interested in the home life, the education, and the proper development of young minds. In so far as possible, the report has been left in its full form.

"Your subcommittee was appointed to learn, if possible, something of the beginnings of education — research work for the education and development of children. There being no place wherein systems did not predominate, we used the Vocational Art institute as a nucleus of endeavor. That body organized to meet educational conditions, and was free to study the situation from an unbiased viewpoint.

"Children from broken homes of the middle classes were gathered together for the experimental work; parents paying all or part of the actual expense; teachers donating their time.

"From the first the public schools joined heartily into the plan, and the result is that during the two years there has not been a vacancy except through the reconstruction of the natural home of the child.

"For health building the family is given the best of building foods, plenty of sleep, exercise, and the real home care that should be a part of every child's life.

"The younger children are taught at home, and as soon as they are sufficiently balanced for outside associations they are sent to school well prepared to assume their part in the daily school life. For two years these children have passed their examinations at an average of over 90 without crowding.

"The work is no longer an experiment, but an established fact. It is wholly undenominational and unclassified, for it is based upon the daily life of the child. It makes the home the basis of life and growth, leaving the public schools to supply the classification.

"The principles of psychology, art, and science are correlated into an educational base of operation. The home is the ideal place to put these principles into practice. The homemakers are the only ones who can actually live psychology; others simply apply it after the lines of action have become fixed avenues of habit.

"The homemakers are the lifemakers of the nation. They gather together all human material. Whatever is produced in the home must eventually go out into the world as a working force of some kind. The foregoing principles are correlated in such a manner that parents as well as children may put them into practice in home, school, or business life.

"To classify this theory and put it into actual work day after day, has been a most interesting study. To teach children how to care for themselves properly has required all of the psychological knowledge that your committee could command. But the results have been a revelation to many of our greatest psychologists. Men and women have been here from other cities to study the plan.

"To combine these features so that others might use them intelligently in their own homes has been the prime object of this committee. Children seemed to have been left out of this type of education heretofore. They take to it readily, and actually become creators of constructive activities that we have considered entirely beyond the concept of the child mind.

"To have these principles incorporated into the home life is not only responsible, but comparatively easy. Any intelligent homemaker may learn the principles upon which the work is done in two or three weeks. It teaches humanity how to live in the modern home in an intelligent manner. It conserves the human energy of the homemakers and the entire family. When we teach a child how to use its mental and physical forces we are training our own.

"It is just life and growth—just such life as we all need in the home to counteract the great wave of unrest that has the country in its grasp.

"Peter Mortenson has shown invariable interest and given much assistance to the league. It has been our part to learn as much about the home training of the child as possible, and watch the child at school. The school is the business life of the child just as much as the office is headquarters for the business man. To teach a child how to conduct itself at school is preparing it for a future business life. In all of this Mr. Mortenson has been a valuable advisor.

"This committee feels that it is a child of the League of Cook County clubs. The league has made it possible for the activities herein described. This summer there will be camps for school girls and young matrons, thus extending the work in larger fields. It is human resources that make up the entire total of the world's work. To cultivate them in the home gives to that time honored institution renewed activity."

Do You Really Cleanse Your Skin?

YOUR pores are constantly being clogged by impurities such as dust, dirt and powder which mix with the natural oils of the skin. If these impurities are allowed to remain in the pores, your skin cannot breathe and the pores become enlarged and irritated. Your skin becomes wrinkled, oily and coarse.

Soap and Water Will Cleanse the Surface But—

Water will not mix with oil, so a cleansing cream is absolutely necessary for skin-health and beauty. Angelus Lemon Cleansing Cream not only cleanses the pores but at the same time it softens, firms and clears the surface. Your complexion becomes fresh and glowing—years drop away from your appearance because you have a youthful skin.

With the Tips of the Fingers—

apply Angelus Lemon Cleansing Cream. Work it gently but firmly into the skin, rubbing upward and outward. Then with a soft cloth, remove the cream from your face. You will be surprised at the amount of dust, dirt and powder that comes out of the pores. Your skin will feel cool and fresh and clean—its texture will be smooth and firm. Angelus will not promote the growth of hair, neither will it leave the skin greasy.

Begin tonight to protect your skin from the ravages of Summer exposure by using Angelus Lemon Cleansing Cream.

ANGELUS LIP STICK

Gives a permanent and natural moist red to the lips. Prevents the lips from chapping. Heat and water will not affect it. Massage a little well into the lips and allow it to dry by keeping the lips apart for a few moments. The fascinating color will not come off until removed with a cleansing cream.

Avoid That "Dyed" Look

Tint—Yet Keep Lace Trimmings White

TINTEX is the only dye that, in the light pastel shades, will tint your dainty lingerie or filmy blouses and at the same time leave the lace trimming new and white. The delicate, lighter shades of Tintex have been especially prepared so that they will not affect the lace unless the garment is left in the solution too long.

And of importance, too, is the fact that in the darker shades, where fashion demands the lace to be tinted also, Tintex will tint the lace.

Dissolve this wonderful dye powder in the clear rinsing water and restore your underthings to lovely newness while you rinse. Tintex contains no mussy, injurious soap. It is simply a dye powder.

Tintex may be obtained at all drug and department stores, at 15c. a package. 15 fashionable colors.

WHITEX
The New Bluing for Silk and Wool
Restores original whiteness to white silks and woolens that have become yellow from laundering. Use Whitex in the rinsing water. Harmless to the most delicate fabric. 15c. a package at all drug and department stores.

ART AND ARCHITECTURE

Lectures by Lorado Taft on Sculpture Are in Book Form

By Eleanor Jewett.

"SCULPTURE should be the most exceptional of the arts. It should eternalize only the rarest and the most absolutely beautiful moments of life, choosing with irreproachable discrimination from the forms, the joys, and the sorrows of humanity. A sculptured moment which is not admirable is a permanent crime, a persistent and inexcusable obsession."

These few lines from Maeterlinck serve to introduce the admirable text of "Modern Tendencies in Sculpture" by Lorado Taft. The lectures presented in this volume comprise the thirteenth series of Scammon lectures delivered at the Chicago Art institute on the Scammon foundation. The Scammon lectureship was established on an ample basis by bequest of Mrs. Maria Sheldon Scammon, who died in 1901.

The will which Mrs. Scammon left prescribes that these (the Scammon) lectures shall be upon the history, theory, and practice of the fine arts (meaning by this the graphic and plastic arts), and shall be given by persons of distinction or authority in the subject on which they lecture, such lectures to be primarily for the benefit of the students of the Art institute, and secondarily for members and other persons. The lectures, delivered each spring, are known as the "Scammon Lectures."

This year the Scammon lectures, as will be remembered, were given by Jay Hambridge on the general subject "Dynamic Symmetry in Design," and developed the interesting powers of the "Square Root of 5." The lectures in book form, just published by the University of Chicago press, are those of Lorado Taft, given in 1917, and afford a wonderfully interesting view of the modern tendencies in sculpture—from which fact, no doubt, the title of the book was evovled.

The book opens with a chapter devoted to the art of Auguste Rodin, that great master among French artists. Following comes an excursion into the broader field of recent French sculpture and its companion chapters on recent German sculpture and the recent sculpture in various other lands. Then, returning to this side of the Atlantic, Mr. Taft presents us with an illuminating picture of Saint-Gaudens, man and sculptor, and closes his account with the last chapter: "Some Recent Tendencies in American Sculpture."

It is not at all a technical book. There is nothing in its pages to fright those afraid of learning something, even by chance. It is written in the smooth, flowing, interesting style which marks his spoken lectures, and is so attractively set forth that the eye follows tirelessly from page to page the beautifully simple prose, broken as it is by the introduction of innumerable photographs. There is a great deal of the personal in it. Mr. Taft is not bashful before the first person singular. But the more "I's" you discover on a page, the better pleased you are with the page, for the artist's own feelings, discoveries, knowledge, and experiences are the high points in his exposition of modern art.

Possibly the most striking feature of the book, offhand, is the feeling with which you are impressed from cover to cover that here is a man who knows his subject. You are safe with him. What he says, you may believe. His cup of knowledge is raised to your lips; you may drink without fear—the water in the cup is pure. And with all that, the vast realm from which Mr. Taft quotes, gracefully and genially, is to you another window into delightful places, peopled by men and women who either have been or now are of purpose to the world.

This "Modern Tendencies in Sculpture" is one book which the vacation bag should carry with it this summer to woods or lake. A sunny day, a hammock under a big pine, and it, would not be in the least a travesty on the trinity of Omar Khayam: "A loaf of bread, a jug of wine, and thou." They both spell satisfaction.

Speaking of summer brings us to a mention of the fact that registrations are being made for the summer school of painting at Saugatuck, which opens June 27 and closes Sept. 3. The class will leave Chicago for Saugatuck Saturday, June 25, by boat. The thirteenth season of the school will open on the following Monday. The transformed Riverside hotel, called now the Oxbow Inn, is in readiness. Camping privileges adajacent to the inn may be obtained. Frederick F. Fursman, director of the school, will take charge of the arrangements.

This Saugatuck school is an organization valuable enough to the painters of Chicago to be discussed at length, and lovely enough in its setting of pines and lake and river to have its beauties dilated upon a bit for the interest of those of us who know altogether too little about it. It is under the auspices of the Art Instiute Alumni association and a board of trustees. At the March meeting of the Municipal Art league the board of directors voted the sum of $100 to provide for two scholarships in the summer of the present year for the school.

The school now possesses its own home, with spacious grounds and a studio, and offers nearly the opportunity gratis, which is thrust upon painters of the Provincetown group, for accomplishing something lasting in art. The first steps to acquire the Saugatuck property were taken in 1919. Formerly the students stayed at the hotel, one mile from the village, near the mouth of the Kalamazoo river, and close to the sands of Lake Michigan. An option on this place was secured two years ago.

Last summer at a meeting of the students it was decided to take up the option, and more than one-half of the required amount of stock was subscribed by the students then and there. The balance of the stock was later disposed of, and on Nov. 20 the title to the property was secured. Since then five acres, heavily wooded in pine, helmlock, beech, and hard maple, adjoining the school ground on the north, have been bought from Mrs. William S. Harbert. This is one of the most beautiful of the many beautiful wooded areas in Michigan.

The original property consists of the thirty room hotel, a four room cottage, a studio building, a dormitory, store building, barn, and seven acres of land. The price of $8,500, also included the furnishings and equipment. Two driven wells, supplying abundant water, are operated by a windmill and an engine. The land area is five miles of cleared land and two acres of pine woods.

From the point of view of comfort and convenience, everything has been done to the place that human wit can devise. It is of interest to note that of all those who helped in reorganizing and encouraging the school, not one person received a cent of salary for his work. Part of the fund being raised at present is to be used for more improvements and part set aside for a sinking fund.

The board of directors of the Summer School of Painting consists of Arthur Aldis, Thomas Eddy Tallmadge, Edgar A. Rupprecht, R. Fayerweather Babcock, and Frederick F. Fursman. Mr. Fursman is also director of the school, as I believe was mentioned above. Last summer there was an attendance of ninety-six students, thirty of whom were members of the Art Institute Alumni association. This year's attendance promises to break that record.

On Friday the annual exhibition of the work of the students of the Art institute school opened, and the twenty-eighth annual exhibition of the Arts Students' league of Chicago. These two exhibits will be taken up next week.

"In the Sahara Desert," by Adalbert Kossak, hung in the exhibition of contemporary Polish art, which closed last week at the Art institute.

An announcement of importance from the institute is that of a gift made by Mrs. Henry C. Dangler (formerly Miss Ruth Davis of Chicago) to the institute of the sum of $50,000 to be used in the purchase of furniture and decorative objects of the French eighteenth century, to be housed in a special period room set apart and known, with its art treasures, as the Henry C. Dangler room.

The Friends of American Art have purchased for their collection the bronze sculpture, "Winged Horse," by John Storrs, whose exhibit at the Arts club last winter created great enthusiasm.

In so prescribed a space as we have here, it is almost impossible to tell even the smallest part of the story of the charm and originality of the Blum Millinery—of the many clever "lines" which have that "something" the well-groomed woman demands—embracing modes for evening wear, dinner and theater hats, hats for afternoon and the tea dansant, for brides and bridesmaids, for out-of-door and correct street wear—garden hats and sports models for tennis, golf and the country club.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Northern Baptist Convention in Des Moines This Year

By Rev. Gardner MacWhorter.

THE fourteenth annual convention of the northern Baptists will be held in Des Moines from June 22 to June 29 with 5,000 delegates and guests from foreign lands and representatives from many foreign countries in attendance.

The denomination expects this convention to be even larger and of greater importance than the one held in Buffalo last year. Issues growing out of the economic pressure of the times, the new conditions in several foreign lands where the Baptists are at work, and the unsettled social conditions of this country will be among the subjects which will be discussed in Des Moines.

There are 10,666 Northern Baptist churches and approximately 1,500,000 Northern Baptists in the United States.

The convention is to be held at the Coliseum with additional daily meetings in the Auditorium, at the First Baptist church and the other downtown churches.

Among foreign visitors will be missionaries from the orient and visitors from Baptist churches in Europe and Asia.

In addition to the convention, the Women's Foreign Missionary society will hold its jubilee during the same week and there will be a preliminary conference on evangelism to be held in the First Baptist church.

The convention motto is "Fellowship with Christ," and the opening service on Wednesday morning will be addressed on that topic by the Rev. C. N. Arbuckle of Newton Center, Mass. Addresses of welcome will be made by the mayor of Des Moines, H. H. Barton, and the governor of Iowa, Nate E. Kendall, to which the president of the Northern Baptist convention, Ernest L. Tustin, prominent Philadelphia attorney at law, will respond.

The jubilee of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission society will be celebrated on the first afternoon when Mrs. Andrew MacLeish of Glencoe will speak of "The Work of the Society at the Home Base," and the work of fifty years in India, China, Japan, Burma, and Assam will be reviewed. The jubilee pageant recently presented in Chicago will be presented in the evening, and stereopticon pictures of the jubilee celebrations throughout the United States will be shown.

Other days of the convention will be given up to sessions on the American Baptist home mission, education, foreign mission, and publication societies, and the convention will be brought to a close with a symposium on "Church and Community Efficiency."

The Rev. W. O. WATERS S.T.D.

The Rev. William Otis Waters, S. T. D., rector of Grace church, 1439 South Wabash avenue, for the last eighteen years has served but one other parish in the thirty-one years of his ministry in the Episcopal church—St. Andrew's church, Detroit, Mich.—where he was the assistant minister for one year during his diaconate; rector after his ordination to the priesthood for twelve years.

Dr. Waters is a graduate of Hobart college, Geneva, N. Y., class of 1884. When he returned in 1909 to preach the baccalaureate sermon at the twenty-fifth reunion of his class, his alma mater honored him with the degree of doctor of sacred theology.

As president of the Chicago Hobart College Alumni association Dr. Waters has brought together the alumni of the middle west each year for many years to meet the president of Hobart college, and draw the graduates back to their alma mater. He has recently returned from the ninety-ninth commencement, where great enthusiasm was manifest over the approaching centennial of the college, $100,000 having been pledged by the alumni toward a $1,000,000 fund to be raised for Hobart's one hundredth anniversary.

Dr. Waters is an active member of the Theta Delta Chi fraternity, into which he was initiated at Hobart college more than forty years ago. He has invited the delegates to the seventy-fourth annual convention of the fraternity, which will be held in Chicago June 30 to July 2, to hold the commemoration service in Grace church on the afternoon of the opening day of the convention. The memorial services of the 1905 and 1910 conventions were held in Grace church, and in 1913 Dr. Waters was one of the banquet speakers. He will be assisted in the commemoration services this year by the Rev. Hugh M. MacWhorter, S. B., a graduate of Hobart college in 1910, and a member of the same charge of the Theta Delta Chi fraternity.

Shortly after coming to Grace church Dr. Waters was elected president of the Chicago chapter of the Actor's Church alliance, and in 1916 he was one of the chaplains to the Republican National convention.

The annual commencement exercises of Luther institute will be held on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at the American theater, Ashland boulevard and Madison street. The diplomas will be awarded to the seventy-one graduates by the Rev. W. C. Herrmann, director of the institute, and addresses will be made by two of the graduates, Ellen Rink and Arthur Christopher. Luther institute, a Lutheran high school fostered by the Missouri synod Lutherans of Chicago and vicinity, is now in its twelfth year, and has an enrollment of 215 pupils.

Two summer schools for rural pastors will be held by the Methodist Episcopal church in Illinois this summer at McKendree college, Lebanon, Ill., July 11 to 30, and at Garrett Biblical institute, Evanston, Aug. 1 to 20.

The national conference for social service workers in the Episcopal church will be held in Milwaukee beginning with the opening service this evening in St. Paul's church, to be addressed by Bishops Gailor and Johnson of New York and Colorado. John M. Glenn, director of the Russell Sage Foundation in New York, and other leaders in social service work, both clergy and laity, will lead conferences during the first three days of the week, and on Wednesday the great national conference on social service work will convene, lasting for one week, in which all churches and civic organizations will take part.

Memorial services for Methodist ministers buried in Rosehill cemetery will be held in that cemetery this afternoon at 3 o'clock under the direction of the Rev. O. F. Mattison of Evanston. Among the thirty-six graves to be visited and decorated with flowers are those of Bishops William Harris, L. L. Hamlin, S. M. Merrill, and C. C. McCabe. President C. M. Stuart of Garrett Biblical institute will offer the invocation; the Rev. W. C. Scott will read the responsive readings from the Holy Scriptures, and the Rev. Dr. W. A. Burch of Evanston will make the memorial address.

President Harding has written the following commendatory letter to Oscar S. Caplan, Chicago associate editor of the Young Men's Hebrew Association Y News: "The copy of the Y News which you have sent me strikes me as representing just about the right kind of an appeal that such a publication ought to make to young American men and women, quite regardless of their nationalistic derivation. It is good to know that we are able to be Americans together, and such efforts as are being put forth by the Y. M. H. A. represent the best inspiration to real Americanism. I hope you may have all success. Sincerely,

"WARREN G. HARDING,
White House, Washington, D. C."

St. Cyril's college, 6413 Dante avenue, of which the Rev. Hilary Oswald, O. C. C., one of the most brilliant Latin scholars in the United States, is president and prior of the Carmelite order of fifteen priests, celebrated its annual commencement at St. Ambrose's parish hall last Wednesday evening when thirty-six graduates received their diplomas. Judge John P. McGoorty made the commencement address. The baccalaureate sermon was preached last Sunday to the undergraduate student body numbering 250, by the Rt. Rev. Mgr. Francis C. Kelley, P. A. D. D., president of the Roman Catholic Church Extension society, at St. Cyril's college.

The honorary degree of doctor of laws was conferred upon the Rev. Thomas Vincent Shannon, D. D., pastor of St. Thomas Apostle Roman Catholic church, last Monday at the annual commencement exercises of Notre Dame university, South Bend, Ind. The Rev. Dr. Shannon is editor in chief of The New World, the official organ of the Roman Catholic archdiocese of Chicago. At the same time the Rev. Joseph Cavanaugh of Washington, D. C., former president of Notre Dame, and Carleton Joseph Hayes of Columbia university received similar degrees. The address to the graduates was delivered by Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts upon the value of a system of education which includes the development of the soul by religion.

Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts of the International Reform bureau, Washington, D. C., will speak at the evening service of the Normal Park Baptist church, 70th street and Stewart avenue, today, on the topic, "Juvenile Crime and Vice Waves: How to Check Them."

Announcement was made recently at the board of Sunday schools of the Methodist Episcopal church that the Rev. Arlo Ayres Brown, D. D., superintendent of the department of teacher training, had been unanimously elected president of the University of Chattanooga, and has accepted the position.

Dr. Brown is a native of Sunbeam, Ill., and is a graduate of the high school at Kewanee, of Northwestern university, Drew Theological seminary, New Jersey, and Union Theological seminary, New York. He was for some time a missionary in Jerusalem, under the board of foreign missions, and has been an active worker in the board of Sunday schools and the centenary movement. He is the author of "Studies in Christian Living" and "The Primer of Teacher Training for the Graded Series of the International Sunday School Lessons." Dr. Brown has been a resident of Evanston, Ill., for several years.

FARM AND GARDEN

Hardy Perennials Best Feature of Landscape Garden

By Frank Ridgway.

PERMANENCY and individuality are the fundamental prerequisites that guide the home owner in planning the open air flower garden. The renter is usually satisfied with the annual flowers that can be planted in the spring to bloom and die in the same season, and if he is to have flowers the next season, all of the planting must be done over again. The man who owns his property is looking for something more permanent to plant on the lawn. Home grounds that are wisely planned usually have beds and borders of hardy perennials that live for many years and do not have to be planted every season.

Owners of country estates as well as the city property owners are realizing the importance of the perennial in working out their general landscape gardening schemes. On country estates in the prairie sections of the country where the perennial is the characteristic vegetation, this flower is considered more important than trees and shrubs. The perennial is used on the middle western prairies more and more in both the formal and informal plantings.

Some Ornate Landscapes.

Around some of the larger cities, the perennial is being used extensively in the general garden planting plans of suburban and country homes where there is plenty of room. Up and down the shores of Lake Michigan, stretching back inland for many miles, may be found some of the most elaborate landscape gardens in the United States, and in most cases the perennial flower is one of the dominating features of the grounds around the large estates where money has not been spared in beautifying the gardens and lawns.

English, Italian, and French gardens have been studied in detail to make sure that nothing is omitted in designing these ornate landscapes, and the owners themselves say that when the perennials are in full bloom they are the most illuminating and valuable feature of the whole picture. This is particularly true where the style of planting is fashioned after the English garden.

An English Garden Plan.

The English perennial garden plan, used in this country, may be adapted to home grounds in this region. The plants may be set out in one, two, three, or more units to balance terrace, Italian, sunken, and rose gardens. The accompanying plan may be regarded as one unit of the English perennial flower garden. Each one is surrounded by a dwarf hedge that can be kept trimmed low enough that it will not shade or otherwise interfere with the flowers.

This plan is designed to take up an area forty feet square—measurements taken from the outside border of the hedge. The inside border of the hedge, which is not shown in the illustration, is from two to two and a half feet from the outside plants. The plan is offered with the hope that it will serve merely as a suggestion, for it cannot always be adapted to grounds of various sizes and locations. It will, however, suggest ways of combining and harmonizing colors.

Discard Conventional Plans.

Only general suggestions can be given, for every flower gardener will have his own individual conditions to deal with. W. Robinson, author of the "English Flower Garden," in discussing the designing of the English flower garden, says that the aim should be "to make the garden a reflex of the beauty of the great garden of the world itself, and to prove that the true way to happiest design is not to have any stereotyped style for flower gardens, but that the best kind of garden should arise out of its site and condition as happily as a primrose out of a cool bank."

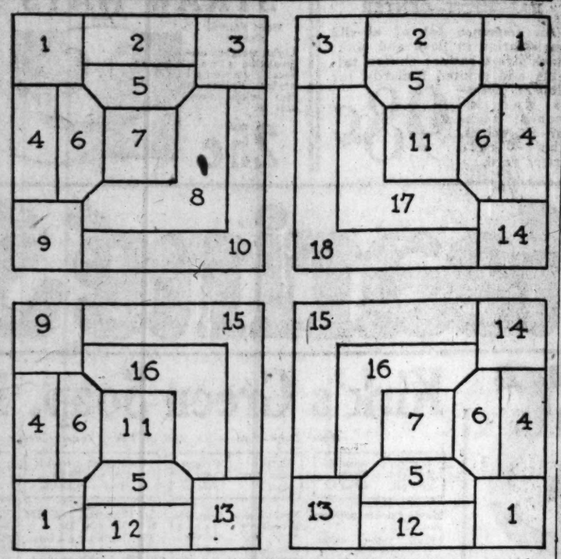
Some of the most beautiful gardens in the world are in the Isle of Madeira, where every gardener tries to make his flower garden differ from his neighbors. The most beautiful gardens in this country are often found where conventional plans have been discarded and the designer "cuts the pattern to fit the goods."

A study of the English, French, Italian, and American formal gardens shows that the principles of design are substantially the same. The chief difference is in the plants used, which gives a hint to the wise gardener that he must study the plants that do best in his own locality and in the particular kind of soil that he has to plant in.

Blossoms that Harmonize.

The following suggested list has been worked out so that the colors of the various blossoms will harmonize and blend. The number preceding the name of the perennial is the key number corresponding to the number on the illustration, and the number following the color of the flower indicates the approximate number of each plant needed in the area allotted to it:

Sweet William Newport Pink—15.
2. Columbine Chyrdantha, yellow—15.
3. Peony Charles Levesque, light pink—5.
4. Myosotis Palustris (forget me not), blue—25.
5. Shasta Daisy, white—20.
6. Veronica Longifolia, blue—20.
7. Delphinium Capri, light blue—15.
8. Phlox Mme. Paul Dutrie, delicate pink—20.
9. Peony Eugene Verdier, pink—5.
10. Iris Celeste, pale lavender—40.
11. Delphinium Belle Donna, light blue—15.



ENGLISH PERENNIAL FLOWER GARDEN—This design is made to aid beginners in selecting and arranging hardy perennial plants that send up blossoms with colors that blend and harmonize. This plan takes up forty square feet of space. A low dwarfed hedge is planted around the border, and a sodded path forms a cross between the four squares, extending all the way around to separate the hedge and flowers. Numbers correspond to names of flowers in text.

12. Columbine Coerulea, white and light blue—15.
13. Peony Marie Lemoine, cream white—5.
14. Peony Mme. Bancel, pink—5.
15. Iris Pallida Dalmatica, pale lavender—20.
Iris Pallida Odoratissima—20.
16. Phlox Bridesmaid, white, crimson center—30.
Phlox Rhynstrom—30.
17. Phlox F. Anion Buchner, white—30.
18. Iris Fairy, white, blue border and veinings—40.

This list may be used as a substitute for the one above: 1. Eupatorium Ageratoides, white. 2. Funkia Lanceolata, pale lilac. 3. Peony Festiva Maxima, white. 4. Columbine Coerulea (Rocky Mountain Columbine), white to light blue. 5. Hemoriocalis Flava, yellow. 6. Artemesia Lactiflora, creamy white. 7. Delphinium Capri, light blue. 8, 16, and 17. Phlox Thor, salmon red, blood red center. 9 and 14. Peony Charlemagne, lilac white. 10, 15, and 18. Anemone Japonica, white. 11. Delphinium Belladonna, light blue. 12. Columbine Coerulea, blue and white. 13. Peony Joan D'Arc, lilac and rose.

Flowering in June.

Perennials may be planted either in the spring or fall. Some of them can be grown from seed. The Sweet Williams grow from seed, which should be sown now. They will produce blossoms next summer and grow eighteen to twenty-four inches tall, flowering most of the summer if prevented from seeding.

Columbines, which are found growing wild in many sections of the country, grow about eighteen inches high and come in many colors, flowering in June. Peonies also blossom in June, beginning about the first of the month, and after the blossoms fall they furnish rich green foliage the rest of the summer. They are hard to grow from seed, taking three years to produce blossoming plants. The best plan is to get three year old plants and set them out in September. They will probably bloom the following year.

Myosotis, or forget-me-nots, may be raised from seed planted now.

ASTRONOMY

THE SUN AND OUR EARTH.

THE great sun spot which appeared in May has come back again, brought into appearance as the sun rotates on its axis. But the terrific eruptive forces of last month are spent, forces so vast that they were felt for days on the earth, ninety-three million miles away, and the vast storm area is writhing and tossing itself to rest.

At its height, the spot area measured 94,000 miles across. It would have required thirteen earths side by side to span it, and this does not include the enormous flame fields which surrounded the spots and which had a diameter of five or six times this figure. Yet, in spite of such enormous sizes, as judged by terrestrial standards, the spot zone embraced only a small portion of the sun's whole surface, and looked more like a little black speck on a bright disc than like the great cataclysm it was. The sun is three million miles or so in circumference, and a few scores of thousand miles on its surface means little.

Besides, our idea that such things are vast rests entirely in our own minds. It is we who are extremely small rather than the heavenly bodies that are extremely large. Compared to the space encompassed in just our solar system, the sun is the merest speck indeed, and in the great universe it is just an ordinary, or a little less than ordinary, star.

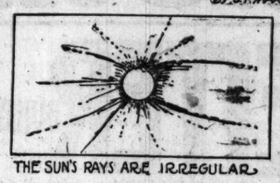
Reports indicate that the icebergs are floating much farther south in the Atlantic ocean this year than they have for eleven years past. They were floating far in 1912 when the Titanic was sunk. Eleven years before that it was also a warm summer, as many, no doubt, can remember.

The icebergs and sunspots have a closer connection than might be supposed. This year we are nearing the sunspot minimum. The sun is sending us more heat than it did a few years ago, when spots were thicker, and, consequently, the whole earth is a little warmer than ordinarily.

These unduly advanced seasons have loosed a great crop of icebergs in the Arctic ocean, and they are now floating out. Sunspots and warm weather run in cycles of eleven years, and the effect can be traced in the rings of trees, prices of grain, positions of ice, and all other things that are strongly influenced by hot or cool years.

The sun is a variable star. Its radiance is not constant in any direction for long. At times of total eclipse great streamers of light are often observed, playing out in this direction and that. Astronomers believe that all of its light and heat is emitted in something of this irregular, spoke-like fashion; otherwise it is difficult to account for such rapid and marked fluctuations in the heat we receive from so great a body.

HOW THE SUN APPEARS AT SPOT MAXIMUM AT SPOT MINIMUM
BY S. F. MAXWELL



THE SUN'S RAYS ARE IRREGULAR.

Added to the daily fluctuations are those of the spot cycles. The most noticeable is the eleven year one, but there are two more much weaker in effect, one of thirty-three years and another of eighty-eight years long.

Astronomers do not know what causes them, but they evidently involve the whole substance of the sun, and the solar system as well, for the eleven year cycle corresponds closely to the rotation period of Jupiter, the thirty-three year one to that of Saturn, and the eighty-eight year one to Uranus. These are the three greatest planets that exert effect on the sun, but the earth is too utterly small to produce any noticeable effect.

REAL ESTATE—SUB'N—NORTH.

For Sale—Beautiful North Shore.

Having a few lots in one of the most attractive locations on the North Shore, I have decided to finance building for a limited number of responsible purchasers. These lots are in a highly restricted neighborhood, surrounded by fine, substantial residences, where conditions are ideal for a delightful suburban home. Plans will be exclusive and embody individual ideas of purchasers. All buildings must be of a character fitting to the community and such as will uphold the permanency of values. If interested in a new, modern home, close to rapid transportation, with excellent schools, churches, stores, etc., with golf course and facilities for other outdoor recreation at hand, write for particulars. Confidential, and no obligation. Moderate prices: $2,000 cash, balance on deferred payments, if you do not want to build now I will sell you one of these lots and contract to finance building when you are ready. References required. For Ideal Home Attractions Park Ridge Has No Rival!

Park Ridge is unquestionably the most highly developed of Chicago's many suburbs. Situated on the ridge, it drains two ways, insuring healthful conditions. Streets beautifully laid out and splendidly kept. Large lots with abundance of shade. People well to do, educated, cultured and hospitable. And in Park Ridge I offer a few strictly modern bungalows, with sleeping porches, sun parlors, and other up to the minute features, on lots 50x187 feet, as low as $4,000, on terms to suit. PAIGE REBUILT

When Bird-Sykes says "rebuilt Paige" they do not mean merely "shined up," "tightened up," and "tuned up." Rebuilt in the Bird-Sykes shop means taking apart motor, transmission, and rear axle—measuring or testing parts to determine wear—replacing worn parts with new—rebuilding—adjusting—tuning up—repainting body — refinishing top and upholstery. That is why a Bird-Sykes rebuilt Paige satisfies the eye as a new car and its performance is the same as new.

Guaranteed by Bird-Sykes.

Every Rebuilt Paige is guaranteed by Bird-Sykes to be as represented and in perfect mechanical condition, and if anything turns out unsatisfactory within a reasonable time Bird-Sykes make it good without cost to the purchaser.

Easy Terms—No Brokerage Charge.

We do not ask our customers to pay the exorbitant rates charged by so-called automobile bankers in order to buy of us on deferred payments. You can buy a Bird-Sykes Rebuilt Paige on easy terms, paying only ordinary bank interest rates on deferred payments.
